J. F. Browne, Stafford, Stafford Co., N. H., sends for some Anti masonic literature and writes:

"A brother of mine who is now living with me has taken five degrees. He is 'seeking light'. I preached on June 11th a sermon on 'The Religion of Masonry,' which I think has produced good results and will continue so to do."

E. G. Paine, Wasioja, Dodge Co., Minn., writes:

"I want to vote the ticket of the American party this fall."

J. W. G. McCormick, Defiance, Kan., writes:

"All Kansas is infested with the hordes of Masonry. It permeates church and State, controlls education both secular and religious to a considerable extent. I might write page after page of the corrupting influences of secret societies, (and I mean all secret societies when I say 'Masonry') but 'you know too well the story of our thralldom; we are slaves to a horde of petty tyrants.'"

LESSON FOR AUGUST 13.—THE CALL OF WISDOM.

SCRIPTURE—Prov. i. 20-33. Commit 20-26. Primary Verse, 33.

20 Wisdom crieth without; she uttereth her voice in the streets:

21 She crieth in the chief place of concourse, in the opening of the gates: in the city she uttereth her words, saying,

22 How long, ye simple ones, will ye love simplicity? and the scorners delight in their scorning, and fools hate knowledge?

23 Turn you at my reproof: behold, I will pour out my Spirit upon you, I will make known my words unto you.

24 Because I have called, and ye refused: I have stretched out my hand, and no man regarded;

25 But ye have set at nought all my counsel, and would none of my reproof:

26 I also will laugh at your calamity; I will mock when your fear cometh;

27 When your fear cometh as desolation, and your destruction cometh as a whirlwind; when distress and anguish cometh upon you.

28 Then shall they call upon me, but I will not answer; they shall seek me early, but they shall not find me:

29 For that they hated knowledge, and did not choose the fear of the Lord:

30 They would none of my counsel: they despised all my reproof.

31 Therefore shall they eat of the fruit of their own way, and be filled with their own devices.

32 For the turning away of the simple shall slay them, and the prosperity of fools shall destroy them.

33 But whoso hearkeneth unto me shall dwell safely, and shall be quiet from fear of evil.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Behold I stand at the door and knock; if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me."—Rev. iii. 20.

TOPIC.—"To-day, if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts."—Heb. iii. 15.

There is need that Wisdom should lift up her voice and cry, for the world is gone astray. "Broad is the road that leads to death, and many there be which go in thereat." Matt. 7:13; 20:16; Luke 13:23-24; John 15:19; Acts 14:22; Gal. 1:10; Jas. 4:4; 1 Pet. 4:18.

Men become either better or worse. There is no stationary place for good or evil. Either one will leave off his apathy and become active for God or become active against him. But the rule is for one to be "simple" to-day, "a scorner" to-morrow, and then haters of knowledge for all time. Jer. 7:26; 16:12; Matt. 12:43-45; John 5:14; 2 Tim. 3:13; 1 Pet. 2:20-22.

He who mocks at religion crowns himself with folly's cap and bells; for he makes merry at the rope that is thrown to him for rescue, and at the ladder which is raised for his escape. Never is a jester so much of a fool as when he mocks at the remedy that will save him from eternal death. Job 28:28; Ps. 14:1; Prov. 1:7; 19:1-3; 18:2; Eccl. 4:5; Jer. 4:22; 17:11; Luke 12:20-21; 24:25; Eph. 5:15.

It is men's choice and not God's will that consigns them to everlasting woe. "This is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil." 2 Chr. 36:15-16; Ps. 81:10-14; Jer. 6:16; 25:4-7; Matt. 22:2-3; 23:37; John 3:19; 5:40; 12:37-41.—*National S. The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, AUGUST 3, 1876.

THE SABBATH AT THE CENTENNIAL.—Our readers are aware that the most vigorous exertions were made to induce the Centennial Commission to reverse their decision and open the National Exhibition on the Sabbath.

Abbott of the Boston infidel Index was on hand, backed by the representatives of infidel sentiments from all parts of the country and a petition brought in on a reel, said to contain above 60,000 signatures, was lifted on the table before the Commissioners. After full discussion, the Commissioners voted to adhere to their former resolution to keep the exhibition closed by a majority of 30 to 9!

So the Americans still have a Sabbath, and we are, according to article first of our platform: "A Christian and not a heathen nation."

SUPREME COURT DECISION ON LIQUOR CLUBS.—During the last year the sellers of liquor in Wheaton, Illinois, have been actively prosecuted, and fined in sums amounting in the aggregate to several hundred dollars. The cases were appealed to the Circuit and Supreme Courts. The latter has just rendered its decision which is very able, and decided, and is:—

That a club or society formed and carried on for the purpose of getting liquor by drinks on tickets, punched once for each drink, under pretence of a stock company, is a "shift or device" for evading the law against dramselling. This decision sustains, of course, all the cases prosecuted successfully in the lower courts. This has occasioned great rejoicing among the temperance people of Wheaton; and all the clubs are closed up, and agree to sell no more.

Such laws, and much more the execution of them, are a glory of our country. No despotic country has, or can have and execute such laws.

THE FAMILY RELATIONS.—Rev. John O. Sherwin of Rice Lake, Wisconsin, has issued a small volume (price $1) of sermons of about a hundred pages, on the "FAMILY RELATIONS." The book is designed and well adapted to be given to new married couples, as they start from the wedding on their voyage of life.

The writer handles themes as delicate, difficult and profoundly important in themselves, with an agreeable candor and Scriptural soundness which makes the volume far more attractive than its unostentatious title would seem to promise. And while the book is replete with sound sense and Scriptural ideas of the duties of husband, wife and children, there is much sound philosophy woven into the discussion enlivened by the best thoughts and paintings of Milton, Cowper and other poets, who wrote when and where the word of God was taken as the law of domestic life.

Mr. Sherwin has been in the service of pioneer churches in northern Wisconsin. But if any one buys the book for the purpose of befriending a deserving writer he will soon forget that motive in his real interest in the work.

Copies may be obtained by writing to Rev. John O. Sherwin, Rice Lake, Wis., or to Rev. Thos. Barland of Eau Claire, Wis., to whom the book is dedicated. The volume is well got up by the Lakeside Printing Company, Chicago.

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S MASONIC CHARITY.

We gave Mr. Ronayne's statement that the Chicago Masonic relief committee of which he was a member, received some $90,000, of which it disbursed in Masonic charity only about $30,000, disposing of the remaining $60,000 among themselves and favorites. As we gave his statement from memory, we put it in round numbers as above. Mr. Ronayne claimed to read the sums from the book; and invited scrutiny and correction from the Masons present, if he erred. We have no doubt of the truth of Mr. Ronayne's statement. When he returns, (he is absent from the city) we will call his attention to the Tribune's contradiction of his facts.

Meantime let us scrutinize the Tribune's facts and figures. It gives:

DISBURSEMENT 1st. For the relief of applicants to Chicago lodges, EXPENSES OF THE BOARD OF RELIEF, and donations to the Chicago Masonic Relief Board, $67, 414.04.

DISBURSEMENT 2nd. Returned to donors $21,825. 89.

DISBURSEMENT 3rd. Retained to meet the expenses of printing the Report of the Board $1,394.57.

Our readers will note in No. 1. that sums alloted for the relief, expenses of the Board, and sums given to another Masonic Board are all lumped together! This is no contradiction of Ronayne's statement since the expenses of the Board may include presents to their friends. Men capable of reporting charity funds disbursed, with "expenses" for coffee and cigars, etc., are certainly capable of the practices which such dishonest reports ordinarily conceal.

2nd. Twenty thousand dollars and odd "returned to donors!" What donors? Those living "all over the world" where the Tribune says the money came from?

3d. Above one thousand dollars not paid but "retained" for printing the report. etc., and the whole vouched for by Masonic officials, "met in the Temple in Chicago." But read the Tribune's account. We give it from that paper July 26th, thus: We think it can scarcely be matched:—

The amount received from the Masonic lodges all over the world for the relief of the brethren burned out by the Chicago fire of 1871, including supplies valued at $7,545.44, was $90,634.50, and it was disbursed thus: For the relief of applicants allotted to Chicago lodges, expenses of the Board of Relief, and donation to the Chicago Masonic Relief Board, $67,414.04; returned to donors, $21,825.89; retained to meet the expense of printing the report of the Board, $1,394.57.

A Commission, consisting of S. C. Perkins, Grand Master of Pennsylvania; C. F. Stansbury, Grand Master of the District of Columbia; and O. P. Waters, Grand Master of Iowa, met in the Temple in Chicago, Sept. 18th and 19th, 1872, and made a careful examination of all the books, papers, and vouchers of the Board, and of the system which had been adopted for the administration of the fund."

And this auditing Committee made up of Grand Master Masons, like our Grand Master Harmon G. Reynolds, doubtless, report from the recesses of the Chicago Temple that —"The books of the Treasurer were examined and compared with the vouchers by us, and found to be correct in every particular, and kept with a degree of accuracy and fullness of detail which cannot but be highly commended."

We are sorry that a paper, once the leading and most influential press in the north-west, should have sunk to be the vindicator and endorser of transactions like the above.

—Since the above was put in type a complete answer to the charge of the Tribune has been received from Mr. Ronayne, and may be read on the fourth page. It proves from the printed Masonic reports that the Tribune has fallen into an evil and Masonic practice, to wit, that which it charges upon the Cynosure, of "falsifying facts." Its statement is certainly intended to conceal the swindling operations of the lodge under the fine name of charity.

POISONING WELLS.

Middlebury College, Vt., where I was graduated by Dr. Bates in 1832, forty-four years ago, has a record second to no institution of its age; and we were arranging to send two young men to the Junior class there, who wished to see the East. We opened The Undergraduate, the College paper for July, and are chagrined to find that, as in Yale, the old open societies (Philomathesian and Philadelphian) are both eaten out and destroyed by the secret college cancers. The Undergraduate editors say:

"Years ago, there existed in College two powerful Literary Societies; the Philadelphian and Philomathesian. Since the advent of secret societies, they have gradually been supplanted, until now, nothing remains to tell of their past but names."

We agree with the very sensible editorial in its lament for the fall of these time-honored societies. The Philomathesian Library, once superior to that of the College, is now dwindled to a single alcove, while the Philadelphian Society is sunk lower still. Can it be possible that the people of Vermont will tolerate the loathsome literary vermin, so denounced by such men as Edward Everett, John Quincy Adams and their peers, that they skulked into Cimmerian darkness and went out? Will the voters of the only State whose electoral college went solid for William Wirt in 1831, sustain a College which suffers their sons to be drilled and fitted for the Masonic lodge, by its bastard progeny, the miscalled "Greek fraternities?" Above all, will the ministers and churches of Vermont, whose the college was, endure it, that idolatry should be administered in homeopathic doses in these little College lodges: that Asiatic and African heathenism whose high priests are sneaks, should crop out in that College which sent the sainted Fisk and Parsons to die on the sands of Palestine, contending with just such religions as these secret societies practice and teach? In Dr. Hitchcock's last book, "Reminiscences of Amherst College," there are letters from nine College Presidents, eight of which unequivocally condemn College secret societies, and we predict that the returning good sense of New England will yet suppress hese pests.

THE NATIONAL REFORM CONVENTION IN PHILADELPHIA.

At the late Centennial Convention of the National Reform Association Rev. J. A. Todd, D. D., of Tarrytown, N. Y., in an address upon "The need of a more distinct expression of the nation's attitude in regard to Christianity," referred to a resolution from the German politicians of New York, sent to the Cincinnati Republican Convention to be incorporated in its platform as follows:

"No recognition of any system of worship by the State or Federal Government; Sunday being recognized by the individual and not in the Constitution; of the United States, all legislation seeking to abridge the personal rights of citizens with respect of its observance is unconstitutional."

Dr. Todd well remarked that when the observance of Sabbath becomes a subject of debate in political conventions it is high time to put a clause in the Constitution which would settle the question and prevent its future discussion. In concluding he summed up his argument in the following clear and forcible propositions:

"The need, therefore, of a more distinct expression of the nation's attitude in regard to Christianity, arises—First. From the danger to which the most vital interests of the country are exposed on account of the assaults made upon them, partly by unprincipled men, and partly by men who are unbalanced, wild and reckless—interests embracing all that made us what we are as a nation, and all that has given an impulse to our progress in the path of greatness and glory down to this Centennial year.

Second. From the absence of a clear consistency or agreement between the letter and spirit of our State and national legislation in regard to questions growing out of the religious and moral habits of the people, ever since the settlement of the country and the letter and spirit of the Constitution upon which that legislation must necessarily rest.

Third. From the fact that this apparent technical discrepancy between the law and the Constitution is now actually employed, and has been for years past, as the basis of an organized and persistent attempt to abolish the Christian Sabbath as a legalized public institution; to expel the Bible from our public schools and to make our whole political system a mere dry mechanical and Godless concern, such as might be expected from a nation of atheists or heathens."

The main object of the Convention is set forth in these concluding sections of the resolutions adopted;

"Resolved, That with a long line of honored witnesses we deplore the religious defect of our National Constitution. We plainly recognize the omission from it of all suitable acknowledgement of God, Jesus Christ and our Lord and the Bible, as a dishonor done to him in whose hand the nations are but as the drop of a bucket, and, therefore, as a source of untold evil to the nation itself.

Resolved, That the legitimate influence of this omission from our fundamental law of any expression or authentication of the connection of our government with Christianity has been to sever that connection; and the persistent demand now made, on the basis of our Constitution, to banish the Bible from our schools, blot out our Sabbath laws, and utterly dechristianize our government should constrain every friend of our Christian civil institutions to labor for a religious amendment to the Constitution as an undeniable constitutional basis for Christian education, laws against the desecration of the Sabbath, and every other similar feature of the nation's life.

Resolved, That we discern in the vital public questions now pressing for solution the one all-important issue between a secular or Godless government and a Christian government; and we are fully convinced that we cannot remain half one and half the other, Christian in many parts of our laws and administration, and secular in our National written Constitution. We must harmonize our National Constitution with the Christian institutions of our government or these must become as destitute of Christian character as that instrument itself.

Resolved, That we pledge ourselves anew, to God and to each other, to labor in this patriotic and glorious cause, amid discouragement and unpopularity, if need be, assured that in answer to earnest prayer and devoted effort, our own beloved nation will before long solve the problem of this opening century of its independence in becoming truly and avowedly a kingdom of our Lord and his Christ."

—The General Agent is attending the State Convention at Fairmount, Ind., this week. He reports that Dr. S. L. Cook of Albion is filling appointments acceptably in various localities; also Bro. J. M. Fry of Ligonier, is speaking for the truth against the lodge in school-house meetings in the locality.

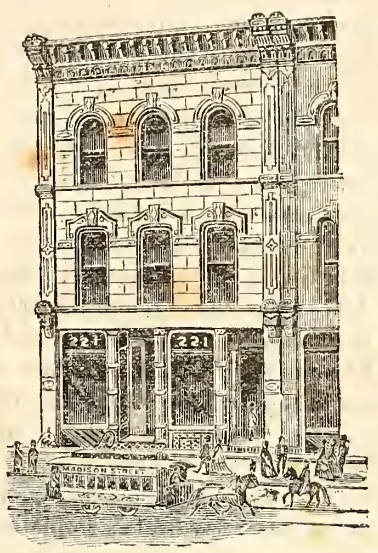
—The Illinois Agent, after leaving the promising fields of southern Illinois came northward to Altamont in Effingham county, where he spoke on the evening of July 25th. On the 26th and 27th he was at Cerro Gordo in Piatt county, and from thence he went to Streator to assist Mr. Ronayne for three evenings during the first part of the present week.

—The Missouri friends have decided to hold a State Convention on the 30th of August and have invited the General Agent to give them half a month's work preceding. Bro. Needles with his co-laborers, Stewart and Cooper, will visit the northwestern towns of the State and the co-operation of Elder W. M. Love of Baker, St. Clair Co., and the numerous friends in that locality should be enlisted.

—The American Freeman notices a meeting of the citizens of Harrison township, Mercer Co., Mo., at Goshen church, which was addressed by Rev. E. G. Cooper, and delegates were appointed to the county convention to be held at Princeton, Aug. 19th.

—The Ohio State Convention will probably be postponed to a later date than Aug. 23. Various and good reasons are urged, and the officers of the State Association will soon report.

A Remarkable Statement.—The August number of the Reformed Presbyterian and Covenanter of Pittsburgh, contains a letter from one of the zealous workers of that church in Selma, Alabama, from which we take the following striking statement to encourage our friends:



"In our work of National Reform here we have met with but little opposition, and that mainly from Germans and sceptics. Most all the professing Christians, white and colored, heartily favor the movement.

We have of late been making a steady and successful march against secret societies. They are not very numerous here among the colored people, but we want to kill the seed, and then there will be no crop. A great many of the whites either are or have been members of secret orders. I was really surprised to learn that there are so many who have become disgusted and have left them. Some of the leading men of this city that were once prominent Freemasons, have forsaken the lodges, and pronounce Masonry a humbug.

We have been scattering Antimasonic tracts over our city like autumn leaves, and we trust they will not be without effect. We received through the kindness of Mr. Hanna, of Pittsburgh, a number of tracts and five copies of the Cynosure, which are being read by some of our young men. Oh, there is room for reform in this part of the country.

We need a number of temperance tracts to scatter around in this place. Even some of the little children are addicted to the use of the intoxicating beverage. Oh that something might be done to arrest the progress of this evil and save our young men! We are grieved when we look at the condition of the people, and see so few laborers among them. That gigantic monster, rum, is destroying the youth of our city in a most alarming manner. And many who have gone out as pretended workers have done so from sinister and selfish motives. We fear that few have gone out with their hearts filled with an earnest desire to do the greatest good for the people. We need more genuine Christian-hearted workers, who count not their own lives dear for the sake of a wretched and forlorn people. Will the church be unceasing in her prayers to the Lord of the harvest that he will send forth laborers into his harvest?"

The Arrow and the Song.

I shot an arrow into the air,
It fell to the earth, I knew not where;
For, so swiftly it flew, the sight
Could not follow it in its flight.

I breathed a song into the air,
It fell to the earth, I knew not where;
For who has sight so keen and strong
That it can follow the flight of the song?

Long, long afterward, in an oak
I found the arrow, still unbroke;
And the song, from beginning to end,
I found again in the heart of a friend.

—Longfellow.

To the Centennial via. Peoria. Chicago, Montreal and Portland.

Peoria, Ill., July 12, 1876.

In this Centennial year our minds naturally revert to the past; and so, as we are about to leave this city for an absence of some weeks, with the Centennial Exhibition as our goal, we may perhaps be pardoned for letting imagination for a few moments have sway, while we compare the Peoria of 1876, with the Peoria of 1776.

Stretched along the bosom of its placid lake and the Illinois river, and extending back to and beyond the bluffs that rise at a distance of a few hundred feet and encircle the low land like a rampart, lies the present city of over 33,000 inhabitants. All the appliances and conveniences of modern civilization are here enjoyed. It is abundantly supplied with water, coal, gas, street cars, bridges, railroads, grain elevators and banks, and the hum and whiz of machine shops and foundries, and the bustle of merchandise and trade of all descriptions enliven its business streets. Its normal, high and graded schools furnish ample means of education for children of all classes. Churches lift up their spires heavenward in all directions, and among the Christian and Sunday school workers are found some of the most earnest and noted in our land. It is true that many a hard battle must be fought and victory won, before righteousness is fully established, for there are also distilleries and saloons, dark places, secret places and a prison, and also a disposition to ignore God on the part of some high in influence and position. Even our brilliant orator with the laurels gained at the Republican Convention fresh upon his brow, failed in his Fourth of July oration to us, to acknowledge the God of his fathers,—the God who has fought all our battles,—the God whose aid Washington and Lincoln and the people invoked, when the dark clouds of disaster and ruin threatenened our destruction,—the God whose righteous laws received and obeyed, though imperfectly, has made us a people capable of self-government. Strange that as he glanced adown the century he did not discern the fiery cloudy pillar that has thus far safely guided us on. Though he glorifies "the people" instead of God, would he consent to be governed himself by any but a Christian people? Would he bow his neck to "the people" were that people the idolatrous red savages, the reverberations of whose distant war whoops have scarcely died upon the Western breezes,—telling the sad tale of our fallen heroes. It makes a vast difference whether "the people" are infidels like those who perpetrated the horrors of the French revolution—half civilized—barbarous or savage, or those who have inherited at least the ideas and sentiments derived from a Christian ancestry. But we are perhaps improperly digressing. Let us look back into the past.

The hum of civilization gradually ceases; over thirty-three thousand heart breaths are stilled,—houses, bridges, and improvements of all kinds sink into the abyss of the past. Solitude asserts its sway. The city has become a wilderness and the fruitful field a waste. Here the tall prairie grass waves, and there the close underbrush furnishes a harbor for the fur-coated animals. But human life is not altogether extinct. Aside from the French trader, the Indian wigwams cluster around the lake and their bark canoes float upon its waters. The bluffs at times witness their senseless religious rites and ceremonies, and in the mounds they leave their bones and a few useless implements, all they have except their names to bequeath to posterity after perhaps centuries of existence. The fierce energies of their natures find vent in wars of so atrocious and bloody a nature that we gladly draw the veil, and at the sound of the shrill whistle of the locomotive return to the 19th century. We are glad to find ourselves in a steam car with a comfortable sleeping berth provided, so time may be saved and distance gained while we ourselves are in dreamland. By the early light of morn we are flitting past fruitful fields teeming with luxurious vegetation, through flourishing villages, past fine institutions of learning, soon reach the great metropolis of our State, itself one of the many wonders of this new world. By 9 o'clock we are on board the Michigan Central cars, rounding at first the southern extremity of Lake Michigan and then taking an easterly direction across the State to Detroit. The air is fresh and invigorating and on the posts of the long piers that run out into the lake sit the patient fishermen, enveloped in thick fog, holding their long rods over the water; the tableau presents no change and we wonder how long they have to sit in that lonely, patient attitude waiting for the bait to take. After leaving the lake the heat becomes intense, and though each one has a luxurious chair turning on a pivot, and our car is finely furnished, this hardly compensates for the smoke, dust, and cinders that are almost suffocating. Nature comes to our aid. A soporific effect seems to be induced to which one after another succumbs until the heads within are bowing and nodding as gracefully as the wild lilies and flowers without. We rouse ourselves to catch such glimpses as railroad travel affords of the flourishing towns through which we pass. Niles, Kalamazoo, Jackson, Ann Arbor, etc., pass in review and we are satisfied that we are in a fine and rapidly improving part of the country. At Detroit junction three miles from the city, we change cars for the Grand Trunk railway, and in a few hours are at Sarnia in the Queen's dominion, where our trunks undergo inspection, which, thanks to our civilized conductor, proved no very harrowing affair. At five in the morning we are at Toronto, a fine city of from 70,000 to 100,000 inhabitants. Our route now lies along the placid waters of Lake Ontario. At times we have an uninterrupted view, and then it is intercepted by green fields, cultivated patches, evergreen woods, pastures full of stumps where kine and sometimes sheep luxuriate, while ever and anon the shrill whistle of the locomotive announces our approach to some thriving town, where the neatness and taste displayed in the general appearance of things, speaks well for the intelligence and thrift of the inhabitants. Some one has written "Thank God for the mountains!" We have occasion on this sultry day to thank him over and over again for the lakes, these reservoirs of coolness, whose refreshing breezes steal gently into our closely packed quarters and make even pleasant what otherwise would be unendurable. In the afternoon the St. Lawrence comes in sight and we take occasional peeps into the State of New York. At nine o'clock we reach Montreal and are duly prepared after our two night's experience on the cars to appreciate the cool and roomy apartments provided. We are so much pleased with this city that we wish to prolong our stay. The air is fine, the streets paved and cleanly. Many fine buildings with glittering roofs and towers adorn it, among which the noted Cathedral stands pre-eminent. A ride on and around the mountain back of the city gives a splendid view of it and its environs. At 2:50 P. M. we are on our way again. The St. Lawrence is crossed on the famous Victoria bridge, a covered one built entirely of iron and as close and dark as a tunnel. It takes seven minutes to pass through it. Just before reaching it a magnificent view of the city presents itself. It is on an eminence and its roofs, spires and towers, glitter in sunlight. In an instant it vanishes and we are in perfect darkness. It seems like catching a glimpse of the New Jerusalem and then going into the outer darkness. We now pass through a pleasant country inhabited principally by the French. The land is divided into very small lots, and the houses have a foreign aspect. We reach Sherbrook a fine town of nine thousand inhabitants about dusk, and at nine are at Island Pond where we propose to spend the Sabbath.

The Social Quicksand.

Victor Hugo gives the following graphic description: "It sometimes happens on certain coasts of Brittany or Scotland, that a man, traveler or fisherman, walking on the beach at low tide, far from the bank, suddenly notices that for several minutes he has been walking with some difficulty. The strand beneath his feet is like pitch; his soles stick to it; it is sand no longer—it is glue.

"The beach is perfectly dry, but at every step he takes, as soon as he lifts his foot, the print which it leaves fills with water. The eye, however, has noticed no change; the immense strand is smooth and tranquil; all the sand has the same appearance; nothing distinguishes the surface which is solid from that which is no longer so; the joyous little cloud of sand-fleas continue to leap tumultuously over the wayfarer's feet. The man pursues his way, goes forward, inclines to the land, endeavors to get nearer the upland. He is not anxious. Anxious about what? Only he feels some how as if the weight of his feet increases with every step he takes. Suddenly he sinks in.

"He sinks in two or three inches. Decidedly he is not on the right road; he stops to take his bearings. All at once he looks at his feet. His feet have disappeared. The sand covers them. He draws his feet out of the sand; he will retrace his steps; he turns back; he sinks in deeper. The sand comes up to his ankles; he pulls himself out and throws himself to the left; the sand is half-leg deep. He throws himself to the right the sand comes up to his shins. Then he recognizes with unspeakable terror that he is caught in the quicksand, and that he has beneath him the fearful medium in which man can no more walk than the fish can swim He throws away his load, lightens himself like a ship in distress; it is already too late; the sand is above his knees. He calls, he waves his hat or his handkerchief; the sand gains on him more and more. If the beach is deserted, if the land is too far off, if there is no help in sight, it is all over.

"He is condemned to that appalling burial, long, infallible, implacable, impossible to slacken or to hasten, which endures for hours, which seizes you erect, free and in full health, which draws you by the feet, which at every effort that you attempt, at every shout you utter, drags you a little deeper, sinking you slowly into the earth while you look upon the horizon, the sails of the ships upon the sea, the birds flying and singing, the sunshine and the sky. The victim attempts to sit down, to lie down, to creep; every movement he makes inters him; he straightens up, he sinks in; he feels that he is being swallowed. He howls, implores, cries to the clouds, despairs.

"Behold him waist-deep in the sand. The sand reaches his breast; he is now only a bust. He raises his arm, utters furious groans, clutches the beach with his nails, would hold by that straw, leans upon his elbows to pull himself out his soft sheath, sobs frenziedly; the sand rises. The sand reaches his shoulders; the sand reaches his neck; the face alone is visible now. The mouth cries, the sand fills it; silence. The eyes still gaze, the sand shuts them; night. Now the forehead decreases, a little hair flutters above the sand; a hand comes to the surface of the beach, moves, and shakes, and disappears. It is the earth drowning man. The earth filled with the ocean becomes a trap. It presents itself like a plain and opens like a wave."

Could anything more graphically describe the progress of a young man, from the first cup of wine to the last?

The New Liberty Bell.

A few years ago Henry Seybert, a gentleman of wealth and culture in the city of Philadelphia, proposed to the city authorities to furnish a bell for Independence Hall, which should fitly replace the old Liberty bell that proclaimed the signing of the Declaration of Independence on July fourth, 1776. For some reason the matter rested until it was decided to hold the Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia. The offer was then renewed and accepted by the city authorities.

Mr. Lossing gives the following interesting description of the old "Liberty Bell:" "I ascended to the steeple where hangs, in silent grandeur, the 'Liberty Bell.' It is four feet in diameter at the lip, and three inches thick at the heaviest part. Its tone is destroyed by a crack, which extends from the lip to the crown, passing directly through the names of the persons who cast it. An attempt was made to restore the tone by sawing the crack wider, but without success; the melody of the 'glory-breathed tone' that thrilled the hearts of the people on the birth-day of the nation could not be re-awakened. The history of the bell is interesting. In 1752 a bell for the State-house was imported from England. On the first trial ringing after its arrival it was cracked. It was re-cast by Pass & Stow, of Philadelphia, in 1753, under the direction of Isaac Norris, Esq., the then speaker of the colonial assembly. And that is the bell, 'the greatest in English America,' which now hangs in the old State-house steeple, and claims our reverence. Upon fillets around its crown, cast there twenty-three years before the Continental Congress met in the State-house, are the words of Holy Writ, 'Proclaim liberty throughout all the land, unto all the inhabitants thereof.' (Leviticus xxv. 10.) Beneath that very bell the representatives of the thirteen colonies 'proclaimed liberty.' Ay, and when the debates were ended, and the result was announced on the 4th of July, 1776, the iron tongue of that very bell first 'proclaimed liberty throughout all the land, unto all the inhabitants thereof,' by ringing out the joyful annunciation for more than two hours."

At the time the American forces were compelled to evacuate Philadelphia in 1777, this bell was removed to Allentown to prevent it from falling into the hands of the English. At the close of the Revolution it was returned to Philadelphia and continued in constant use until 1828, when it was replaced. The bell was broken in ringing for a fire. Many years after it was taken down and occupied a place among the relics in Independence Hall. In 1872 it was placed where it now is in the vestibule of the State-house upon its original timbers.

One thing is noticeable about the bell; it was really of American manufacture, the English bell having proved a failure. So an American bell proclaimed American liberty.

Mr. Seybert conceived the idea of placing a bell in the tower of the old State-house which in size and composition should fitly symbolize the nation and its progress for the last hundred years. His plan was to make the bell of 13,000 pounds weight, counting a thousand pounds for each of the old thirteen colonies. Then it was to represent in its composition the two great struggles of the nation; the war of the Revolution, and the war of the Rebellion. When the plans were matured, Mr. Seybert contracted with Meneely & Kimberly, bell founders of Troy, N. Y., to cast the bell and place it in the tower of Independence Hall. The Government being apprized of the plans of Mr. Seybert, four bronze cannon were furnished to carry out his ideas. Two guns, one Union, and the other Confederate, that had seen service at Gettysburg, were selected. The other guns were a British field piece captured at the capitulation of Burgoyne at Saratoga, Oct. 13, 1777, and a piece used by the patriot army under Gates, in a battle of Bemis Heights, and the final struggle with the British army at Saratoga. The mingling of these bronze weapons of war in a new liberty bell is truly poetic, and inspiring to the popular heart. To carry the Centennial symbolism further, but one hundred pounds of each cannon were used, the remaining metal representing the mineral wealth and growing industries of the nation, the copper being taken pure from the shores of Lake Superior, to be mingled with the best of tin, fresh from the mines.

After the most careful preparation the bell was cast on Saturday evening, April 22d, in the presence of about one hundred ladies and gentlemen who solicited the privilege of being present on the occasion. A large pit was dug in the floor of the foundry, and the immense moulds lowered into it by a derrick. A spout was laid from the furnace to the crown of the mould into which the metal was to be poured. When all was ready the metal was released and ran glowingly and scintillatingly into the mould. It was a supreme moment and every one present felt the inspiration.

After the bell was cast it was allowed to lie buried in the ground for a week, to cool slowly and thoroughly anneal the metal. Then it was raised from the pit, with great effort with an enormous derrick, and it was found to be sound and perfect to the great joy of all. Few appreciate the difficulty of casting a bell containing so great a mass of metal. The difficulty and danger of accident increases as the size increases. But the new liberty bell fulfilled the fondest hopes of its founders. Men were immediately set to work to polish the immense surface until it shone with a luster, which fitly indicates the purity and richness of the metal. Upon entering the work-shop the bell bursts upon the sight in all its grand proportions and bright beauty. Its inscriptions shine out like letters of gold. They are put on with the greatest care and with a fine sense of true proportion.

Encircling the crown are the words of Holy Writ: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good-will toward men." On the waist, one side, is the following: "Presented to the city of Philadelphia, July 4th, 1876, for the belfry of Independence Hall, by a citizen." Underneath are the names, "Meneely & Kemberly, founders, Troy, N. Y."

On the waist, opposite side, is "1876," and beneath the coat of arms of the United States, an eagle with thirteen stars and the motto, E pluribus unum. The coat of arms is set in a shield of chased work, and is a beautiful specimen of art.

Encircling the mouth is the inscription from the old liberty bell "Proclaim liberty throughout all the land, unto all the inhabitants thereof." Leviticus xxv. 10. Just above this inscription is a circle of thirty-eight stars representing the States.

The bell is seven feet in perpendicular height, seven feet and a half in diameter at the mouth, and twenty-three and a half in circumference. At the sound bow the thickness is seven inches. Its proportions are strikingly beautiful. All in all it is a great triumph of the founder's art, and will be one of the most eminent examples of American skill and taste at Philadelphia. Larger bell have been made in the Old World, but this undoubtedly the finest bells in America.—Troy Whig.

Since the above was first published Mr. Seybert has had the great bell examined by experts, who give it as their opinion that it is not cast in the proper shape and that the tone is not of such volume and quality as should be had from a bell of such size. Mr. Seybert will have it recast if this be true, as his contract calls for a bell perfect in every respect.

Home and Farm.

Watering Trees.—As a general rule, watering young trees in summer does more harm than good, by crusting the surface without reaching the roots; and even if the roots are reached, the relief is only temporary, unless the watering is regularly repeated. There is a great want of appreciation of the amount of water required for trees by those who apply this remedy. A young tree, four or five feet high, if growing well, soon throws out roots several feet on each side. If these roots are only three feet long, the circle of roots will be six feet in diameter, and at a depth of only one foot there would be no less than twenty-seven cubic feet of earth to saturate with water, requiring for one-fourth the bulk nearly one hogshead for a single watering. It is true that a young tree just set out may have had its roots cut much shorter, but as new ones are to be quickly thrown out into the soil as it commences its growth, a narrow watering will do but little good. Thorough mulching may answer better, or if water is used pour it into a small deep hole by the side of the tree.

Raising Tomatoes.—Burr tells us that the French mode of raising tomatoes is as follows: "As soon as a cluster of flowers is visible they top the stem down to the cluster, so that the flowers terminate the stem. The effect is that the sap is immediately impelled into the two buds next below the cluster, which soon push strongly and produce another cluster of flowers each. When these are visible, the branch to which they belong is also topped down to the level; and this is done five times successively. By this means the plants become stout, dwarf bushes, not above eighteen inches high. In order to prevent their falling over, sticks or strings are stretched hoizontally along the rows so as to keep the plants erect. In addition to this, all laterals that have no flowers, and after the fifth topping, all laterals whatever, are nipped off. In this way the ripe sap is directed into the fruit, which acquires a beauty, size and excellence unattainable by other means."—Boston Globe.

Taking it Coolly.

One of the most disagreeable companions on a hot summer's day is a hot stove, and yet how many women who read this article feel compelled to spend many hours out of every twenty-four with this black, silent, fiery kitchen partner. Is there no escape? Suppose the kitchen door opens on an ample porch, with a roof over it and a honeysuckle in front of it, or a grape-vine, or a hop-vine, or morning glories, or flowering beans clambering up a trellis and shutting out the ardent rays of the sun. What a nice place that would be for carrying on the various activities of a summer's morning. One could wash there, spread the ironing table beneath the growing grapes, set the dinner table there, shell peas, stone cherries, and do a thousand things in the open air while keeping an eye on all that goes on in the kitchen. If there is but a step from the house to the ground, two or three large trees just at the door are better even than a porch. We lived in such a kitchen once, and spent all the pleasant summer days in the open air. The cradle had a little awning over it, there was no clattering of shoes on the grassy sod beneath, no slop on the floor, no furnace heats, nothing but rural peace and quiet shade.

It does not occur to a great many women that there is any better or easier way of doing than the one to which they have become accustomed. The tendency of housework is to settle into a fixed routine and wear deep ruts, to go out of which is no easy matter. But it is not a bad plan to start inquiries in every department of domestic industry, and try experiments until one finds out the easiest way of accomplishing the matter in hand. In the winter, of course the nearer the ironing and baking table is to the stove the fewer steps will be required, but this is not the first consideration in summer, and if one will have a high chair to sit in while ironing or baking on a low table, the distance from the stove will not amount to much. Beside, children of five and six years old can be taught to take steps.

There is another matter not very well understood by American cooks. We use entirely too much fuel, we cook by too hot a fire, we eat too much hot food, we boil our soups and our vegetables furiously, when all we want is simply to raise the temperature of the liquid in question to 212 degrees, which can be done with a moderate fire and no inconsiderable saving of stovelining, coal, and physical discomfort. It is calculated that one-third of the power generated in any machine is consumed in overcoming the friction and one great problem with machinists is to reduce the friction to minimum. Let us apply this problem to housekeeping, and begin by studying all the ways in which we can keep cool.—Ex.

THE AMERICAN PLATFORM AND NOMINATIONS FOR 1876.

FOR PRESIDENT
James B. Walker,
of Illinois.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT
Donald Kirkpatrick,
of New York.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage, is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. The charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discountenanced.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency, and a return to specie payment as soon as practicable.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And finally we demand for the Americanpeople the abolition of the Electoral Colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

A State Convention is called to meet August 16th and 17th in Winchester, Jefferson Co., Kansas, to nominate a State electorial ticket and consider other important measures in connection with the State Association.

—The American Freeman announces the following county meetings. Northwestern Missouri is alive to the work of the time:

The American Reform Party will hold county Conventions, beginning each day at ten o'clock a. m., at the following times and places; for the purpose of nominating candidates for the several county offices. Public lectures will be given at each convention:

Albany, Gentry county, August —,1876.

Bethany, Harrison county, Tuesdap, August the 15th.

Princeton, Mercer county, Saturday, August the 19th.

SPRINGERTON, Ill., July 7, 1876.

Times are ominous, if not perilous. The Republicans divided, as I regard, into four factions. The best men of this government are going respectively for Walker, Smith, Adams and Hayes for President. While the Democratic party has split perhaps half of herself into the Indiana greenback-grange-lodge swindle. Thus I am impressed that there is danger of Cooper or Tilden's election. I believe that the Walker, Smith and Adams parties all combined could make a President. "United we stand, divided we fall," or rather fail for the present. There is but trifling, if any difference in our principles. Brothers let us unite immediately. God bless the nation. JAS. SPRINGER.

MONTMORENCI, Ind.

I receeived your Cynosure tracts No. 25, "The American Party," soon distributed them; want more. They're just the thing needed. I shall vote the ticket if it is the only vote cast, just because it's right and meets fairly and squarely the real issue of the day. The other parties dodge around them and try to make issues where there are none. God help the right, and help every man to vote his real sentiments instead of what he thinks will be elected. This is the reason why so little progress is made, just because men "balk," and say "We can't pull the load anyway, and we won't try." How unreasonable and unwise! No good is ever accomplished without bravely trying first. Men don't do their daily business on such a basis of reasoning as that. They try, whether they know they shall succeed or not. LORENZO D. BROWN.

Religious Intelligence.

—The Synod of the Associate Presbyterian church at its late session in Portland Mills, Ind., apointed the last day of October next to be set apart as a day of fasting for the church. The select committee to prepare a paper on fasting presented a very able report.

—Rev. N. Wardner of New York, the General Evangelist of the Wesleyan Methodist church is now on a tour of labor to the camp-meetings and conferences of his church in New York, Michigan, Tennessee and Iowa.

—Rev. C. E. Cheney of this city was elected Presiding Bishop of the Reformed Episcopal church at its late Council in Ottawa, Canada, to succeed Dr. Cummins, lately deceased. Rev. Samuel Fallows, a Freemason, and pastor of St. Paul's Reformed Episcopal church, corner Washington and Ann streets, Chicago, was elected Missionary Bishop by the same body.

—The plans have been adopted for the building to be used by Mr. Moody when he begins his labors in Chicago. The location will be near to Farwell Hall. It is expected that Mr. Moody will enter upon his work first in Chicago, beginning early in October, and will prosecute it here until January 1st, when he will commence in Boston, and continue there also several months. For the present, he is making his home in Northfield, Mass., where he wishes to remain three months in close study; his exercises and discourses of last winter having been so largely reported, it has become necessary for him to make new and enlarged preparation for the work of next winter.

—The Methodist Episcopal church recently began holding services at Guajanato, Mexico, and by the fourth week the congregation had grown to number one hundred and fifty persons. Two native preachers —one a shoemaker, the other a goldsmith—assist the missionaries, Messrs. Craver and Siberis.

—A society has been formed in London for the colonization of Syria and Palestine with Christian settlers from England. At a recent meeting one of the speakers was a Rev. Dr. Bliss of the American Presbyterian College at Beirut, who strongly advocated the scheme. There is already a German settlement on Mount Carmel, which is represented as being very prosperous.

—At the next communion in the Pilgrim Congregational church of Brooklyn, N. Y., (Dr. Storrs') there are to be admitted to membership on confession of faith four Turkish Armenians, a Japanese and a Chinaman; besides members of the Presbyterian church, and representatives from the extreme northern and southern States.

—In view of the great increase in the number of church members the past year, the Synod of the Dutch Reformed Church, which met at Kingsford, June 5th, named the second day of October as a day of special thanksgiving.

—The three great Presbyterian churches of Scotland raised last year for all purposes $6,525,180. Of this sum the Established Church contributed $1,750,000, the United Presbyterian $2,246,825, and the Free Church $2,672,250.

News of the Week.

—The Illinois Democrats have nominated for Governor, Lewis Steward the candidate of the Independent Greenback party.

—By a unanimous vote of the Trustees of Amherst College, July 28th, Prof. Julius L. Seelye, now a member of Congress from the Tenth Massachusetts District, was elected President.

—A terrible story comes from Sidney, Neb., a recruiting station on the Central Pacific railroad, not far from Cheyenne, to the effect that the attack made by the Sioux upon Crook's camp on Goose Creek last week proved to be more of a slaughter than a fight, nearly 300 soldiers of Crook's command being killed, and the entire command driven across the creek, a mark for the unerring bullets of their savage adversaries. The report had not been confirmed on Monday and it is hoped is untrue.

—The Servian war continues to be a mass of contradictions, but the Turks have lost much territory and many men. The great enemy of the Servians and their allies is internal dissension. Their armies have few native officers and there is great suspicion of the numerous Russians who have come to help them. It is believed that the leading powers will soon interfere and end the difficulties by negotiation. General Ignatieff has expressed the opinion that an armistice was inevitable within three or four weeks, and would probably be brought about by the united action of the six Powers. He thought the present difficulties would be arranged by partitioning Bosnia between Austria and Servia, and giving Montenegro to Herzegovina.

Furthermore do I promise and swear, that I will not govern this lodge, nor any other over which I may be called to preside, in a haughty, arbitrary, or impious manner; but will at all times, use my utmost endeavors to preserve peace and harmony among the brethren.

Furthermore, do I promise and swear, that I will never open a lodge of Master Masons, unless there be present three regular Master Masons, besides the Tyler, nor close the same, without giving a lecture, or some section, or part of a lecture, for the instruction of the lodge.

Furthermore, that I will not, knowingly, set in any lodge where any one presides, who has not received the degree of Past Master. (This last point is, in many lodges, entirely omitted. In some, the two last.) All which I do most solemnly and sincerely promise and swear, with a fixed and steady purpose of mind, to keep and perform the same; binding myself under no less penalty, than to have my tongue split from tip to root; that I might forever thereafter be unable to pronounce the word, if ever I should prove wilfully guilty of violating any part of this, my solemn oath, or obligation, of a Past Master Mason. So help me God and make me steadfast to keep and perform the same.

VI. OBLIGATION MOST EXCELLENT MASTER'S DEGREE.

I———, of my own free will and accord, in presence of Almighty God and this lodge of Most Excellent Master Masons, do hereby and hereon, in addition to my former obligations, most solemnly and sincerely promise and swear, that I will not give the degree of a Most Excellent Master to any of an inferior degree, nor to any other person or persons, in the known world, except it be to a true and lawful brother or brethren of this degree, and within the body of a just and lawfully constituted lodge of such; and not unto him nor them whom I shall hear so to be, but unto him and them only whom I shall find so to be, after strict trial and due examination, or lawful information.

Furthermore, do I promise and swear, that I will obey all regular signs and summons, given, handed, sent, or thrown to me from a brother of this degree, or from the body of a just and lawfully constituted lodge of such, provided it be within the length of my cable-tow, if in my power.

Furthermore, do I promise and swear, that I will support the constitution of the General Grand Royal Arch Chapter of the United States of America; also the Grand Royal Arch Chapter of the State of———, under which this lodge is held, and conform to all the by-laws, rules and regulations of this or any other lodge, of which I may at any time hereafter become a member.

Furthermore, do I promise and swear, that I will aid and assist all poor and indigent brethren of this degree, their widows and orphans, wheresoever dispersed around the globe, as far as in my power, without injury to myself or family.

Furthermore, do I promise and swear, that the secrets of a brother of this degree, given to me in charge as such, and I knowing them to be such, shall remain as secret and inviolable in my breast as his own, murder and treason excepted, and the same left to my own free will and choice.

Furthermore, do I promise and swear, that I will not wrong this lodge of Most Excellent Master Masons, nor a brother of this degree, to the value of any thing, knowingly, myself, nor suffer it to be done by others, if in my power to prevent it; but will give due and timely notice of all approaches of danger, if in my power.

Furthermore, do I promise and swear, that I will dispense light and knowledge to all ignorant and uninformed brethren, at all times, as far as in my power, without material injury to myself or family. To all which, I do most solemnly swear, with a fixed and steady purpose of mind in me, to keep and perform the same; binding myself under no less penalty than to have my breast torn open, and my heart and vitals taken from thence and exposed to rot on the dunghill, if ever I violate any part of this my solemn oath, or obligation, of a Most Excellent Master Mason: as help me God, and keep me steadfast in the due performance of the same. "Detach your hands and kiss the book."

OBLIGATION ROYAL ARCH DEGREE.

I, ———, of my own free will and accord, in the presence of Almighty God, and this Chapter of Royal Arch Masons, erected to God, and dedicated to the holy order of St. John,* do hereby and hereon, most solemnly and sincerely promise and swear, in addition to my former obligations, that I will not give the degree of Royal Arch Mason to any one of an inferior degree, nor to any other being in the known world, except it be to a true and lawful companion Royal Arch Mason within the body of a just and legally constituted Chapter of such, and not unto him or unto them whom I shall hear so to be, but unto him or them whom I shall find so to be, after strict trial, due examination or legal information received.

Furthermore, do I promise and swear, that I will not give the Grand Omnific Royal Arch word which I shall hereafter receive, neither in the Chapter nor out of it, except there be present two companions Royal Arch Masons, who, with myself, make three, and then by three times three, under a living arch not above my breath.

Furthermore, that I will not reveal the ineffable characters belonging to this degree, or retain the key to them in my possession, but destroy it, whenever it comes to my sight.

Furthermore, do I promise and swear, that I will not wrong this Chapter, nor a companion of this degree, to the value of any thing knowingly myself, or suffer it to be done by others, if in my power to prevent it.

Furthermore, do I promise and swear, that I will not be at the exaltation of a candidate to this degree, at a clandestine Chapter, I knowing it to be such.

Furthermore, do I promise and swear, that I will not assist or be present at the exaltation of a candidate to this degree, who has not regularly received the degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow Craft, Master Mason, Mark Master, Past Master, Most Excellent Master, to the best of my knowledge and belief.

Furthermore, that I will not assist or see more or less than three candidates exalted at one and the same time.

Furthermore, that I will not assist or be present at the forming or opening of a Royal Arch Chapter, unless there be present nine regular Royal Arch Masons.

Furthermore, do I promise and swear, that I will not speak evil of a companion Royal Arch Mason, neither behind his back nor before his face, but will apprise him of approaching danger if in my power.

Furthermore, do I promise and swear, that I will not strike a companion Royal Arch Mason in auger, so as to draw his blood.

Furthermore, do I promise and swear, that I will support the constitution of the General Grand Royal Arch Chapter of the United States of America, also the constitution of the Grand Royal Arch Chapter of the State under which this Chapter is held, and conform to all the by-laws, rules, and regulations of this, or any other Chapter of which I may hereafter become a member.

Furthermore, do I promise and swear, that I will obey all regular signs, summons, or tokens, given, handed, sent or thrown to me, from the hand of a companion Royal Arch Mason, or from the body of a just and lawfully constituted Chapter of such, provided it be within the length of my cable-tow.

Furthermore, do I promise and swear, that I will aid and assist a companion Royal Arch Mason, when engaged in any difficulty; and espouse his cause, so far as to extricate him from the same, if in my power, whether he be right or wrong. Also that I will promote a companion Royal Arch Mason's political preferment in preference to another of equal qualifications.*

Furthermore, do I promise and swear, that a companion Royal Arch Mason's secrets, given me in charge as such, I knowing them to be such, shall remain as secure and inviolable in my heart as his own, murder and treason not excepted.†

Furthermore, do I promise and swear, that I will be aiding and assisting all poor and indigent Royal Arch Masons, their widows and orphans, wherever dispersed around the globe, so far as in my power, without material injury to myself or family. All which I most solemnly and sincerely promise and swear, with a firm, steadfast resolution, to perform the same, without any equivocation, mental reservation or self-evasion of mind in me whatever; binding myself under no less than that of having my skull smote off, and my brains exposed to the scorching rays of the sun, should I ever knowingly, or wilfully violate or transgress any part of this, my solemn oath, or obligation, of a Royal Arch Mason. So help me God, and keep me steadfast in the performance of the same.

*Or as it is at this time given in some Chapters, to the honor of our patron Zerubbabel.

*This clause is sometimes made a distinct point in the obligation in the following form, viz: Furthermore, do I promise and swear, that I will vote for a companion Royal Arch Mason, before any other of equal qualifications; and in some Chapters both are left out of the obligation.

OBLIGATION, KNIGHTS OF THE RED CROSS.

I,— —, of my own free will and accord, in the presence of the Supreme Architect of the Universe, and these witnesses, do hereby and hereon, most solemnly and sincerely promise and swear, that I will always hail, forever conceal, and never reveal, any of the secret arts, parts or points of the mysteries appertaining to this order of the Knight of the Red Cross, unless it be to a true and lawful companion Sir Knight of the Order, or within the body of a just and lawful Council of such; and not unto him or them, until by strict trial and due examination or lawful information, I find him or them lawfully entitled to receive the same.

I furthermore promise and swear, that I will answer and obey all due signs and regular summons, which shall be sent to me from a regular Council of Knights of the Red Cross, or given to me from the hands of a companion Sir Knight of the Red Cross, if within the distance of forty miles; natural infirmities and unavoidable accidents only excusing me.

I furthermore promise and swear, that I will not be present at the conferring of this order of Knighthood upon any person, unless he shall have previously regularly received the several degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow Craft, Master Mason, Mark Master, Past Master, Most Excellent Master, and Royal Arch degree, to the best of my knowledge and belief.

I furthermore promise and swear, that I will not assist or be present at the forming and opening of a council of Knights of the Red Cross, unless there be present at least five regular Knights of the order, or the representatives of three different encampments, acting under the sanction of a legal warrant.

I furthermore promise and swear, that I will vindicate the character of a courteous Sir Knight of the Red Cross, when wrongfully traduced: that I will help him on a lawful occasion in preference to any brother of an inferior degree, and so far as truth, honor, and justice may warrant.

FREE TRACTS.

A Tract Fund for the Free Distribution of Tracts

HAS BEEN SECURED AND SHOULD NEVER BE EXHAUSTED. A friend has pledged this fund a dollar for every other dollar received, so EVERY NEW SUBSCRIPTION TO THE TRACT FUND COUNTS DOUBLE, and thus $10.00 pays for 20,000 pages of tracts.

The distribution of these tracts has already saved hundreds of young men from the lodge, but there is a great lack of funds to supply the constantly increasing demand for Free Tracts.

During the year ending July 1st, 1876 a little less than 150,000 pages of Cynosure Tracts were gratuitously sent out, mostly in very small lots. The present demand is fully 100,000 pages per month, but funds are lacking to meet it.

Many of our most earnest workers in this cause of God are poor men, who would be glad to circulate thousands of pages of Antimasonic literature if they could have them free.

SHALL WE NOT HAVE AN INEXHAUSTIBLE TRACT FUND

"THE ANTI-MASONS SCRAP BOOK."

Contains 24 Cynosure Tracts, bound together and is just the thing to select from. Price 20cents. See advertisement page 15.

Enoch Honeywell Esq., pays for an unlimited number of his tract addressed "TO THE YOUNG MEN OF AMERICA." He has furnished the public over 150,000 pages of these tracts during the past year.

In this book are the views of more than a Score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of Secret Societies.

The dangerous tendency and positive evil of organized Secrecy is here shown by the most varied and powerful arguments and illustrations that have ever been given to the public.

Lecturers and others who wish to find the best arguments against the Lodge, should send for this book.

Those who wish to circulate Antimasonic Tracts ought to have the book to select from.

Gain in one week	11

We have only one club of five or more to report this week, but it is a noble one, and has been collected by patient, persevering effort.

Ansel Lake, Grey Willow, Ill., sends twenty subscriptions for a year, and writes: "I have been a long time in getting up these names and pay for four of them myself for the sake of making out the number. The reason I did so was to favor the subscribers and get a larger circulation. . . . You can count me one for the reform as long as I live."

How many more are patiently and earnestly endeavoring to increase the circulation of the Cynosure? Do not be discouraged. Who shall we hear from next week? Keep the ball rolling.

25 COPIES OR MORE SENT AT THE 100 RATES.

Postage on the Cynosure.

THE POSTAGE ON THE CYNOSURE MUST BE PAID AT CHICAGO. It is twenty cents a year.

The cost of postage now depends entirely on the size and weight, and therefore some smaller papers charge but fifteen cents; and others about the size of the Cynosure charge twenty-five cents a year for postage.

If the subscription price of the CYNOSURE was $2.50 or $3.00 a year, the price of many religious papers containing no more reading matter, we might afford to pay the postage ourselves, but at $2.00 a year we cannot do this with our present Subscription list.

Therefore let all send the postage, 20 cents a year, 10 cents for half a year with their renewals.

The commission on one new subscription for a year will pay the postage on your own and the new subscriber's paper. We would rather have the postage paid by commissions than in any other way.

When postage is not paid we shall have to shorten the time of subscription sufficiently to pay it.

How to Send Money.

Post office orders, checks or drafts on Chicago or towns east of Chicago, and currency by express may be sent at our risk. If it is not possible to send by either of the four ways named, money in a registered letter may be sent at our risk, but it is not as safe.

The date at which subscriptions expire is with each subscriber's name on the address label. Send renewals before this date occurs. Notice if this date is changed to correspond; if not or if the paper fails to come, write without delay.

We discontinue during the first part of each month all subscriptions which expire during the preceding one except such as are ordered continued with a promise to forward the money soon. Address all letters with subscriptions or orders for Books, Tracts and donations to the Tract Fund to EZRA A. COOK & Co., 13 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Topics of the Time.

As had been expected the Senate last week failed to convict Belknap on any of the several charges. Had he been "smart" enough he might have retained his place in the cabinet to-day. So it is fair to estimate from the treatment of Babcock, Shepherd, and other presidential favorites. The effect of the trial will be degrading to the august character of the Senate if it does not forestall the courts and get Belknap free from any claims of the law.

As this case passes off another appears. The majority report of the committee on naval affairs finds that ring rule has been supreme in Mr. Robeson's department and says there is reason to believe that its officers are criminally connected with the fraudulent dealings. The following is appended to the report.

"Resolved—That these legal questions together with all the proof taken by the committee, be referred to the Judiciary with power to hear additional testimony and argument if they see fit; to examine and report whether such violations of the law as are referred to herein constitute and are impeachable offenses under the Constitution."

Another very remarkable proof that the soul of the whisky ring was the Masonic lodge is in the method of punishing the men sentenced by Judge Blodgett. Hesing, Rehm, Powell, Miller, Rush, Cooper and Burroughs, of the twelve put under the tender care of Sheriff Agnew of Blair Lodge No. 393, in Cook county jail, are members and officers of Chicago lodges; Hildreth, who ran away to Canada to avoid sentence, belongs to Pleiades Lodge, No. 478; and Waterman of Wheaton Lodge, No. 269, serves his six month's term with a Masonic sheriff in Du Page county jail at Wheaton. Now an ordinary thief who would pick a man's pocket of twenty-five dollars would be shut up in the State's prison and learn by the rigors of the punishment the estimate law and public sentiment put upon his crime. These men, however, after having formed a conspiracy against the government, that is, against their fellow citizens, and stealing from them to the amount of hundreds of thousands, are sent to live in ease, and not stintedly, for a greater or less time, at the very expense of the persons defrauded. In Cook county jail three of the distillers have established telegraph connections and carry on their nefarious business with more thrift than ever; and the convicted guager sent to Wheaton has the freedom of the town, and is hardly more an occupant of the jail than the county officers who do business in the court-house building. These facts are peculiar and belong to Masonic history.

The massacre of black men at Hamburg, S. C., on the 8th of July has been passed upon by the coroner's jury with unusual deliberation and a verdict rendered that promises a return of more peaceful times to that suffering people. The verdict charges General M. C. Butler, Colonel A. P. Butler, Dr. Pierce Butler, Rev. J. Meeling and fifty-three other citizens of Aiken and Edgfield counties, and thirty Georgians with murder. Warrants for the arrest of these persons have been put in the Sheriff's hands, and Governor Chamberlain seems to be moving earnestly in the matter, so that a possibility exists that we shall see such crimes for once punished as they deserve. No atrocity in the South has had wider notice. Southern papers and political leaders in Congress feared its effects and promptly denounced it while at the North and on the part of the Government, there has been a steady pressure on the local authorities which has strengthened their action in the case materially. It is hoped that this will serve as a severe example to other lawless communities, and cause the Governors of other States to feel their responsibility for atrocities which are frequently occurring at the South.

PHILADELPHIA, THE EXPOSITION AND THE EVANGELIST MOODY.

BY PROF. ELLIOT WHIPPLE.

Cities possess an individuality as marked and distinct as people do. Cleveland, one of the most beautiful cities in the country, is noted for the courtesy of its citizens and the cheapness of its merchandise. Buffalo, a second edition of New York city, impresses a stranger very unfavorably by the number of its saloons, the ignorance of its policemen, and its extravagant prices.

Philadelphia is more like Cleveland than like Buffalo. The idea fostered by prominent western papers that the cost of living here is such as to forbid any but the wealthy to attend the Centennial is entirely without foundation. Some of the hotels and numerous private families furnish excellent accommodations, including lodging, breakfast and supper for a dollar a day.

How shall a stranger find a suitable place at that price? He should plan his journey so as to reach the city several hours before dark, buy a copy of the Ledger while on the cars, and from the three columns of advertisements of lodging and boarding places select that which suits him best. At once on arriving, take a horse-car to the place selected. The politeness of the conductors may be depended upon to direct you clearly and intelligently to your destination. Thus with little trouble you may find a temporary home, at a price nobody can object to.

Our first Sabbath in Philadelphia, Moody was to preach at Bethany church. It was rather more than a Sabbath day's journey to walk two and a half miles, stand an hour and a half, for of course every seat was taken before we arrived, and then walk back again, but we would do it often to hear the great evangelist. We had read his sermon, as doubtless thousands of your readers have done in the Witness, and so will give a very brief outline of it, and the impression produced upon us by the speaker.

His discourse was directed to his converts of last winter; his theme, the "Life of Joshua." He showed how the whole life of Israel's heroic leader illustrated three grand requisites in a Christian's character: obedience, courage, and faith. From the time that Moses commanded him to lead the untried militia of Israel against the Amalekites until the last of the thirty-one kings of the Cananites was subdued, he never failed to obey promptly, his courage never gave way, his faith never faltered.

The sermon was an illustration of the power there is in Bible stories: but then, they need to be told with Moody's earnestness, and their applications to our present doings pointed out with Moody's fearlsssness. The trouble with nine hundred and ninety-nine out of every thousand of our preachers is that they think they are called to preach the Gospel, but are really trying to get a living; "they guided by seven great principles,—the five loaves and two fishes." They spend their strength in condemning sins committed three thousand years ago and three thousand miles away, instead of pointing out the evil practices of members of their own congregations. At the best they do no more than to tell the story of the pet lamb, failing to add, "Thou art the man."

They think they have discovered that it is easier to swim with the current than against it, having never noticed which way live fish always direct their course. God cannot use such men, and it would be better for themselves, better for the church, better for the unconverted, if they would honstly face the question, ascertain the real aim of their lives, and take an employment consistent with their courage and capacity.

Moody is not a great orator, disregards the rules of grammar and rhetoric, does not usually develope a broader or deeper view of his subject than many other preachers do, but he is in earnest about preaching the Gospel. He is remarkable for accomplishing such extraordinary results with such ordinary means. He goes at his preaching as a farmer does his plowing, or a blacksmith his pounding. Blow after blow comes without hesitation or uncertainty. He does not stop to choose his words, but uses the strongest, plainest, hardest Saxon terms. Soon the audience is aroused, unified, and swept away with the current of his speech, which pours onward surging, swaying, impetuous, resistless.

I said he was not a great orator, yet sometimes he exhibits the gift of true eloquence. In painting a possible picture of the parting of Moses and Joshua, just before the death of the former, he made us see them go slowly out of the camp and up the mountain side. With earnest converse engaged they heed not the passing moments until the place of final separation is reached; lovingly they embrace for the last time; tenderly but almost forcibly, Moses parts himself from Joshua and passes onward alone to meet God, while the latter descends to assume the leadership of the chosen people. Again in describing the capture of Jericho, we watch the hosts of Israel as they obediently march forth in this novel mode of warfare; we hear the measured tread of thousands as they compass the walls of the city; we see their giant-like adversaries look forth from their strong fortifications and listen to their witicisms at the folly of Israel; we see the high strong walls standing unshaken as day after day passes by; on the seventh morning we behold Joshua sending forth his army at early dawn and concerting measures to have all prepared to unite in one general shout when they shall have gone about the city for the seventh time; and then when the supreme moment arrives, we can almost hear the united shout of Israel's thousands; and lo! we see the mighty battlements tremble, totter, and crash to the ground in a heap of ruins, while at one point a narrow portion of the wall alone of all unshaken and untouched rises towards the sky, a monument of the faith of Rahab, and of the assured safety of those who trust in the promises of God.

Masonic Vigilance.

In the State of Vermont the newspaper has always been regarded as the agent for a free people for securing their liberty, and not as the mere property of individuals alone, or the engine of a ring.. There is a certain kind of information, therefore, such as notices of political proceedings, of marriages and deaths, of religious revivals, etc., which the newspaper has always published as a matter of general interest and concern, which the community sufficiently paid for by subscription.

But now, this simple arrangement is to be altered, and certain political information is to be charged for, like ordinary trade advertisements, the chief value of which pertains to the advertiser. The change is announced by the following resolutions adopted by a body of Vermont newspaper publishers at their last annual meeting on the 13th of July, 1876.

The following resolution was offered by Mr. Benedict:—

Whereas, There is no more reason why the publishers of newspapers should be expected to furnish valuable advertising free to the various political committees, than why stationers should be called on to furnish stationery, or landlords give the rent of halls "free gratis for nothing," therefore,

Resolved, That in the opinion of this Association, publishers should make a moderate charge for publishing calls for political conventions and caucuses.

The effect of these resolutions, if carried out, will be to render the tone of politics in Vermont mercenary, where the customs of the people would operate to the contrary. They will also increase the power of the lodge and other rings; since under the black-mail system of assessing its members by the lodge, and which these members dare not resist, immense sums of money are collected, by which the papers of the State may be easily corrupted, and by which the notices of the lodge can be paid for, while poor men who attempt to defend themselves against the lodge, and its large funds, would find the expense of advertising their political meetings a heavy drawback, especially when they have to deal with Masonic editors.

It is thus that the lodge is ever exceedingly vigilant and watchful to increase its power, at the expense of the liberties of the people, while the people are unconscious of what the lodge is doing. There are but a few persons or news-depots, or perhaps educational organizations in the whole country over which the lodge has not thus gained a powerful control, which is as pernicious as it is powerful.

The man who proposed these resolutions so damaging to the freedom of the press, and the man on whose motion they were adopted, Mr. J. M. Poland, are doubtless both secret society men, and know what they are doing. Mr. Poland is a near relative and supporter of the Judge Poland, who is noted for an active support of measures in Congress for shackling the press. *

It must be admitted that the man who owns a newspaper may make it as mercenary as he pleases; and freemen should remember that they, also, have rights, one of which is to subscribe for such papers as they please; and the last news-paper that any patriot ought to take is one that is managed by a Freemason. The selfish attempt made by Freemasons to prey upon the American people has a degree of cool impudence in it that one would suppose impossible among decent folks. But such is the nature of power; it tends to stupify its possessors, and render them insensible to the requirements of honest society.

The evidences of Masonic vigilance, ever intent with quiet, secret effort to increase the power of the lodge for the benefit of its members, are manifest to all who will watch the proceedings of these members, and there is no protection for the interests of liberty, but an equal vigilance and watchfulness on the part of the people. Where there is no organized Anti-masonry, every true patriot should withhold his subscription and his patronage from whatever news-paper he may find under the management of a Freemason.

Five hundred thousand slave-holders once held control of this free country; and what slave-holders once did, an equal number of Freemasons may do. Both slavery and Freemasonry are intensely selfish and mean, designed for the benefit of the few at the expense of the many; and he who would not vote for a slave-hold-holder's paper should not vote for a Freemason, nor take his paper.

The Symbolism of the Masonic Hoodwink.

BY J. H. WOODWARD.

The ritual informs us that the candidate is hoodwinked or blindfolded in each degree of the Blue Lodge Masonry, up to the time he is technically said to be brought to light and assigns as the reason therefor:

First; that as he was then in darkness, so should he keep the whole world in darkness as regards the secrets of Masonry, unless they obtained them in the same lawful manner as he himself had done.

Secondly; that his heart should be taught to conceive before his eyes were permitted to behold the beauties of Freemasonry.

Thirdly; that if he had refused to submit to the forms or ceremonies of his initiation and thereby rendered himself unworthy to be taken by the hand as a brother, he might have been conducted out of the lodge by the aid of the cable-tow, without seeing the form or beauty thereof.

The above reasons are correct in so far as they go, but do not by any means go far enough to disclose the full esotery of this symbol. Notwithstanding their paucity, insufficiency, and restriction we are prepared to state that the hoodwink has certainly the following symbolical allusions:

1. To the darkness prevalent over the northern half of the earth's surface, from the autumnal equinox, September 23d, when Osiris, or Hiram Abiff, the Sun, passes into the sign of Libra, the Balance crosses the line of the equator and enters into the Ark of Typhon, symbolically, the "dark shadow of the valley of death," wherein he continues confined until March 21st, when he conquers Typhon at the vernal equinox, regains his freedom, emerges from the Ark, enters the Sign of Aries, the Lamb, and brings himself and all the northern world to light. This period constituting the evening and the morning of the first day of the Sun's regenerative or formative powers in all the cosmogonics of pagan antiquity. To commemorate which event in the Masonic ceremonies the hoodwink is instantly stripped from the eyes of the candidate at the Worshipful Master's command: "Let there be light," when at once there is light as the candidate beholds three burning tapers surrounding the altar, and is immediately intrusted with the esoteric doctrines, pass-words, grips, due-guards, signs and explanations of the degree, which are Masonically termed "light."

It is here proper to add, that Masonry, true to her deceptive instincts, drops out of sight the Indian, Chaldean, Egyptian and Eleusinian cosmogonies, from which, to her best ability, she has borrowed her light, and derived her forms and ceremonies, and appropriates in their stead the cosmogony of Genesis, the better to conceal the pagan character of her rites,—notwithstanding which cunning, prudence, precaution, and circumspection on her part the spot still remains, and will not out.

2nd. To the antagonism and conflict existing between Masonry and the outer world, typified in the elemental combat periodically occurring between Osiris the Sun, and Typhon, Darkness, at the vernal equinox when Osiris, the Masonic representative of power, light and craft vanquishes his adversary and comes out victorious, dispelling the darkness, death, cold, and gloom of winter and restoring the life, light, heat and joy of summer to all the northern portion of the earth, which event being personified is transferred to the Masonic lodge-floor, and these parts mimicked by removing the hoodwink from the candidate's eyes, and bringing him forth with the glad anthem of triumph from the alleged death, servitude, frigidity and gloom of the world without, into the life, liberty, warmth, and fraternal joy of the world within the Temple.

3d. To the vacuity in the mind of the candidate, when his intellectual world, (typical of the death, gloom, and torpidity that exists in the northern hemisphere during the winter half of the year), is without Masonic form and void, and so remains until that memorable event in the initiatory ceremonies transpires, when it becomes peopled with the living thoughts and principles constituting the soul, essence, and fundamental basis of speculative Freemasonry through the burst of that Masonic light upon his mind, in fancied imitation of that material light which breaks upon the northern world, when Osiris conquors Typhon at the vernal equinox. In the matter of this allusion, Masonry again with her usual duplicity and fraud makes it point for the vacuity of the candidate's mind, to uncreated existence in primodical time, and for the burst of Masonic light, to that event whence sprang material light at the bidding of that Almighty Voice which proclaimed, "Let there be light." This change in allusion is of course made to bury out of sight the paganism which is inherent in Masonry and to make her rites apparently accord with the Holy Scriptures. In this, however, she need not deceive any but those who may choose to be deceived.

4th. To the expressions of grief for the Sun's loss to the northern hemisphere from the autumnal to the vernal equinox. Also for the loss of the Master Mason's word in consequence of the loss of the Master, (Osiris, Hiram, or the Sun) he having been attacked and fatally wounded by Typhon and the wicked Fellow Crafts on summer solstice day, the year's high twelve, while in the zenith of his power and glory, and enthroned in his sanctum sanctorum, on the high and holy hill, from which time his life powers declined, (the days shortening), until Typhon and his Fellow Crafts shut him up in the Ark, which occurs just at the moment night gained supremacy over day, in the physical division of time in the northern hemisphere, which happens every year of the world, about the time the Sun crosses the line of the equator at the autumnal equinox.

5th. To the chaotic confused, unsocial, uncongenial isolated and reprobate condition of the people of the outer world wandering in the obscurity of darkness deprived of the Triune God's favor, and doomed to a perpetual residence in the dominions of Satan amidst a cheerless and overwhelming contamination.

6th. To the firm and unalterable purpose of the Masonic conspirators forever to keep the outer world in uncertainty, doubt and ignorance as to the objects, intents and purposes of their thoughtfully matured, rigidly compacted, and widely extended organization.

7th. To the alarming and profound ignorance in which the whole outer world are enveloped as to the illegal unwarranted, and atrocious designs of the fraternity against public and private rights, and the peace, dignity, and well being of society, in general.

8th. To the esotericity of Masonic light, which though shining with the bright effulgence of day, in our courts, in our halls of legislation, in our national, state and municipal institutions, in our churches, in our schools and colleges, in fact in every place of power, trust and emolument, yet withal is not perceived by the outer world, being to their uniniciated eyes, to their unaccustomed gaze, but the blindness of darkness visible.

9th. To the death of the initiate to the world—the irreparable, farewell to every just, honest and pright impulse and principle, toward the outer world, that should adorn the heart and govern the conduct of man, without respect to person, in all his relations with his fellow man.

10. To the prelude to Masonic resurrection or regeneration when the candidate, as an Osiris in the Ark, will have passed through the "dark shadow of the valley of earth," shaken off the adverse powers of death, and transferred his allegiance from the world without to the world within the temple, and stand forth a "free" and "accepted" Mason.

11. To the confidence, the duty made Mason, if true to his trust, can ever repose in the disposition of his fraternity to do him good all his life, and especially in their will and ability to protect him in every emergency that can or may arise to threaten his life, liberty or property, and that too whether he be right or wrong.

Methodist Conferences Forty-seven Years Ago.

The following was passed by Genesee Conference at Perry, June, 1829, moved by James Hemingway, seconded by Philo Woodworth:

That we will admit no person on trial, continue none on trial, nor admit any one into full connection in this Conference, neither elect any to deacon's or elder's orders, whether traveling or local, who shall have ever belonged to the Masonic fraternity, who did not renounce all connection with Masons as such, by withdrawing from the institution, and promising to have no further connexion with Masons.—Conable's History of the Genesee Conference.

At the same Conference the following was passed, offered by J. Chamberlain and J Huestis: "That a document, containing the proceedings of a meeting of the members of this Conference, formerly members of the Masonic fraternity among which proceedings there is a resolution setting forth that all connection between them and the Masonic fraternity is forever dissolved, and another, by which the members of said meeting submit the said document to the Conference to be put on file with its other papers, be put on file accordingly. Which resolution passed."

In connection with the above resolutions read the action of the Pittsburgh Conference in 1830, reported in the November number of the Religious Monitor (Associate Reformed Pres.) for that year:

"The Pittsburgh Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church adopted 'general and sweeping resolutions against Masonry.'

The first resolution says that its members ought not to join a lodge of Freemasons, or be present at any of their processions or festivals.

The second declares that the Conference will not ordain any probationer who shall have joined a lodge, or been present at their festivals or processions.

The third declares that the Conference will not ordain any local preacher who has joined the fraternity."

Such history proves the declension of the M. E. church in this as in other matters of conscience in Christian living and worship. The spirit of worldliness "which bringeth a snare," of discretion and not principle, is cursing that and other religious denominations in this respect.

Duties of the Future.

From the address of Hon. Robert C. Winthrop at Boston, on the Fourth or July, 1876.

We come then, to-day, fellow-citizens, with hearts full of gratitude to God and man, to pass down our country and its institutions—not wholly without sears and blemishes upon their front—not without shadows on the past or clouds on the future, but freed forever from at least one great stain, and firmly rooted in the love and loyalty of a united people—to the generations which are to succeed us.

And what shall we say to those succeeding generations as we commit the sacred trust to their keeping and guardianship? If I could hope without presumption that any humble counsels of mine on this hallowed anniversary could be remembered beyond the hour of their utterance, and reach the ears of my countrymen in future days; if I could borrow "the masterly pen" of Jefferson, and produce words which should partake of the immortality of those which he wrote on this little desk; if I could command the matchless tongue of John Adams, when he poured out appeals and arguments which moved men from their seats, and settled the destinies of a nation; if I could catch but a single spark of those electric fires which Franklin wrestled from the skies, and flash down a phrase, a word, a thought, along the magic chords which stretch across the ocean of the future—what would I, what could I say?

I could not omit, certainly, to reiterate the solemn obligations which rest on every citizen of this republic to cherish and enforce the great principles of our Colonial and Revolutionary fathers; the principles of liberty and law, one and inseparable—the principles of the constitution and the Union.

I could not omit to urge on every man to remember that self-government politically can only be successful, if it be accompanied by self-government personally; that there must be government somewhere; and that if the people are indeed to be sovereigns they must exercise their sovereignty, over themselves individually as well as over themselves in the aggregate, regulating their own lives, resisting their own temptations, subduing their own passions and voluntarily imposing upon themselves some measure of that restraint and discipline, which under other systems, is supplied from the armories of arbitrary power—the discipline of virtue, in the place of the discipline of slavery.

I could not omit to caution them against the corrupting influences of intemperance, extravagance, and luxury. I could not omit to warn them against political intrigue, as well as personal licentiousness; and to implore them to regard principle and character, rather than mere party allegiance, in the choice of men to rule over them.

I could not omit to call upon them to foster and further the cause of universal education; to give a liberal support to our schools and colleges; to promote the advancement of science and art, in all their multiplied divisions and relations; and to encourage and sustain all those noble institutions of charity, which, in our own land above all others, have given the crowning grace and glory to modern civilization.

I could not refrain from pressing upon them a just and generous consideration for the interests and rights of their fellow men everywhere, and an earnest effort to promote peace and good will among the nations of the earth.

I could not refrain from reminding them of the shame, the unspeakable shame and ignominy, which would attach to those who should show themselves unable to uphold the glorious fabric of self-government, which had been founded for them at such a cost by their fathers.

And surely, most surely, I could not fail to invoke them to emulate the examples of virtue and purity and patriotism which the great founders of our Colonies and of our nation had so abundantly left them.

THE AMERICAN PLATFORM AND NOMINATIONS FOR 1876.

FOR PRESIDENT

James B. Walker,
of Illinois.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT

Donald Kirkpatrick,
of New York.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage, is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. The charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discountenanced.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency, and a return to specie payment as soon as practicable.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And finally we demand for the Americanpeople the abolition of the Electoral Colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

Questioning Candidates.

Shall we vote for the candidates of the American party, or shall we question the candidates of the other parties and should they answer that they are not Masons, shall we vote for them? For myself I say, no: for many reasons. One is, the electors may all be Masons, and if we vote for them we are voting to support Masonry. Another is, we would say we have no confidence in the American party. Another great reason is, we should vote as we pray. If we pray as all of us should, for the abolition of all secret societies and then get up from our knees and go and vote a Masonic ticket, the man that will do that is very differrent from what I could be. We can make the Masons feel if we are all united in the support of the American party; and should we have but five or six hundred votes I think it would have a better effect than questioning candidates. And now I will give some of my experience in questioning candidates. When I lived in the State of New York, the abolitionists would question candidates, and the party in the minority would answer that they were abolitionists and we held the balance of power, and when the Democrats were elected that was all they wanted; then the Whigs would be the abolition party. But when we organized the Liberty party and nominated James G. Birney for President in 1844, and gave sixty-two thousand votes, the principles set in motion at that time became the principles of the nation. And I believe if we are true at the ballot-box, the doctrine we advocate will be adopted by the nation.

And now as to the parties, that is, the two great parties, all they are working for is the spoils. There is not any material difference in their platform. The Republicans say if the Democrats come into power we shall have to pay for all the slaves, and all the rebel debt. Just as much as to say we will destroy ourselves the first year, which they have too much sense to do. And the Democrats say if the Republicans have the power they will raise the President's salary twenty-five thousand dollars more, and may have another salary grab. So I don't want to trust either of them.

A State Convention is called to meet August 16th and 17th in Winchester, Jefferson Co., Kansas, to nominate a State electorial ticket and consider other important measures in connection with the State Association.

ELECTORAL TICKETS:—Connecticut leads the van and Indiana follows with a State ticket and Presidental electors for the fall campaign Ohio, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri and Kansas are eah ctaking vigorous measures looking to early nominations. It requires a good deal of pluck, perseverance and faith to succeed, but these are qualities which make reformers. Let those interested and especially such persons as believe in political action and who are willing to step out conspicuously and act with the American Party as electors or otherwise as shall be for the good of the cause, write to E. A. Cook, No. 13 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, chairman of Committee on Political Action.

In regard to the position of the Republican candidate for the Presidency, we are permitted to take the following from a letter of Dr. R. B. Taylor of Summerfield: "I see the Cynosure publishes him [Hayes] as a Mason. That is a mistake. He sometime since was the guest of J. M. Rownd of this place and Bro. Rownd put the question plainly to him and he said he joined the Oddfellows when young, but had abandoned them, and now held no connection with any secret organization." This will be regarded as good authority on Mr. Hayes' position, and will set that question at rest.

INDIANA TAKES HER PLACE IN LINE WITH A FULL TICKET.

THE FAIRMOUNT CONVENTION.

Pursuant to a call issued by the committee on political action for the State of Indiana, a number of the friends of reform met at Friend's church, in Fairmount, Grant Co. August 1st, 1876, to consider the propriety of forming a State ticket and an electoral College in the interest of the American party.

At 9:30 Hon. Wm. Hall of Grant, chairman of committee on political action, called the meeting to order and after stating the object of the meeting, requested the members present to take such action as they deemed necessary to secure the end desired. After reading of selections from the Scriptures, and prayer by Bro. West a committee on permanant organization was appointed and during their deliberation, remarks were made by the General Agent of the N. C. A. The Committee then reported, recommending the following gentleman as officers of the convention: Pres't. H.C. West, Jay Co.; Vice President, Dr. S. L. Cook, of Noble county, and Isaac Elliott of Grant county, as Secretary. The report was adopted and after remarks by the President, the convention proceeded to business, there being present at the organization sixty-nine members. Dr. G. W. Champ of Grant county, moved that a committee of seven be appointed to present to the Convention names of persons for State officers and Presidential electors. This motion elicited considerable discussion, and called out a very full expression of the views of different members in regard to the propriety of making a distinct, direct political issue on the principles of the American party at this time; while it was evident that there was some difference as to the expediency of carrying this reform to the polls this fall, it was evident that there was no backing down or concession to the lodge, and it was proven that honest men can differ and at the same time, maintain the utmost courtesy and good feeling in their deliberations.

Pending this discussion the convention took a recess for dinner. At 1:30 P. M. the Convention re-assembled and after prayer by Bro. Jones resumed the discussion at the point where it was interrupted by adjournment, and the resolution was finally adopted without a dissenting voice. The following gentlemen were appointed said committee: Hon. Wm. Hall, Grant county; Peter Rich, Hamilton county; Wm. Small, Wabash county: Benj. Ulsh, Kosciusko county; —— Gard, Huntington county; Arthur Rector, Delaware county; H. C. West, Jay county. During the deliberations of this committee the convention was addressed by Dr. S. L. Cook, Isaac Eliott, Joseph Bennett, and others. The committee on nominations submitted the following, which was adopted:

STATE TICKET.

Governor, Samuel Phillips, Hendricks county.

Sec'y of State, Wm. Small, Wabash county.

Treasurer, Geo. Harvey, Noble county

Auditor, Samuel B. Ervine, Bartholemew county.

Attorney General, Walter March, Delaware county.

Clerk of Supreme Court, Dugan Clark, Wayne county.

Sup't of Public Instruction, B. C. Hobbs.

ELECTORAL TICKET.

1st. Dis. T B. McCormick, Gibson county..
2nd. ——.—
3rd. C. F. A. Gantzckow. Bartholemew.
4th. B. G. Barnard, Rush.
5th. H. C. Miller, Franklin.
6th. Jeremiah Howel, Grant.
7th. Johnatan Phillips, Hendricks.
8th. Wm. Givens, Clay.
9th. Wm. Lacy, Tippecanoe.
10th. Anson Larabee, Lake.
11th. Peter Rich, Hamilton.
12th. Wilson Milligan, Jay.
13th. John Hoge, De Kalb.

Electors at large: S. L. Cook, M. D., Hon. Wm. Hall.

The committee previously appointed on Platform and Resolutions, reported the substance of the National Platform with an additional plank, endorsing female suffrage, which was adopted. An executive committee of three was then appointed to carry out the action of the convention, consisting of Wm. Hall, G. W. Champ and Nathan Wilson. After a free conference in committee of the whole the convention took a recess until evening.

EVENING SESSION.

The large rooms of Friend's House were thrown open and well filled by attentive and well behaved men and women, who had evidently gathered, not for a meeting simply but to receive instruction and learn more of the nature, character workings and facts of the secret orders. Bro. West occupied the chair, and Bro. Floyd conducted the devotional exercises. The Sec'y and General Agent of the N. C. A, being introduced, spoke for three quarters of an hour, and as I am disposed for obvious reasons neither to criticize or approve his speech, I will pass to say Bro. S. L. Cook who succeeded him gave a very clear, concise and logical address which was listened to with the deepest interest to the close; some passages in Bro. Cook's address were very impressive and inspiring, while his easy, familiar style secured not only the attention, but won the sympathy of his hearers. His great forte however lay in the facts and statistics which he had gathered and presented with terribly damaging effect to the lodge. At the close of the Dr's. lecture Bro. Champ offered a resolution recommending Bro. Cook to the friends of our reform desiring lectures throughout the State, which was adopted by a rousing and enthusiastic vote and supplemented by an expression in that form which a man in moderate circumstances with a dependent family is prepared to appreciate.

The cause is advancing and a marked change has come over the people in the last four years. Should the friends of the cause cooperate with and sustain Bro. Cook I am confident that the ratio of advance would be greatly accelerated and some towns, counties, and indeed the whole State would soon be relieved from that paralysis in business, and mal-administration of law, into which it has been plunged by the intrigues of the lodge.

MOBS! MOBS!!

THE MASONS OF WENONA AND STREATOR STAND BY THEIR GODDESS DIANA.

RONAYNE'S EXPOSITIONS AND DEBATES ANSWERED BY MOB ARGUMENT.

STREATOR, Ill., Sat., July 29, '76.

FRIEND KELLOGG:—On yesterday morning I mailed you a letter relative to the Tribune article criticizing the Cynosure editorial, but I did not give you, I believe, any hint as to how my work proceeded at Wenona, waiting for a more favorable opportunity; and as that opportunity now offers I thought I'd just drop you a line detailing some of the points of conflict as they presented themselves on the Wenona battlefield.

On Tuesday evening I lectured on the antiquity of Freemasonry, its origin, age, progress, etc., showing from undoubted Masonic history that the ritual of Masonry is false and inculcates falsehood on every candidate who submits to its degrading ceremonies and pays his money for the mere privilege of doing so; and at the conclusion of my lecture which lasted about 3½ hours I challenged any Mason in Wenona or elsewhere to meet me in public discussion on the subject of Freemasonry. Of course my challenge was not accepted, but the Hiramites of Wenona, ever true to their sworn principles, sent a lying "special telegram" to the Chicago Times, stating that I was challenged and that I refused. On Wednesday evening I worked the first or Entered Apprentice degree, initiating the Rev. Dr.

James Hunt in due and ancient form; and of course, as I always do, explaining each ceremony and clearly demonstrating the anti-scriptural and anti-Christian character of the institution. The meeting as on the previous night was exceedingly large and enthusiastic, and manifested a decided interest in the proceedings. Again I challenged the Masons and again there was silence. Of course by this time the Masonic fraternity were fearfully and indeed wrathfully excited, and one would imagine by the way they ran around from place to place that they felt as if they did not know what to do.

Thursday morning dawned beautiful and bright on Wenona, but from plain indications discernible on Masonic countenances, it brought very little of cheer or hope to the members of the would-be "ancient" craft. The day passed off pleasantly, however, and that night I worked the Master Mason's degree, laying my poor old friend Hiram out in beautiful style and in accordance with the prescribed formula in such cases made and provided. By this time every one was excited; every one was talking Masonry; every one was wondering whether such things could really be. I need not add that as on the previous evenings the hall was literally packed to its utmost capacity, except the space around the stage. I found that I could not finish my work satisfactorily in the time allotted me and so I concluded to hold another meeting Friday night to explain the ceremonies of the Hiram Abiff tragedy, and to sum up my arguments thus far against Freemasonry.

On Friday morning, however, as I came down town from Peter Howe's place, the enclosed note was handed me from a deputation of the fraternity and of course I made immediate arrangments to gratify my old friend Southwell, if for nothing else than that he was one of those who at the Grand Lodge meeting in 1872 passed me a unanimous vote of thanks. The Masons were assembled in full force from all the neighboring towns.

The joint discussion took place then last night, (Friday,) the champion selected by the Hiramites being one Wilcox from Mendota, a traveling companion of the notorious Rob Morris in his Palestine explorations, when searching among the rocks of Judea for some evidence of Masonic antiquity. Elder Haney, presiding elder in the M. E. church of this district, was chosen chairman and Elder Gilbert and a Masonic doctor were appointed moderators. The subject of debate was "the influence of Freemasonry upon society." In discussing this question I presented the following resolutions, always quoting from Masonic authority to support my positions, and clearly demonstrated that inasmuch as Freemasonry is all that it is represented to be in these resolutions, and more too, its influence upon society, both as to its religious, political and moral aspects must necessarily be bad and vicious in the extreme. The Masonic champion as usual furnished not a single argument in favor of Masonry, except to say that 95 per cent. of all the M. E. ministers and 55½ per cent. of all the Baptist ministers were Freemasons; and that surely their word was worth more than the word of a man who had taken Masonic obligations and who was now violating them by disclosing Masonic secrets.

At the close of his second speech which lasted only a few minutes (he not occupying his full time of thirty minutes) the Masons rose up en masse, the rest of the congregation remaining seated, and on my attempting to close the so-called debate, having of course the closing speech, being on the affirmative, a scene of wild, reckless rowdyism took place which you can imagine, but which I am utterly unable to describe. Such a scene was never witnessed before in Wenona. Wild yelling, shouting, hissing, stamping, roaring, repeated again and again, regardless of Haney's portly presence; regardless even of the presence of over one hundred of the best ladies of the city; in the presence of their neighbors; in the presence of their own children, this mad Masonic mob stamped and swore and roared and hissed, being entirely uncontrolled and uncontrollable for at least ten or fifteen minutes. I made my voice heard, however, and pointed out to the seated audience the "beneficial effects of Freemasonry upon a community," no arguments being necessary to sustain my claim as they were furnished by the yelling, screaming mob of Masons before them with all the proofs necessary. The Masons at last having been brought to their senses and doubtless feeling heartily ashamed of themselves, of their conduct and of Freemasonry, privately begged of the chairman to apologize for them, which he did by saying that the Freemasons present disclaimed all connection with the disturbance, notwithstanding the charges to that effect so repeatedly made by his "Irish fellow-countryman."

I closed the meeting in the usual orderly manner, dismissing the congregation with many thanks for courtesies extended to me during my sojourn among them. Bros. Gilbert, Nelson, and myself went down stairs when the audience had all gone, but the sidewalk was still full of people, and before we were ten rods away from the building a fight broke out among the crowd that still lingered around the entrance to the hall. The Masonic blood being up and being like Paddy at the fair, "itching for some one to give him a bating," one of the "brethren" struck an old respected citizen and was prevented from doing him real injury through the intervention of the police.

Thus ended the defence of Masonry in Wenona, and thus it will end in every place where they try to defend it. Freemasonry cannot be defended by argument, it must, therefore, be defended, if at all, by crime and ruffianism. "Ye are of your father the devil, and the works of your father ye do," is as applicable to Masons now as it was to the scribes and Pharisees in the days of our Lord.

I lecture and work the degrees here in Streator, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week, when I expect a red-hot time.

EDMOND RONAYNE.

The letter accepting the challenge and the resolutions discussed follow herewith:

WENONA, ILL., July 27, 1876.

E. RONAYNE, Esq.,

SIR:—We hereby accept your challenge offered this evening on the stage, to discuss the subjects of Freemasonry and Odd-fellowship, Friday evening, July 28, at McCall's Hall; 30 minutes to be allowed each speaker, alternately.

Respectfully,

O. M. SOUTHWELL.

RESOLUTIONS.

1st. Resolved, That Freemasonry is a religion—its meetings being strictly religious ceremonies—in its teachings, principles and tendencies diametrically opposed to the religion of Jesus Christ.

2nd. Resolved, That Freemasonry is a government differing in every respect from the government of these United States—having laws of its own, officers of its own, a revenue of its own, oaths of its own, death penalties of its own, and which if incurred must be inflicted within itself in defiance of civil law and contrary to Christian civilization.

3rd. Resolved, That Freemasonry tends to disrupt the social relations of the family circle—estranges men one from another and creates a feeling of distrust and suspicion even among men of the same community.

4th. Resolved, That the so-called benevolence of Freemasonry is pure selfishness, differing in every particular from the broad benevolence of the Gospel as taught in the Bible.

ANOTHER REPORT FROM THE WENONA MEETINGS.

July 31st, 1876.

ED. CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—The exposures by Mr. Ronayne of the secrets of Masonry here, as would be expected, stirred the wrath and venom of the craft from the smallest tadpole up to the biggest toad in the puddle. During the lectures respectful attention and good order prevailed, until the last evening, and the once mysterious "What is it?" with his hoodwink on lay exposed to the ridicule and disgust of the community. The order after being taunted and challenged to meet in combat felt compelled to come forth and attempt to defend the institution in the person of a Mr. Wilcox. This was a rare opportunity for Mr. Ronayne, whose heavy and oft-repeated blows, made too with telling force and solid support from passages in the Old and New Testament, made them wince under the treatment administered.

Mr. Ronayne as the challenger, was entitled to the opening and closing, but the turbulent spirit of the order, its teachings and influence disrespectful and disorderly throughout, could contain itself no longer, after each had twice spoken and Mr. R. rose to close the debate, Masonry showed itself in the form of a mob, the meeting was broken up abruptly, Masons leading in the disturbance, even the church of Christ represented among them. As the defeated and broken cohort of Masonry retreated, Mr. R. gave them a grape and canister discharge amusing to behold.

A few of the Masons behaved like gentlemen, to their credit be it said, and requested to be released from the disgrace to which the rabble had brought them. The crowd then adjourned to the sidewalk in front of the hall, where one Mason who had been made perfect in wisdom and intelligence, fitted for heaven, assumed to lift his hand against one not a Mason (had it been one, he would be a perjured villain) and when Masonry struck the first blow, the second laid him low with such force as to break the bottle of liquor in his pocket, and its effects wasted. The authorities soon quelled the riot. Mr. Ronayne guarded by his friends retired to his lodgings in peace, victorious.

The rumblings of the wounded still echo in the low slanders and profane epithets charged with all the venom and malice a wicked and Christless institution can invent.

To suppose that a Christian can go into one room, pray a while, shutting Christ out and rejecting him, refusing mention of his name by order of the master of the lodge, then go in another room and call on the holy name of Christ and expect him to hear, is absurd, unreasonable. Though a sweeping charge it is too true "One cannot be a Mason and a Christian." To live up to the principles of the order, and to conform to its obligations is anti-Christian, and the more so, the more strictly they are observed. Rev. Robert Collyer and Bishop Simpson as adhering Masons, as well as those of lesser talents, cannot serve two masters successfully, and a minister of Jesus Christ should be ashamed to submit to the mummery and blasphemy of the lodge room, or go where he cannot take Christ with him, without committing a crime, if he conform to the ritual of the order.

COM.

THE STREATOR PANDEMONIUM.

In my last letter I gave you an account of the Wenona meetings and the terrible excitement among the Masons of that usually quiet little burgh. But I believe I forgot to mention that this excitement, especially on the last evening, was caused in a great measure by the Streator Masons, some of whom were down and did every thing in their power to create a disturbance.

Correspondence

Lodge vs. Church in Lima, Ohio.

Dear Cynosure:—A few notes from Lima, Ohio, concerning the Lutheran church case there may not be uninteresting to your readers, especially since the district court has now passed upon it. The case was before this court on appeal and was fully heard about the middle of April last. After a brief consultation, the court announced that from the importance of the questions raised, the great amount of testimony introduced, and the limited time the court had to examine the case; and as this was probably only a stepping stone to the Supreme Court, it had concluded to enter a pro forma affirmation of the decision below, but without indicating any opinion on the merits of the case. Thirty days are allowed in which to prepare bills of exceptions, during which time execution was stayed.

On Sunday before word came from Supreme Court as to whether the injunction would be allowed defendant or not, this little church, closed by order of court for more than two years, was taken possession of by the notorious Masonic council faction of the Lima congregation. This, to us, was significant and augured evil. And so it turned out. Lodge men seemed to understand matters before they were passed upon.

JOY IN SALOONS AND LODGES.

The first party which entered the church consisted of two Masons, one of whom is a leading member of the faction and the other an old apostate from the Lutheran faith and member of the M. E. church. The other two if not Masons are in full sympathy with the lodge. After ringing the church bell for a few minutes this party left, locking the door. They had not gone more than ten minutes when two members of the council faction, both of whom are Masons and one a saloonist, in company with their pastor, Rev. J. G. Neiffer, appeared and entered the church. This "Christian" pastor entered this church now for the first time in his life and seemed highly jubilant over the temporary victory, evincing his joy by raising the windows, playing the organ and singing in a boisterous tone. He seemed to aim at vexing the old pastor who resides on on adjoining lot.

Our Lord's saying concerning the temple at Jerusalem on one occasion, came vividly to mind on seeing that sight: "It is written my Father's house is called a house of prayer but ye have made it a den of thieves." How well this language applies to the case in hand, may be seen by the false swearing by leaders of that party to gain that church. We may have occasion to refer to this at a future time. It was, indeed, painful to see men who are a living reproach to Christianity, instigated by authority of a synod calling itself evangelical Lutheran, enter into and take possession of that little church and eject the rightful owners, retaining and holding against better judgment, besides the church building, private property belonging to the old pastor. To keep the faction intact, increase the number, and drive away the old pastor, were resorted to. We will relate a few of them. The Masonic council district synod of Ohio, (G. W. Mechling, presiding bishop) claiming power over the faction, has not furnished it with a single pastor from her own ranks since its organization, now over two years ago. The first pastor called, who remained about one year, was sent from Butler, Pa., where he admitted Masons to the holy communion who had been expelled from the joint synod congregation there. The present incumbent is from Salesburg, N. C. This gentleman sent the faction his "picture" and on that he was called; the people never having seen or heard him until he came as their pastor.

The secretary through whom "this much abused people" gave the call, before the pastor arrived absconded with another man's wife and a sum of money, leaving his own wife, an excellent Christian lady, and eight children in rather destitute circumstances. The new preacher bore up under this and other things remarkably well, beginning his evangelical work by the publication of a sermon and scattering it far and wide. Aside from what the Romish priest said about the sermon no particular notice was taken of it by our citizens.

A Christmas tree was gotten up to attract the curious and replenish the depleted treasury. The week following the account given in our papers of this tree was of the most sensational character, among other things telling of the "box of cigars given by some good friend to the pastor to help him while away his lonely hours of single blessedness." Many were the additions to the church by letter and confirmation reported in quick succession. In the midst of this wonderful prosperity the strange announcement was made by this strange preacher, from the pulpit, substantially as follows: "Those of my parishioners with whom I have dined since I am here are hereby cordially invited to partake of my hospitality at my boarding house this (Sunday) afternoon, immediately after service." Four turkeys are said to have been slaughtered for the occasion, and some twenty or thirty men, women and children assembled as per invitation, and had a high feast and high time generally, to the deep mortification of all the Christian people in that vicinity including the pastor of the German Reformed church and his family, who were sorely offended. When men work in the interest of the lodge they fall into many inconsistencies and are finally caught in one of Satan's traps.

This I will illustrate by

service as related by the above Christian pastor to one of our ministers who enquired of him as to how he stood on the lodge question. He said: "Why, I am against the lodge; against all secret societies." To confirm this he related in substance the following: "In my former charge one of my members, a Mason, died. The Masons came into the church in full regalia. After service, I, clad in my clerical robe, proceeded in front of the procession to the cemetery. The Masons gathered around the grave ready to perform their ceremony of burial. I told them to stand back, that this was my funeral. They withdrew. I then invited the friends of the deceased to gather around the grave and buried the man according to our beautiful burial service. I am against the lodge." &c., &c.

That was a bold and noble testimony against the lodge, if true, and just such as all Christian ministers should make. But let us see how this brave lodge antagonist deals with lodge men in his new field at Lima. He is called by disaffected secret-societyists, accepts the call and is duly installed, fully aware of the lodge connection of the men who called him. He was aware of the whole case before he left the East. Not only has he become pastor of lodge men, but since he is here has confirmed a high Mason—and boasted that said man is now, though he had been expelled from the lodge for un-Masonic conduct, in good standing again in his lodge.

In all the above unblushingly shameful work and un-Lutheran practice, there was a design against and its pastor. During the past winter and early spring no means that evil men and Satan could invent were left untried, to utterly crush and exterminate us. The preacher and his well-drilled lodge crew go into our unsuspecting families with fair words and smiling faces, as angels of light in the most systematized order and leave no stone unturned to proselyte the subject of their aim.

They have found it to be true that "the hardest thing in the world to kill is a true Lutheran congregation." That lodge men and saloonists both in and outside of the Masonic faction, have by the efficient aid of their unprincipled leader, subjected our congregation to severe tests for its life is well known in this city and vicinity.

We give God the praise that he has not suffered us to be crushed by evil designing and infatuated men. Only a short time ago fourteen new members were added to our communion list, six by letter and eight by confirmation.

The General Council at its last session in Galesburg, Ill., passed a resolution against with errorists, solemnly declaring said rule to be divine and in full accord with our confessions of faith; but this man ignores the rule as is proven by an act of such fellowship by him of an utterly inexcusable character.

CONCLUSION.

Forasmuch as the Council District Synod of Ohio, has declared control over this faction of the Lima congregation, and as said faction agreed to submit to the authority of Synod unconditionally, and as the present preacher is here by authority of Synod, we hold the Masonic district of Ohio, and the General Council responsible for the above and other shameful irregularities and un-Lutheran practice. How the General Council of the Lutheran church can say in the name of the Lord, the only Head of the Church, that she is against secret societies, and yet remain identified with such evil lodge work at Lima and not be guilty of the grossest hypocrisy is to me a profound paradox. Will she rise to explain? How she can let her solemn utterances against the lodge stand on her printed records boldly sending them out into the whole church and at the same time allow her ministers not only to minister to Masons unrebuked, but receive new members who are in lodge fellowship by the solemn rite of confirmation into the church, is to me one of the most astonishing acts of duplicity conceivable. Thank God there are some in the council who are against the lodge. May the Lord help them to raise their voices like trumpets and show his people their sins. Rev. Sarver's sermon against the lodge is like leaven in the meal, it is working. May others venture out against this uncircumcized monster which is menacing the church and worrying the saints of the Most High God.

H. J. G. B.

The Widow's Friend.

Elmwood, Ill., July 12th, 1876.

Dear Cynosure:—As proof of the boasted charity of Freemasonry I wish to relate a little circumstance that has just come to my knowledge of the way such charity is dispensed. As this happened some years ago it may be objected to as old, yet I wish to remind such objectors that it happened in the palmy days of Masonry, before any movement had been made to bring its iniquities to light, since the celebrated Morgan murder.

Any person having a Grand lodge report for this State for 1861, will find in the report of "Horeb Lodge 303" the name of Lewis Corbin as J. W. As this was the first year of this lodge under charter, and as the said Corbin died in April, 1861, his name does not subquently appear in any of their reports, and what looks a little strange, he is not reported as being dead, although the craft performed their usual incantations around the grave, and displayed their little cotton aprons which they pretended were made of lamb-skin. The prayer was read by the W. M., who professed to despise Christianity. One citizen remarked to another, that he expected to hear him (the W. M.) swear a good many times, before he prayed again!

Now this same Lewis Corbin, was an acting member of the M. E. church, generally esteemed as a Christian man, and was quite prominent as a citizen, holding the office of justice of the peace, standing well in community. He was poor in this world's goods, and had poor health, his wife was industrious and by the aid of his brother managed to keep the wolf from the door during his long sickness. Finally word went out that Bro. Corbin, must soon die. Two days and nights before this event his secret friends put in an appearance and inquired after him, and offered to watch by him, and they came in and went out during these last two days and nights. But before Bro. Corbin died he called his brother and requested him to attend to his funeral and have his body laid away in the cemetery at Farmington by other members of the family.

While his brother was absent for a few hours at his own home to make preparations for the funeral and execute the trust reposed in him the leading Masons had gathered in to get the widow's consent to bury the body with "Masonic honors"! The principal argument was, that if she refused she would have no claim in the fraternity for assistance ever after. This had the desired effect, and in spite of the remonstrances of the brother and other friends who had no confidence in the hollow professions, the Masons gained their point by further promising that as the roads were too bad at that time to go to Farmington, they would bury him here, and afterwards remove the body to the cemetery at Farmington, and that the funeral expenses would be all paid by the lodge. Well, they buried him, and the body rests to-day in Elmwood cemetery, where they laid it more than 14 years ago, and men who made those promises to the friends of their dear brother are now living and are high Masons. Are they ashamed? No. They only wanted to advertise their fraud, and this was a good chance; a respectable man, respectably connected and they could get through cheap. The poor man who furnished the coffin assured me last week, that he had never received a cent for it and never expected to.

Of course they assisted the widow. Yes; I will tell how. Before Mr. Corbin died he gave his brother a gold watch worth seventy-five dollars, a sort of heir-loom in the family. The brother left it with Mrs. Corbin, and intended to give it to his brother's son, when he should be grown up. Mrs Corbin tried keeping boarders but it did not pay well, and she was encouraged to move to her friends, (Masons are great hands to shirk responsibility,) she could only raise money enough to pay within fifteen dollars of the expense of moving. She applied to the Masons, and one of them kindly loaned her the fifteen dollars on the security of the gold watch. She did not pay at the time set, and the brother before mentioned tried to find the watch to redeem it, but the friendly and charitable Mason had left the country and the watch was never recovered and this is how the widow was helped.

If such cases as the above were rare, we might say Masonry, as a system,' was not responsible, that they do make ample provision for the charities of which they boast; but unfortunately that is not the case, I am persuaded that there is hardly a lodge in the State that could escape the censure of all fair-minded people justly put upon such conduct; and I persume many of these are among the secrets of Masonry that will never be revealed. And yet the M. E., General conference by resolution claim a want of light!!! H. W. MARSH.

ELDER BERNARD'S BIOGRAPHY.

LOCKPORT, Ill., July 31, 1876.

I am glad to see the notice (editorial) in last week's paper concerning the compiling or a biography of Elder Bernard. There must be men who are competent for the work among the Elder's friends of western New York. If Hon. Seth W. Gates cannot do it, he surely can name the man that can.

Elder Bernard has been a standard bearer in the Baptist donomination for western New York the last fifty years, and has a general acquaintance and unblemished Christian character and reputation with the best men of the last two generations in that region for that period of time. I hope the right man will appear and the work speedily be accomplished. Fraternally yours,

ISAAC PRESTON.

OUR MAIL.

A. Baker, Tiskilwa, Bureau Co., Ill., writes:

"Press on, brothers, press the battle to the gates. You have friends here who send up prayers for you, and for all the warriors who are warring against those midnight conclaves. We should be glad to take you all by the hand and bid you God-speed. Remember you have warm friends in Tiskilwa. Bro. Hinman blew up the Masonic magazine here, and discomposed the craft very much. Thank God for sending him here. We can safely say that in all the battles our little Anti-masonic band have fought we have never lost one, for the Lord has helped us. We have a prayer-meeting at 2 p. m. every Sabbath at Bro. Fosdick's, and this work of removing stumbling-blocks is warmly pressed at the throne of grace."

R. J. Richards, Bowensburg, Hancock Co., Ill., writes:

"There seems to be some uncertainty as to the fact of Gov. Hayes, candidate for the Presidency, being a Mason. He is not a Freemason as his uncle Birchard says, but the editor of the Toledo Blade says that he is a 'member of the order of Odd-fellows.' So you see he is a secretist."

Josiah Shaw, Fall River, Columbia Co., Wis., writes:

"I have been sending off my Cynosures ever since the first number and hear they are doing a good work. They are right in form and spirit. There is much jealousy in the old parties and no faith in God, while our cause brightens every week."

Geo. Martin, Sac City, Sac Co., Iowa, writes:

"I have some hard times to get along with Masons, and some who are not Masons but will not believe what they hear about Masonry; and some will not read for fear they will believe. Now I am a Mason, having taken three degrees some nineteen years ago, but withdrew from the den of darkness about ten years ago, when God spoke peace to my soul and said, 'Come ye out from among them and be ye separate,' and I have obeyed; but I could have no freedom until I let the world know how I stood, and by the grace of God I expect to always stand."

James Auten, Galion, Crawford Co., O., who has been visiting since our June Convention, writes:

"I got home safely on the evening I left your place, and found all my affairs in good order. The grain cut and some two hundred bushels thrashed of the best quality. Our wheat crop comes in better than we expected. Our oat crop is good and hay about as usual. There will be but a light crop of apples, and peaches are a total failure. The potatoes bid fair for an abundant crop."

We are pleased to receive so encouraging a report of crops from Ohio.

Mrs. H. E. Hayden, Harmon, Lee Co., Ill., writes of preaching in Cortland as follows:

"My subject was 'Holiness to the Lord' and entire separation from the world. This of course included secret societies. I stated briefly a few reasons why a man could not be holy or wholly sanctified and be a Mason. The words acted upon them like an electric shock. I felt the influence of many opposing minds present. Some dropped their heads and some looked angry. At the close of the service the minister who sat in the pulpit with me arose and made some remarks. He intimated that that I had no real knowledge of Masonry. The Lord helped me to be patient and make no reply. I thought how long will these lying ministers go about the streets trying to cover up the truth?"

Mrs. Hayden had witnessed Mr. Ronayne's expose of the three degrees of Masonry, but a short time before preaching this sermon.

J. M. Stevenson, Washington, Iowa, writes:

"The pictures, Declaration of Independence, etc., came to hand all right. We are very much pleased with them; think they are splendid. However the main object in obtaining subscribers to the Cynosure, is the glorious reform it so nobly advocates. I feel that it is a reform that all Christian people should work for, and I have faith in its ultimate success, and believe that all true advocates will be suitably rewarded for their labor."

John McCullough, Pella, Marion Co., Ia., writes:

"I rejoice for the good work that Bro. Freeman is doing in Philadelphia, and hope and pray that his health may be preserved, that he may still battle against the works of darkness, and that he may be instrumental in convincing these poor, deluded Masons of the error of their ways, who have sworn away their liberty and their life and given themselves to the Masons. May the Lord hasten the time when these dark orders shall be swept out from the land."

Jonathan W. Moss, Cameron, Marshall Co., W. Va., writes:

"I never saw the Cynosure and only heard of it last Sunday in a conversation with an Anti-masonic friend on the ruinous effects of Masonry upon our Cameron Presbyterian church."

We believe we have many friends who have never seen the Cynosure, and hope our readers will be very diligent in searching them out.

Rev. W. S. May, Clarence, Cedar Co., Ia., writes:

"We are waking up the anti-secret cause in Iowa."

Nathan Bingham, Onconta, Otsego Co., N. Y., writes:

"I like the Cynosure. I think it an excellent paper and engaged in a great and good work. If I can get the tickets I intend to vote for Walker and Kirkpatrick. I think every vote cast on the Antimasonic ticket will have a telling influence. My motto is, do the right and God will take care of the consequences."

Theo. Graefe, Beck's Mills, Holmes Co., O., writes:

"I thank God that such a good Christian paper was started as the Cynosure. It is always a welcome visitor to me, and I prefer it before any other paper I know of. Not long since I spoke with a gentleman who had a brother who died as a Mason, and of course his widow made application to the lodge when they told her that if she would deed her land (40 acres) to the lodge they wodld support her. Masonic charity, indeed!"

Peter Howe, Wenona, Marshall Co., Ill., writes:

"I believe that one man like Ronayne who has been a Mason can do more good in accomplishing the downfall of Masonry than ten men who have not been Masons, and such should be kept in the field and constantly employed. I don't feel that money is lost on such men."

Rev. J. W. Gilbert, Streator, Ill., writes:

"Ronayne is here and things are getting very warm. We are look for lively times. The Lord reigns and the cause is his. We will walk in his presence. Victory is ours as sure as God is God and right is right."

J. G. Stauffer, Milford Square, Bucks Co., Pa., writes:

"I informed an Anti-masonic young man of your tracts and he is traveling around and distributing them everywhere. Sometimes he is in danger, but he is not afraid. I have distributed the Cynosure, and have made several young ministers Anti-masons. I pray for your success and wish you would send some lecturer to this part of Pennsylvania. We have a host of Anti-masons here but they are afraid to come out with their principles. Come and help us."

Cannot Bros. Callender, Raynor or others do something for this section of their State.

The Sabbath School.

LESSON FOR AUGUST 20.—THE VALUE OF WISDOM.

SCRIPTURE.—Prov. iii. 1-19. Commit 1-7; Primary Verse, 7.

1 My son, forget not my law, but let thine heart keep my commandments:
2 For length of days, and long life and peace, shall they add to thee.
3 Let not mercy and truth forsake thee; bind them about thy neck; write them upon the table of thine heart:
4 So shalt thou find favor and good understanding in the sight of God and man.
5 Trust in the Lord with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding.
6 In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths.
7 Be not wise in thine own eyes: fear the Lord, and depart from evil.
8 It shall be health to thy navel and marrow to thy bones.
9 Honor the Lord with thy substance, and with the firstfruits of all thine increase:
10 So shall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy presses shall burst out with new wine.
11 My son, despise not the chastening of the Lord; neither be weary of his correction:
12 For whom the Lord loveth he correcteth; even as a father the son in whom he delighteth.
13 Happy is the man that findeth wisdom, and the man that getteth understanding.
14 For the merchandise of it is better than the merchandise of silver, and the gain thereof than fine gold.
15 She is more precious than rubies: and all the things thou canst desire are not to be compared unto her.
16 Length of days is in her right hand; and in her left hand are riches and honor.
17 Her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace.
18 She is a tree of life to them that lay hold upon her: and happy is every one that retaineth her.
19 The Lord by wisdom hath founded the earth; by understanding hath he established the heavens.

—It is not the outward life, but the heart that God wants to be converted. He does not want us to save the husks for him, but the grain—not to give him only the outside, but the heart. Prov. xxiii. 26; Is. xxix. 13; lviii. 1-3; Jer. xii. 2; Ezek. xxxiii. 31; Acts viii. 21; 2 Tim. ii. 3, 5; 1 Tit. i. 16; Rev. iii. i.

—It is God's nature to give royally. He cannot confer sonship upon men without desiring, also to give them all the prosperity in this world that is safe for them to have. And so, in addition to salvation, he bestows upon them length of days, riches, honor, peace, health, and favor with God and with man. Deut. xv. 7, 10; xxviii. 8; Ps. xxi. 1-5; xxxvii. 3; xci. 16; Prov. xxviii. 27; Matt. vi. 31-33; Phil. iv. 19.

—But he will not spoil his children with gifts and indulgence. Earthly parents know how to deny their children in wisdom the things that would be hurtful to them, though the disappointment may be severe, and shall not God, with greater kindness and wisdom, refuse to bestow those upon his children which will be for their lasting injury and not for their good? Many things which men regard as chastisements are nothing more than needful denials. "No good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly." CHICAGO, THURSDAY, AUGUST 10, 1876.

SOUND POLITICS.—Our friend J. J. Thorndike, of Morgan county, Ill., argues for the Walker and Kirkpatriek ticket thus:

"Voting for Walker is helping us in the future. Keeping up our organization is example; and example is mightier than precept."

From the day when the Abolitionists first begun to oppose slavery by their votes, through the whole long agony, the one argument used to induee them to vote the Whig ticket, was: "If you throw away your vote on Birney or (afterwards) on Hale, you will put the Democrats in power." Sueh will be the argument in the present canvass against voting for Walker and Kirkpatrick. But this argument, if good once, is good forever. Yet if a Freemason, sworn to another allegiance than that which he owes to the United States, is unfit to hold offiee by American votes; we must sometime say so by withholding our votes from him. When?

GOOD TEMPLARISM.—Frederick Wagstaff in the Christian World gives, at large, an aecount of a split in the "Supreme Court" of this secret order, lately met in Louisville, Kentueky, on the question of admitting negroes. It seems this question has been sharply debated for several years, culminating, at last, in this split.

The writer in the World, who seems to be thoroughly posted in the affair and history of the order says:

"In England, the first advoeates of the order declared it to be an organization formed to embraee the entire human family, irrespeetive of ereed, raee, nationality, or color. In proof of this they were able to point to the fact that a red Indian had filled the office of Grand Worthy Chief Templar of Canada."

The above shows the "order" to be like all the rest, a latter day conspiraey against Christ; religions with Christ left out! and yet, having chaplains, creeds, prayer, and ritual; to be practiced by "the entire human family, irrespective of creed!" religion, says Maekey, "in whieh all mankind agree." "This is that anti-Christ which should come into the world."

THE STREATOR MOB.

When Elijah P. Lovejoy was shot at Alton the news flew to Cincinnati where I had just come from a year's lecturing in Pennsylvania. I was in a minister's meeting when the news arrived, composed of old Dr. Lyman Beecher, Dr. Stowe, Thornton A. Mills, Artemas Bullard, (brother to H. W. Beecher's wife) and others. All these ministers knew Lovejoy and respected him. Edward Beecher, then President of Illinois College, stood by Lovejoy's coffin and vindicated his cause to the crowd assembled at the funeral. But Artemas Bullard said, "Well, brethren, I must in justice say that brother Lovejoy has lost his life by his own imprudenee;" and went on saying nothing against the mob, but censuring Lovejoy. A Rev. Mr. Hurlburt, who was present and stood by Lovejoy when he fell, cried out with great agony at Bullard's cowardly eondemnation of the dead martyr, and his inferential justification of the mob who went armed to Gilman's ware-house, and shooting its owner, destroyed a printing press which had not yet been set up, and so was innocent of printing anything prudent or imprudent.

The same detestable and craven spirit now condemns the anti-secret reformers for the crimes of those who assail them. And as the time draws nigh when the whole accursed, dark idolatry must go down, trimmers and temporizers, the "fearful and unbelieving" will "help the ungodly and love them that hate the Lord."

Read carefully the accounts of the Wenona and Streator mobs as given by Messrs. Ronayne and Hinman, and then read the following accurate description of lodge-Masonry by their orator Brainerd in 1825. Note carefully that Masonry still has the "lowest of men," those "capable of being directed by others"; and remember that, disregarding warnings given in time to have saved them, the ancient covenant people of God lost their nation; and that the United States soil is ridged with the graves of men fallen in the slavery war, who might and would have been saved but for such men as Artemas Bullard. He was himself afterward killed in a smash-up at Gasconade, Mo., while on a pleasure ride.

June 24, 1825, W. F. Brainard before the Union lodge, New London, Conn., Conn., asks "What is Masonry now? It is powerful. It comprises men of rank, wealth, office and talent, in power and out of power, and that in almost every place where power is of any importance; and it comprises among other classes in the community, to the lowest, in large numbers, active men, united together and capable of being directed by the efforts of others, so as to have the force of eoncert throughout the civilized world. They are distributed, too, with the means of knowing one another, and the means of keeping secret, and the means of co-operating in the desk, in the legislative hall, on the bench, in every gathering of business, in every party of pleasure, in every enterprise of government, in every domestic circle, in peace and in war, among enemies and friends, in one place as well as in another, so powerful, indeed, is it at this time that it fears nothing from violence, either public or private, for it has every means to learn it in season to counteract, defeat and punish."

ILLINOIS STATE WORK.—A number of pledges made for the Illinois State work at Peoria last year are yet unpaid. If these are promptly met during the present month the State agent will be able to report all his dues met. Friends in Illinois have done well in sustaining their State work in the past. Keep the reeord bright. All who have unredeemed pledges will save trouble of correspondenee if they will send in eontributions promptly. And if not sure whether they have pledged anything send on a donation anyhow and make sure of that. Send contributions to the Treasurer of the State Association, H. L. KELLOGG, Cynosure Office, Chicago.

—Past Master Ronayne will visit Ohio, Pennsylvania, and Indiana in September and October; will the friends desiring expositions in these States send their communications as soon as possible to this office.

—We have given considerable space to the history of the Streator and Wenona meetings which will form an important era in the reform in Marshall, LaSalle, and Livingston eounties in this State. To give the facts entire, we are unable to print this week very interesting reports from Michigan and Connecticut of lecture work performed by Bro. A. S. Springstein and Jas S. Perry.

—Through the efforts of our Publishers and the General Agent under instructions from the Directors board, Mr. Thos. Hodge of this city has gone to Philadelphia to stand by our Centennial banner and labor for the reform as Elder Freeman has been doing. He has been for years an earnest advoeate of the cause, though less demonstrative than many. Its prineiples he thoroughly understands, and they will find a sincere advocate in him at Philadelphia. Mr. E. S. Cook of our Publishers is now visiting the Exposition, and a letter received last week from him will duly appear.

MISSOURI STATE ASSOCIATION.

The State Christian Association opposed to sceret societies will hold their annual meeting in Well's Hall in Chillicothe, commencing on the evening of the 30th of August at 7½ o'clock, and continue over the 31st. The election of offieers for the coming year, and the appointment of a State lecturer will be in order. Rev. J. P. Stoddard of Chicago, Ill., is expected to be present to address the Association. By order of the Exeeutive Committee.

DR. COOK INJURED.—A letter dated Columbia City, Ind., on Saturday fr m Bro. W. Shuh tells us of an injury suffered by Dr. Cook:—

"The friends of reform will regret to learn that while going to the lecture last evening near South Whitley, the team of Mr. John Shuh ran away; the driver was quite badly hurt and Dr. S. L. Cook was so badly injured as to be unable to speak, which was a great disappointment to the large audience which had assembled. Dr. Cook was returning from giving a course of lectures in Grant county. He is well taken care of by friends, and hopes soon to be able to resume the lecture work."

The Wenona meetings, however, were tame, common-place proceedings, even the rough, rowdy, boisterous scenes on Friday evening and the street-fight on the side walk; when compared with what took plaee in Oriental Hall in Streator on the Monday evening following, when I appeared to lecture there and work the first degree. And as what took place on that occasion may be of interest to your large circle of readers I shall give as minutely as I can a history of that disgraceful affair.

I arrived in Streator on Saturday in eompany with Rev. J. W. Gilbert of the U. B. church of that place and on the Monday evening following appeared in the Oriental Hall to commence a series of lectures, and public exposures of Freemasonry. The Hall was densely packed, every available space in the building being occupied, the Masons being present in full force. My preliminary arrangements events having been completed I began at about 8 o'clock to give my usual prearpatory explanations in regard to the inconsisteney of Masonic teaching, proving from the highest Masonic authority that Masonry is a self-convicted liar; that it contradicts itself and that its teachings both moral and religious are in direct opposition to the plain express teachings of the Holy Bible.

During the hour that I thus occupied in my introductory explanations the Masons frequently broke out in yells, calling all sorts of approbrious names and using every means to annoy me, to alarm the large number of respeetable ladies present and to set the low whiskey rabble on to create confusion and disorder.

Matters went on in this way as I have said during the first hour, but if

during the preliminary proceedings, you would imagine that hell itself with all its fearful furies and spurred on by the most malignant and demoniae hate, was set free in Oriental Hall, as soon as I began to open the lodge "in due and ancient form" and to explain and comment upon the opening ceremonies, and especially the opening Christless prayer. In due time the Secretary and Junior Deacon retired into the ante-room, the former to ask the usual constitutional questions and to collect the usual fee, and the latter to prepare the candidate for initiation into the sublime "mysteries and privileges of Freemasonry." The Junior Deacon having performed his accustomed duties of preparation, the usual alarm was given at the door, and in due time the Rev. Septimus Jones was led into the lodge room; having on the old drawers, hoodwink, cable-tow and slipper; being "neither naked nor clothed, barefoot, nor shod;" in fact "being duly and truly prepared." And this occurring as it did before one of the largest audiences ever collected at Streator, it set the Freemasons a howling, yelling, stamping, roaring, cursing, that for the space of some minutes at least I was unable to proceed and only did so when the fearful whirlwind of mad fury had spent itself. The chairman, Mr. Phillips, in vain appealed to the furious mas of Masonic demons to keep quiet and to respect the ladies present if not himself or the speaker. But all to no purpose. According as the initiation proceeded the mad fury and ungovernable rage of the Masonic fraternity if any thing broke out with and violence, and so continued until the time when the rite of illumination or removing the hoodwink was about to be performed, and then eggs were thrown, and yells set up that under any other circumstances would be truly alarming. One of the eggs struck the scenery of the stage, another was smashed on the floor quite close to where I was standing, and another barely missed Bro. Mulholland's head, who sat as one of my officers. I went on, however, and finished my work as I always do, notwithstanding the continued interruption, and fearful howlings of the infuriated Masonic mob, that seemed to imagine they could do just as they pleased, and it appears they were partly justified in so thinking as present showed by their conduct that they were in perfect accord with the mob even going so far as to pull and jerk at Mr. Hinman's table while removing it to the outer hall. They also refused or failed to arrest some of the Masons who in addition to creating the riot stole many of his books.

The meeting was closed in the usual orderly manner on my part but the Masons still continued their mad howl, and finished up on the sidewalk by egging and otherwise roughly handling the man who acted as candidate on the occasion.

At the close of the meeting, and after most of the audience had dispersed Mr. Buckley and the Messrs. Phillips. with Mr. Gilbert accompanied me down the back stairs of the building and thence to Mr. Buckley's house.

COUNCIL OF WAR.

On the followingday (Tuesday) there was scarcely any other topic of conversation in the stores, or on the street, but the disgraceful scenes of the evening before. Every one felt ashamed of it, and many loudly expressed themselves that it was an everlasting disgrace to the town of Streator, that free speech should be there suppressed, while the Freemasons clearly saw that they in an especial manner had so covered their pet institution with odium and ignominy, and that they had done more to expose th infernal workings of this notorious society, than if I had worked the degrees and lectured against it for one whole week.

About 10 o'clock A. M. a meeting of the friends was held at the residence of Rev. Mr. Wimsett, consisting of Revs. Gilbert, Mulholland, Powell, Hinman,and Wimsett, and Messrs. Phillips, Mayhon,Buckley, and others of Streator. At this meeting there was a division as to the feasibility of continuing the exposnre, and a vote being taken it was found that four was opposed to a continnance, three fo. a continuance, and three undecided until the authorties could be consulted and it be ascertained what protection if any could be secured to the speaker.

LODGE STRATEGY.

In the meantime the Masons in order to get clear by some means of the dirty work of the night previous, determined that they would stay away on this (Tuesday) evening and it being already planned that members of other secret societies, led on by such men as John Lomasney of Wilmington Lodge No. 208; Moore,Withrow, Painter and others of Streator Lodge, with the assistance of Mr.Ed. Bayles, should make a rush for the stage, having previonsly turned off the gas, and in the darkness and confusion, carry out the plot so well planned and which was supposed to be concocted in Lomasney's saloon during the previous night.

The question before the meeting of friends on this morning was, whether nnder the circumstances it would be wise or prudent for them to order a continuance of the exposure. By getting into a squabble with the Odd-fellows, Druids, &c., they thought the Masonic institution would have a chance to escape or at least to gain back what it had evidently lostthe night previous, and as the object of these expositions and lectures was to create a sentiment against Freemasonry and that already being accomplished on the night before, it was thonght advisable to let the matter remain as it then was, and so let the "Ancient Craft" suffer from the stigma that must always attach itself to it in Streator.

Before finally deciding on this course, however, it was thought best to canvass the town and wait upon the and report to an adjourned meeting to be held at the same place at 5 o'clock P. M. At this adjonrned meeting, after hearing all the reports, and finding that the town Board could not promise anything like ample protection,from the malice of an infuriated mob of whiskey men and the l.w rabble hounded on by Masonic influence, it was resolved unanimously to discontinne any further exposures of Masonry in Streator for the present. This was found to be the most prudent course, especially when it was learned that the gas was to be cut in the street or turned off in the hall, and it was quite evident that some such infamous plot was on foot when it was found that Mr. Wheeler, one of the lessee's of the Hall, was most anxious to break his lease and return $20 of the money.

This he was afterwards permitted to do.

For my own part I was perfectly satisfied that I would not be permitted to work the third degree of Masonry in Streator; and while I admire some men for their conrage and out-spoken manly sentiments, yet I cannot at all approve of their rashness. Freemasonry has snffered in Streator—suffered most terribly, both from my exposure and their own anti-Christian, antirepublican, and villianous conduct. Masonry has been proved to be an institution that cannot and dare not be discnssed, and that its members to hide its hideons deformity will even resort to personal violence in snppressing free speech. "He that doeth evil hateth the light neither cometh to the light lest his deeds should be reproved."

E. RONAYNE.

THE STATE AGENT'S ACCOUNT.

DEAR BRO. K.—After two successful meetings in Cerro Gordo, Piatt Co., I spent the Sabbath at Cornell, Livingston Co., preaching in the M. E. church, and came on Monday to Streator, where I met Mr. Ronayne, who had just concluded a series of successful meetings in Wenona, and was prepared to work the three degrees of Masonry for the benefit of Streator and vicinity. Oriental Hall had been secured with a seating capacity of about nine hundred and space for two hundred more.

Evening came and the hall was full to overflowing. It was soon apparent that a mob intended to capture the meeting and control it. An insane man was nominated for chairman, and a determined effort was made to force him upon the meeting. At last a good man was called to the chair, and the lecture commenced. Not much disturbance took place until Mr. Ronayne commenced working the degree. Then the hooting commenced. The chairman made every effort to sustain order, and called on the policemen to arrest those who were disturbing the congregation; but the police force were in manifest sympathy with the mob. Some of them took part in the riotous proceedings, and others threatened to arrest peaceable citizens who desired to have order. Language of the most insulting, abusive character was used, and finally Masonry's strongest argument—rotten eggs was thrown on the platform. I had a bookstand in the back part of the hall. One half of my books were violently taken away. The most obscene and abusive language was used. I was ordered out of the building, and one man attempted to put me out which he might easily have done, as I made no resistance. With much difficulty—after many pullings and pushings—I got my stand and books to a place of safety and returned to the hall. With a heroic determination, and by the aid of some hundreds of ladies, who refused to be frightened, Mr. Ronayne finished the degree, and the audience was dismissed in an orderly manner.

Next morning the town was full of rumors. It came privately from Masonic sources that the mob intended to cut the gas pipe outside of the hall, leave us in the dark, and then seize Mr. Ronayne, take him out of the building, and treat him to a coat of tar and feathers.

The Streator lodge had held a special meeting on Saturday evening. They were out in full force on Monday evening, but said they should not be present on Tuesday night. The authorities would not guarantee that order should be preserved, though they made some rather vague promises of efforts in that direction. Prominent citizens were seriously alarmed, and feared the consequences of another meeting. The owners of the hall wished to rescind the contract, and were unwilling that it should be used without a guarantee that it should not be injured. We could give no such guarantee, and in view of all the circumstances it was thought best that the other meetings should be given up.

And now where is the responsibility of this violent suppression of the right of free speech? I answer, not with the mob. True some of them were Masons and all were fighting for the institution, but probably none of them would have disturbed the meeting but for an inspiring influence from some other source than themselves. It was not with the authorities. They were doubtless to blame and more to blame than the rest of the Masonic fraternity to which they belonged; but the special guilt rests upon the Masons of Streator as a fraternity. Some of them are highly respectable men. The Grand Chaplain of the Grand Lodge of Illinois is pastor of the M. E. church in Streator, and neither he nor other prominent Masons would openly endorse mob violence. But it is just those men who affirm and give character to the malignant and wicked falsehood that all renouncing Masons are guilty of moral perjury; and that all Antimasons are liars and slanderers; and hence deserve to be suppressed by the mob. There are always enough lewd fellows of the baser sort to hound down any man or set of men, however innocent, who have thus been delivered over to them, and we are but living over the experiences of the past, when, as in all other reforms, "Judgment is turned away backward, and justice standeth afar off; for truth is fallen in the street and equity cannot enter. Yea, truth faileth; and he that departeth from evil maketh himself a prey." Isa. lxix. 14,15.

It is about time that these Masonic ministers should be unmasked; and that they who willingly suffer themselves to be understood as charging Bishop Hamlin, Dr. Colver, and C. G. Finney with perjury, falsehood, and slander, and who by their adherence to the order do necessarily make this charge, should be seen in their true light. For either those great and good men were liars and slanderers, or these men are hypocrites and traducers. Let the righteous God be judge. Yours in the Lord,

H. H. HINMAN.

A Prayer.

Oh! that mine eyes might closed be
To what concerns me not to see;
That deafness might possess mine ear
To what concerns me not to hear;
That truth my tongue might always tie
From ever speaking foolishly;
That no vain thought might ever rest,
Or be conceived within my b east;
That by each deed, and word, and thought,
Glory may to my God be brought!
But what are wishes! Lord, mine eye
On thee is fixed, to thee I cry!
Wash, Lord, and purify my heart,
And make it clean in every part;
And when 'tis clean, Lord keep it too,
For that is more than I can do.

What Holiness Does for Us.

In general, it purifies our entire nature, saving us from all sin, by destroying the carnal mind. In particular—

1st.—It removes all pride from the soul, so that we think, speak, and act without attributing any merit in, or attaching any honor to ourselves. We do all to please God, and nothing to please ourselves. We feel that "Jesus is all in all, and we are nothing at all."

2nd.—It destroys all selfishness, by filling us with love to all men. We can "Lay down our lives for the brethren," "In honor preferring one another." It makes us "Seek another's wealth"—i. e. his prosperity and success, even at the expense of our own.

3rd.—It takes away the fear of man, by giving us a holy boldness to do our duty, and declare all that Jesus has done for us. We are not afraid of our reputation. We glory in having our "names cast out as evil." We obey God without reference to what people will do, or say, or think.

4th.—It entirely destroys all angry feelings. Circumstances do not provoke us. We have the mind of Christ, and can say with the poet,

"Anger I no more shall feel, Always even, always still."

All propensity to get mad is taken out, and gentleness rules the heart. Glory be to God.

5th.—It removes all impatience. A holy person never frets, nor scolds; is never sour and disagreeable; never repines under adverse conditions; can suffer "joyfully the spoiling of his goods," and "glory in tribulations." He feels as ready to suffer for Jesus sake, as to shout and sing for him. He can say in all things, " Thy will be done."

6th.—It destroys all love of the "world and the things that are in the world." The person having true holiness does not "conform to the world in dress, in conversation, or behavior."

Holy people are plain in their dress. They hate fashion. Gold, and pearls, and costly array, and all outward adornings are an abomination to them. Their "conversation is in heaven." They cannot jest, or joke, or smilingly give countenance to those who do. They do not seek after worldly honor, or wealth. Their entire "affections" are on "things above;" hence they labor to please God, and advance his cause by giving themselves, their children, and their property into his hands, giving him praise when he takes and uses any part as he will.

7th.—It keeps us from "all appearance of evil." We cannot fellowship wickedness of any sort, nor seek company in worldly associations. A holy man can not affiliate with Masonry, or any oath-bound secret society. The command is, "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them." He loves to obey. He does not trust in that doctrine of devils, that "All means are sanctified by the goodness of the end sought, or aimed at." Consequently he will not endorse church fairs and lottery festivals, nor countenance other doubtful expedients of supporting the Gospel; such as auctioneering seats of worship, and making the parsonage a "house of mirth, and frolic, and dancing."

8th.—It saves from all filthiness of the flesh. God not only requires purity of soul, but also holiness of body. We are "to cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh, and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God."

A holy person after a Bible sort will not become nor remain a slave of any sensual or depraved appetite. He cannot use tobacco, nor opium, nor morphine. He loathes and abhors all such filthiness. He feels that he cannot use such hurtful and vain things, in the "Name of the Holy Jesus giving thanks unto the Father by him." To claim holiness while a slave to habit, is to practically "deny the power of God." They who possess Bible holiness, are neat in their persons, and surroundings. A woman that is slovenly in her appearance, and in her house-work, is not transformed soul and body to God's pattern of entire purity. We are to have our "bodies washed with pure water" as well as our "hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience," if we "enter into the holy of holies, by the blood of Jesus."

10th.—In conclusion, Bible holiness transforms the whole being. Paul's prayer was, "I pray God that your whole Spirit, and soul, and body, be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ".—1 Thess. v. 25.

This prayer is answered in the hearts of such as have "gone on unto perfection," and have continued it the faith. Holiness lifts the whole being up into God. Perfect peace, perfect rest, perfect joy, perfect love. Such is the state of those who walk before God with a perfect heart. Jesus is the "Author and finisher of our faith." "Now hath he appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself." Then said he, "Lo I come to do thy will, O God." "By the which will we are sanctified."

May God help us all to believe and received all that Jesus hath wrought for us. Amen.—Earnest Christian.

Santa Clara Valley of California.

II.

The productions of this valley are varied and extensive; and as is the case in nearly all parts of California, mineral wealth is included among them. The cereals grow in abundance, wheat being the staple product. In years gone by a hundred bushels per acre has been raised; but the farmers of now-a-days are content with from thirty to sixty bushels per acre. This is generally called a "good crop." The cultivation of corn is not extensively carried on, the cool nights not being conducive to its growth. All the ordinary vegetables are grown with success; but potatoes, squashes, and beets grow luxuriantly, the last two reaching a mammoth size.

Fruit of almost every variety grows in unstinted abundance. Peaches, plums, pears, prunes, cherries, and many other kinds are adapted to California soil and climate. From a financial standpoint, fruit-growing in California pays. Cherries perhaps, yield more revenue than any other kind. Good cherries are valued from 12½ to 25 cents per pound, retail, during their most plentiful period.

The culture of the prune is but a recent development in California fruit-growing; and it has turned out a grand success. Trees of five years standing will and do, it is said, yield a hundred pounds of fruit; which often being dried sells at 16 or 20 cents per pound retail. Unlike the cherry market, that for prunes cannot be overdone, as dried prunes can be shipped to any port of the world.

The climate and the soil are perfectly adapted to its culture, and therefore the vine flourishes in this State, and thousands of acres that are useless for any other purpose will grow excellent grapes. Grape-growing is now the most important feature in California fruit culture. Large quantities of the fruit of the vine are sold for the table and other edible purposes; but the great bulk of the crop is made into wine. The vine is already largely cultivated and the number of acres put to this purpose is constantly and rapidly increasing. It seems that California's wines as well as her fruit have gained a wide celebrity in the East and abroad. Thus it seems, as the climate and soil are so well adapted to grape growing, and its necessary result, wine and brandy-making, that California bids fair to become a great liquor-producing State; unless Divine Providence interposes in some unforeseen manner to change the hearts of her young men and women, for those of the old ones are certainly wedded to their idols.

The world-renowned quick-silver mines of the New Almaden as well as several others are situated in the foot-hills, twelve miles south of San Jose. These are the most valuable mines of the kind known and for many years controlled the quick-silver market.

The manufactures of Santa Clara Valley are not very extensive, and with the exception of a few woolen and paper mills are not worthy of that name.

The climate of this place has now become as famous as that of Italy. The seasons are two: the wet and dry. The former commences in November and ending in May; and the latter has sway the rest of the year. During the rainy season the storms come periodically, generally at the change from the old to the new moon, and are usually of several days duration. Cloudy weather is almost unknown here, and when it ceases to rain the clouds soon give place to genial sunshine. November first usually brings a blustering wind and heavy rain, which continues about five days. This generally is followed by bright, cheerful weather, which lasts until a day or two before Christmas, when the winter's rain sets in in earnest and continues most of the following month. It is expected to rain considerable in February and some in March. When this latter rain fails, California has a dry year and poor crops. April is showery, the first of May has a gentle rain, and then comes six months without one single raindrop. The hay is stacked, and the sacks of threshed wheat piled in the field until November returns, without damage to either.

In this valley there are seldom more than three days of hot weather at one time, and very little that can be so called during the whole year. The nights are always cool and one needs considerable covering when sleeping. The following is the mean temperature for July, the hotest month, and for December, the coldest during the year:—

6 A. M.	12:30 P. M.	6 P. M.
36°:61	53°:67	45°:26

There is one other thing which is pecular to this State—dust. During the three last months of the dry season, the traveler Eneas-like, is enveloped in a cloud—but is of dust. "Although a native, and to the manner born" I cannot say that even I enjoy the manner in which it filters through one's clothing and familiarly crawls down one's back(!). There is, however, one redeeming quality to this dust, and that is that it will brush off. It is said eastern dust won't do this.

California is not a rail-road State; yet San Jose has two. One connects with San Francisco, and also runs down the coast. The other connects with the Central Pacific and San Francisco.

A False Trust in Religion.

Religion is not what God asks. Religion may tie the hands, may fetter the steps, may gag the mouth; religion does keep many men decent, respectable, conscientious, honored in their generation; but religion never touches the heart, never brings the self-will into harmony with the will of God, never cleans the breast, and clears the soul, and cleanses the shrine, for a noble, a confiding, a self-forgetting communion with the unseen; gives no sufficient motive, inspires no available strength for difficult decisions, for ambiguous turnings, for the self-crucifixions involved in the Cross, for the transformation which qualifies for heaven.

For these things—and at any moment of your life these things may be suddenly required of you—no mere check, no mere chain, no mere foregoing or refusing; there must be a positive thing for these emergencies; that which Balaam lacked, and therefore came twice for leave; that which Balaam lacked, and therefore went with the princes by God's permission, yet under God's anger. There must be a positive thing, which religion is not; and that positive thing being interpreted, is the love of God.—C. J. Vaughan.

Laugh and crow,
Shout and grow;
Jolly times have they!"

"What do they say in Baby-land?"
"Why the oddest things;
Might as well
Try to tell
What a birdie sings."

"Who is the queen of Baby-land?"
"Mother, kind and sweet,
And her love,
Born above,
Guides the little feet."

"I must talk to you about Jesus."

A little girl, thirteen years old, belonging to a missionary school in Ceylon, was converted. After a time she wished to go to see her mother, who was a heathen, for the purpose of talking with her about her soul's concern. On reaching home her mother expressed much pleasure at seeing her spread a mat for her to sit down upon; and as the first act of the mother on such occasions is to provide something for her children to eat, told her that she would go and cook some rice for her.

The girl replied that she was not hungry, and did not wish to eat, but wanted to talk with her. The mother replied that she would talk with her after she had prepared her rice. The little girl persisted in her wishes, telling her that as she worshiped idols, and might lose her soul, she had a desire to speak to her about Jesus Christ. The mother expressed her dislike at what she had said; and as the child still continued to say that she wished to talk with her, she threatened to punish her. The little girl said in reply, "Mother, tho' you do whip me, I must talk with you about Jesus Christ," and began to weep.

The mother's heart was touched; She sat down and her little daughter talked with her and prayed with her. The child's interest in her behalf was so great, that she was heard praying for her mother during all parts of the night. The result was that the mother forsook her idols and became a Christian, and her conversion was followed by the conversion of one or two others.—Missionary Advocate.

How Niagara almost Ran Dry.

On March 29th, 1848, a remarkable phenomenon occurred. The preceding winter had been intensely cold, and the ice formed on Lake Erie was unusually thick. In the warm days of early spring, this mass of ice was loosened around the shores of the lake and detached from them. During the forenoon of the day named, a stiff easterly wind moved it up the lake. A little before sunset, the wind chopped suddenly round and blew a gale from the west. This brought the vast field of ice back again with such tremendous force that it filled in the neck of the lake and its outlet so as to form a very effective dam, that caused a remarkable diminution in the outflow of water. Of course it needed but little time for the Falls to drain off the water below this dam. The consequence was, that on the morning of the following day, the river was nearly half gone. The American channel had dwindled to a deep and narrow creek. The British channel seemed to have been smitten with a quick consumption, and seemed to be fast passing away. Far up from the head of Goat Island out into the Canadian rapids, and from the foot of Goat Island out beyond the old Tower to the deep channel of the Horseshoe fall, the water was gone. The rocks were bare, black and forbidding. The roar of Niagara had subsided to a moan. This extraordinary syncope of the water lasted all the day, and night closed over the strange scene. But during the night the dam gave way, and the next morning, the river was restored in all its strength, beauty, and majesty.—Scribner.

How to Find a Person's Name.

Let the person whose name you wish to know tell you in which of the upright columns the first letter of his name is found. If it be found in but one column, it is the top letter; if it occurs in more than one column, it is found by adding the alphabetical numbers of the top letters of these columns, and the sum will be the number of the letter sought. By taking one letter at a time in this way, the whole name can be ascertained. For example take the word "Jane." J is found in the two columns commencing with B and H; which are the second and eighth letters down the alphabet; their sum is ten, and the tenth letter down the alphabet is J, the letter sought. The next letter A, appears in but one column, where it stands at the top. N is seen in the columns headed B, D, and H; these are the second, fourth, and eighth letters of the alphabet, which added give the fourteenth or N, and so on. The use of this table will excite no little curiosity among those unacquainted with the fore going explanation.—Agriculturist.

Sleep the Best Stimulant.

The best thing for a man to do when he feels to weak too carry anything through is to go to bed and sleep for a week if he can. This is the only recuperation of brain power, the only actual recuperation of brain force; because, during sleep, the brain is in a state of rest, in a condition to receive and appropriate particles of nutriment from the blood, which takes the place of those which have been consumed in previous labor, since the very act of thinking consumes or burns up solid particles, as every turn of the wheel or screw of the splendid steamer is the result of consumption by fire of the fuel of the furnace. The supply of consumed brain substance can only be had from the nutritive particles in the blood, which were obtained from the food eaten previously; and the brain is so constituted that it can best receive and appropriate to itself those nutritive particles during a state of rest, of quiet and stillness of sleep. Mere stimulants supply nothing in themselves; they goad the brain, and force it to greater consumption of its substance, until that substance has been so exhausted that there is not power enough left to receive a supply, just as men that are so near death by thirst and starvation, that there is not power enough left to swallow anything, and all is over.

Evening Damps.

One more fruitful cause of disease remains to be noted, and that is, excessive diurnal changes of temperature. The range of the thermometer from noonday to morning or evening is not only greater in the country, but the heavy dews consequent upon this render the changes more perceptible and less easily resisted by the human system. During the day the heat is felt more severly than in the city, where shelter during exercise is obtainable for most of the day, and when evening comes on, with its cool breezes, incautious persons expose themselves with little or no additional clothing. They came into the country to be comfortable, they say, and they ride or sit in the open air till thoroughly cooled if not slightly chilled. At the same hour next day they are again chilled, and so on until intermittent fever or some one of its kindred diseases, so cordially invited, steps in and takes full possession. We by no means repudiate the malarial origin of these diseases, but we do say that such a course of conduct strongly predisposes the system to the influence of that dread unknown destroyer.

Such checks of perspiration are also frequent causes of intestinal diseases—more frequent than any other, as is notoriously seen in the greater prevalence of dysentery and kindred disorders when the contrast between the temperature of night and day is most marked.—Dr. Searle.

How to Destroy Musquetoes.

The strongest crystalized acid should be placed in a bottle, and covered with the same quantity of strong red cod-liver oil; shake the bottle thoroughly until a white foam appears; if such foam does not arise, however, a small quantity of powdered lime should be added, with a little water. Pour the mixture into a dish or other convenient article, and place directly under the open window, as it is from that quarter the musquito enters. In my humble opinion, the effect should be explained in this manner: The moment the musquito enters, it looses the scent of blood; for, as the combined odor of the oil and acid is much more powerful than that of the blood, it follows as a consequence that the musquito becomes suddenly perplexed. The consequence is, that after scrambling and skirmishing about in the dark, the musqueto is led, as it were, instinctively into the mixture, where it is either drowned in the oil or burned to death by the acid. Formerly was accustomed to smear my face, arms and breast with the strong oil alone, but I frequently rose in the morning smelling so terribly that, though it protected me from musquito bites, I was happy to lay it aside. I have slaughtered more musquitos with the article named above than ever I could have done with my fists or any other dangerous weapons.—Cor. Scientific American.

Sheep should some better feed than the bare stubble at this season. With some grain or mixed feed, sheep will pick around the fields and consume much of the rubbish. No animal has a more vigorous digestion than a sheep, or can more readily turn fodder into meat and fat—but it must have something from which it can produce these. Not even a sheep can bring something out of nothing, and yet many farmers who keep a few sheep seem to act as though they thought sheep could do this. Those who make a business of sheep-raising know that they must have good food and the best care, or that with their low nervous system and small supply of blood, they go down very quickly. A sheep has a very small brain, and but four or five pounds of blood, and possesses no force or power to resist misfortune. But having little nervous force, it wasts no energy in action, but eats and rests, and turns all he eats into profit. This will explain why sheep will fall away and die off so quickly if neglected. Neglect now will be irreparable by and by. "A sheep well summered is half wintered."

The Lawn.—The lawn is the chief element of beauty in all places whether large or small; if cut up by needless paths or by too many flower beds, its effect is frittered away and it looks like a mere appendage to the paths and beds, rather than the ground work in which these are made. The lawn is expected to last many years, and the work must be thorough. The ground should be drained, if need-be, leveled or graded, and prepared better than for any field crop; then sow red-top, Kentucky blue-grass, or, in light soils, Rhode Island bent, with a pint of white clover to the bushel, if desired, using from three bushels to the acre, on rich land, to five bushels on poorer soil. In small yards it is better to lay sods, if a a good turf can be had; and in large lawns lay a margin of turf along the walks and roads, and around any beds made in the lawn.—Agriculturist.

OBITUARY.

MRS. BETSEY BLISS KEYES departed this life, Oct. 28th, 1875, aged 73 years. She was one of those deep thinkers who more than a score of years since began to compare the teachings of God's Word with the Masonic power that is so well represented therein as the beast that was (power in Morgan's time) and is not, (it had years in which it was hushed that it might be forgotten) and yet is (now in full blast with a few variations.) Previous to, and while writing she would not allow her mind to be biassed by reading any Anti-masonic work, but took the organ of the fraternity, the Masonic Tidings. Her writings which are taken from comparisons of the Bible and Masonic teachings will no doubt some time find their true place in print.

She was the last member of the family and sister to Amos Bliss, the printer to whom Horace Greeley was first apprenticed. Her husband was cousin of Cyrus Cregg of Perry, Wyoming Co., N. Y., whose wife saw the murder of a man in the lodge-room in Bristol, Pa., and afterward saw his body thrown into Delaware river, and years afterward made affidavit to it on her death-bed.

She was an old inhabitant of that region, and especially in the prime of life, gave much of her energies to the church, and was a main support in the Sunday school and the impressions of her teachings on the minds of the young will live after her earth-work is done.

For twenty years a widow she still looked to the widow's God as a support in all the burdens and trials of life, and breathed her life out while leaning upon the Savior for strength to carry her through. She will be sadly missed from her old home, and the circle of friends to whom she was endeared.

MRS. ETTIE RUGG COWELL, M. D.

Died at Perrysburg, Cass Co., N. Y., May 3rd, 1876, ANN MARIA TOUSEY, wife of Jonathan G. Rugg, aged 77 years.

She was among the first supporters, and a steady reader of the Cynosure in the progress of which, together with other papers which dared to discuss all the great evils of the day she took great interest and disseminated those principles of reform whenever an opportunity allowed. Her early home was in the vicinity of the Morgan murder, and she has attended gatherings in the ball-room where he was placed to wait for the relay of teams that was to bear him to death; and has heard the respectable landlady say "She took him his food, but he well knew he could not have a mouthful until he promised he wouldn't make a noise when she took the gag from his mouth." Fifty years she upheld and helped to unfold the banner of Christ before the people, in early years her house serving as a church for the preaching of the Word and a home for the itinerant.

The Rev. I. Tackett, whose death was chronicled two years since, labored six years on that charge, was urged to join the lodge to increase his usefulness, and gave her an account of his treatment by the brethren when he left them. His age and important ministry was too strong testimony against them, and the church received him again within her borders.

Mrs. Rugg was aunt to Rev. Thos. Tousey of Genesee Conference, N. Y., and his brother the late Alvin Tousey, a few years since pastor of a Baptist church in Chicago.

She had a severe sickness while visiting her daughter, Mrs. Cowell, M. D., in Plainfield, Ill., but recovered sufficiently to reach her home in western New York, as she told them to say a few words to each, and then bid them good by, for her home now must be in the mansion that Christ had prepared for her. She was largely known for the good she had done, having lived in that community fifty-six years, and the five weeks she survived among them, was marked by much attention from old and young. She had in her life administered to their wants in every honorable capacity within her sphere, alike in their health and their sickness.

The remark was often heard, "The staff will be broken; who will fill her place?" The afflicted husband surrounded by all the children thus called together from various parts, laid away the dear form of a precious mother amid the sympathies and tears of a large circle of friends. ANON.

REV. GEO. PEGLER of Beaver, Minnesota, died on July 30th last, in the seventy-sixth year of his age. He was an earnest advocate of our reform, and labored with voice and pen to carry it on. He was, says the Wesleyan, "a native of London, self-educated, pious, unusually quick of discernment, a fluent speaker, a good writer, and a man of integrity and zeal in every reformatory enterprise.

Religious Intelligence.

—Rev. R. T. Cross, whose excellent discourse to his church at Hamilton, N. Y., on "Secretism" has had a deservedly large circulation, has accepted a call to the Congregational church at Colorado Springs, in the new State of Colorado.

—Rev. Geo. Bent, of Kansas, is to be missionary bishop of the Congregational churches of Nemaha and Marshall counties.

—The Seventh Day Baptist brethren have lately taken possession of their new Publishing House in Alfred Center, N. Y., and the office of the Sabbath Recorder, the organ of the denomination, has been moved into it. The building is large and convenient, and was put up by the citizens of the place who presented it rent free to the American Sabbath Tract Society.

—As an indication of the progress ritualism is making in England it is stated that vestments are worn in 251 churches, in 715 candles are placed on the altar, and in 370 instances the candles are lighted at the celebration of the communion.

—What with four hundred missionaries, two hundred tract distributers, one hundred and fifty Bible-readers, etc., there are, besides the regular clergy, some fourteen hundred Christian workers among the London poor. At a late meeting in Whitechapel, a sort of Five Points in London, Lord Shaftsbury, who presided, said that the labors of Moody and Sankey were still bearing fruits among the population.

—The number of Protestant churches built in Chicago since 1831 is 226, of which 197 are now standing.

—A number of prominent Boston ladies have purchased the old South Church building, and if they cannot raise the amount required to purchase the land in sixty days, will take down the building and erect it elsewhere.

—The receipts of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions for the first ten months of the current year have been $348,000, leaving $171,000 to be raised in two months. An appeal is made by the secretaries for increasing contributions.

—The United Presbyterian Mission Board is obliged to curtail its expenses. It has a debt of over $18,000.

—The revival in Harrisburg, Pa., under Mr. Hammond, has resulted in the addition of 1,000 members to the different churches.

—Twenty years ago there were 200 Sunday-schools in France, including only five or six in Paris. Now there are 85 Sunday-schools in Paris, comprising 500 teachers and 7,000 scholars. There are 1,040 Sunday-schools in France.

—Rev. Mr. Watkins, a Presbyterian missionary in Guadalajara, Mexico, has a record of sixty-eight places in the vicinity of that city where there are some professed Protestants, who in many cases are true Christians. In Gandalajara the church has 110 members, many of whom, acting as missionaries, have carried the Gospel to those outlying districts.

I furthermore promise and swear, that I will support and maintain the by-laws of the Council of which I may hereafter become a member, the laws and regulations of the Grand Encampment under which the same may be holden, together with the constitution and ordinances of the General Grand Encampment of the United States of America, so far as the same shall come to my knowledge—to all of which I do most solemnly promise and swear, binding myself under no less than that of having my house torn down, the timbers thereof set up, and I hanged thereon; and when the last trump shall blow, that I be forever excluded from the society of all true and courteous Knights, should I ever wilfully or knowingly violate any part of this solemn obligation of Knight of the Red Cross; so help me God, and keep steadfast to keep and perform the same.*

IX. OBLIGATION, KNIGHT TEMPLAR AND KNIGHT OF MALTA.

I,———, of my own free will and accord, in the presence of Almighty God, and this Encampment of Knight Templars, do hereby and hereon, most solemnly promise and swear, that I will always hail, forever conceal, and never reveal any of the secret arts, parts, or points appertaining to the mysteries of this order of Knight Templars, unless it be to a true and lawful companion Knight Templar, or within the body of a just and lawful Encampment of such; and not unto him or them, until by due trial, strict examination, or lawful information, I find him or them lawfully entitled to receive the same.

Furthermore, do I promise and swear, that I will answer and obey all due signs and regular summons, which shall be given or sent to me from regular Encampments of Knight Templars, if within the distance of forty miles—natural infirmities and unavoidable accidents only excusing me.

Furthermore, do I promise and swear, that I will help, aid, and assist with my counsel, my purse, and my sword, all poor and indigent Knight Templars, their widows and orphans, they making application to me as such, and I finding them worthy, so far as I can do it without material injury to myself, and so far as truth, honor, and justice may warrant.

Furthermore, do I promise and swear, that I will not assist, or be present, at the forming and opening of an Encampment of Knight Templars, unless there be present seven Knights of the order, or the representatives of three different Encampments, acting under the sanction of a legal warrant.

Furthermore, do I promise and swear, that I will go the distance of forty miles, even barefoot and on frosty ground, to save the life and relieve the distress of a worthy Knight, should I know that his distresses required it, and my abilities permit.

Furthermore, do I promise and swear, that I will wield my sword in defense of innocent virgins, destitute widows, and helpless orphans, and the Christian religion.

Furthermore, do I promise and swear, that I will support and maintain the by-laws of the Encampment of which I may hereafter become a member, the edicts and regulations of the Grand Encampment under which the same may be holden, together with the laws and constitution of the General Grand Encampment of the United States of America, so far as the same shall come to my knowledge. To all this I most solemnly and sincerely promise and swear with a firm and steady resolution to perform and keep the same, without any hesitation, equivocation, mental reservation, or self-evasion of mind in me whatever, binding myself under no less than to have my head struck off and placed on the highest spire in Christendom, should I knowingly or wilfully violate any part of this my solemn obligation of a Knight Templar. So help me God, and keep me steadfast to perform and keep the same.

X. OBLIGATION, KNIGHT OF THE CHRISTIAN MARK.

Vow.—I,———, do promise and vow, with this same volume clasped in my hands, that I will keep secret the words, signs, tokens, and grips of this order of Knighthood, from all but those Knights of St. John, at Jerusalem, who have shown a Christian disposition to their fellow men, are professors of the Christian faith, and have passed through the degrees of symbolic Masonry; and that I will protect and support, as far as in me lies, the followers of the Lord Jesus Christ: feed them if hungry, give them drink if thirsty, if naked, clothe them with garments, teach them if ignorant, and advise them for their good and their advantage:—All this I promise in the name of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; and if I perform it not, let me be ANATHEMA MARANATHA! ANATHEMA MARANATHA!!

XI. KNIGHT OF THE HOLY SEPULCHRE.

Vow. I——, in the name of the high and undivided Trinity, do promise and vow to keep and conceal the high mysteries of this noble and invincible Order of Knights of the Holy Sepulchre, from all but such as are ready and willing to serve the church of Christ, by acts of valor and charity, and its members by performing all the corporeal works of mercy; and that as far as in me lies, I will defend the church of the Holy Sepulchre from pillage and violence, and guard and protect pilgrims on their way to and from the Holy Land: and if I perform not this my vow to the best of my abilities, let me become inanimatus.

*By this tremendous imprecation—the candidate of his "own free will and accord" volunteers (in case of violation,) to come forth to the resurrection of damnation, and receive the sentence, "Depart thou cursed into everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels,"

XII.—OBLIGATIONS OF THRICE ILLUSTRIOUS KNIGHTS OF THE CROSS.

FIRST OBLIGATION.

You, Mr.———, do now by your honor, and in view of the power of and Union of the Thrice Illustrious Order of the Cross, now first made known to you, and in the dread presence of the Most Holy and Almighty God, solemnly and sincerely swear and declare, that, to the end of your life, you will not, either in consideration of gain, interest, or honor, nor with good or bad design, ever take any, the least, step or measure, or be instrumental in any such object, to betray or communicate to any person or being, or number of the same, in the known world, not thereto of cross and craft entitled, any secret or secrets, or ceremony or ceremonies, or any part thereof appertaining to the order and degree known among Masons as the Thrice Illustrious Order of the Cross.

That you will not, at any time or times, whatever, either now or hereafter, directly or indirectly, by letter, figure, or character, however or by whoever made, ever communicate any of the information and secret mysteries herctofore alluded to.

That you will never speak on or upon, or breathe high or low, any ceremony or secret appertaining thereto, out of Council, where there shall not be two or more Knights companions of the order present, beside yourself, and that in a safe and sure place, whereby any opinion, even of the nature and general principles of the institution can be formed by any other person, be he Mason or otherwise, than a true Knight companion of the Cross; nothing herein going to interfere with the prudent practice of the duties enjoined by the order, or arrangement for their enforcement.

2. You further swear, that, should you know another to violate any essential point of this obligation, you will use your most decided endeavors, by the blessing of God, to bring such person to the strictest and most condign punishment agreeably to the rules and usages of our ancient fraternity; and this by pointing him out to the world as an unworthy vagabond: by opposing his interest, by deranging his business, by transferring his character after him wherever he may go, and by exposing him to contempt of the whole fraternity and the world, but of our illustrious order more especially, during his whole natural life; nothing herein going to prevent yourself, or any other, when elected to the dignity of Thrice Illustrious, from retaining the ritual of the order, if prudence and caution appear to be the governing principle in so retaining it, such dignity authorizing the elected to be governed by no rule but the dictates of his own judgment, in regard to what will best conduce to the interests of the order; but that he be responsible for the character of those whom he may induct, and for the concealment of the said ritual.

3. Should any Thrice Illustrious Knight or acting officer of any council which may have them in hand, ever require your aid in any emergency in defence of the recovery of his said charge, you swear cheerfully to exercise all assistance in his favor, which the nature of the time and place will admit, even to the sacrifice of life, liberty and property. To all and every part thereof, we then bind you, and by ancient usage you bind yourself, under the no less infamous than dying the death of a traitor, by having a spear, or other sharp instrument, like our Divine Master, thrust into your left side, bearing testimony, even in death, of the power and justice of the mark of the Holy Cross.

SECOND OBLIGATION.

Mr.———, before you can be admitted to the light and benefit of this Thrice Illustrious Order, it becomes my duty, by ancient usage, to propose to you certain questions, not a thing vainly ceremonial; but the companions will expect true answers: they will concern your past life, and resolutions for the future. Have you given me without evasion or addition your baptismal and family names, and those of your parents, your true age as far as within your knowledge; where you were educated, where you were born, and also where was your last place of residence? or have you not?

It is well.

2d. Were your parents free and not slaves? had they right and title in the soil of the earth? were they devoted to the religion of the cross, and did they so educate their family? have you searched the spiritual claims of that religion on your gratitude and your affections? and have you continued steadfast in that faith from choice and a conviction of your duty to heaven, or from education?

"From duty and choice."

This also is right.

3d. Have you ever up to this time lived according to the principles of that religion, by acting upon the square of virtue with all men, nor defrauding any, nor defamed the good name of any, nor indulged sensual appetites unreasonably, but more especially to the dishonor of the matrimonial tie, nor extorted on, or oppressed the poor.

"I have not been guilty of these things."

You have then entitled yourself to our highest confidence, by obeying the injunctions of our Thrice Illustrious Prefect in Heaven, "of doing to all men even as you would that they should do unto you." Mr.———, can you so continue to act, that yearly on the anniversary of St. Albert, you can solemnly swear, for the past season you have not been guilty of the crimes enumerated in these questions?

"By the help of God I can."

Levington's Key to Masonry.

This is Rev. Mr. Levington's last, and in the judgment of its author, best work on Masonry. The contents of the first chapter are as follows:

"Commencement and growth of Speculative or Symbolic Freemasonry—A table showing the thing at a glance—The use that the Atheists made of it—Identical with Illuminism—Its connection with the French Revolution, and with the Irish Rebellion—The action of the British Parliament with regard to it—Proofs of its diabolical purposes—Its introduction, doings, progress and designs in the United States."

The contents of the Eleventh chapter are thus startling:

"Knights of the Golden Circle—Graphic account of them by a seceding Knight, and remarks thereon, showing the identity of the order with Masonry—Quotations from Sir Walter Scott."

This work is thrilling in statement, and powerful in argument. 425 pages.

FREE TRACTS.

A Tract Fund for the Free Distribution of Tracts

HAS BEEN SECURED AND SHOULD NEVER BE EXHAUSTED. A friend has pledged this fund a dollar for every other dollar received, so EVERY NEW SUBSCRIPTION TO THE TRACT FUND COUNTS DOUBLE, and thus $10.00 pays for 20,000 pages of tracts.

The distribution of these tracts has already saved hundreds of young men from the lodge, but there is a great lack of funds to supply the constantly increasing demand for Free Tracts.

During the year ending July 1st, 1875 a little less than 150.000 pages of Cynosure Tracts were gratuitously sent out, mostly in very small lots. The present demand is fully 100.000 pages per month, but funds are lacking to meet it.

Many of our most earnest workers in this cause of God are poor men, who would be glad to circulate thousands of pages of Antimasonic literature if they could have them free.

SHALL WE NOT HAVE AN INEXHAUSTIBLE TRACT FUND

"THE ANTI-MASONS SCRAP BOOK."

The first of the month settlement brings down the subscription list.

There was not one week last month but what we had a club of five or more to report. One was a club of twenty and another of eleven for a year. There is a time for every purpose under heaven and the best time for some persons in some places is not the best time for other persons in other places. We believe there are at least four of our readers who can find no better time than August to work for the Cynosure. Never put off till to-morrow what you can do in this work to-day. Who will send a club of five or more next week?

Does your time expire in August? Please renew promptly if possible. Write to us whether you renew or not.

Postage on the Cynosure.

THE POSTAGE ON THE CYNOSURE MUST BE PAID AT CHICAGO. It is twenty cents a year.

The cost of postage now depends entirely on the size and weight, and therefore some smaller papers charge but fifteen cents; and others about the size of the Cynosure charge twenty-five cents a year for postage.

If the subscription price of the CYNOSURE was $2.50 or $3.00 a year, the price of many religious papers containing no more reading matter, we might afford to pay the postage ourselves, but at $2.00 a year we cannot do this with our present Subscription list.

Therefore let all send the postage, 20 cents a year, 10 cents for half a year with their renewals.

The commission on one new subscription for a year will pay the postage on your own and the new subscriber's paper. We would rather have the postage paid by commissions than in any other way.

When postage is not paid we shall have to shorten the time of subscription sufficiently to pay it.

How to Send Money.

Post office orders, checks or drafts on Chicago or towns east of Chicago, and currency by express may be sent at our risk. If it is not possible to send by either of the four ways named, money in a registered letter may be sent at our risk, but it is not as safe.

The date at which subscriptions expire is with each subscriber's name on the address label. Send renewals before this date occurs. Notice if this date is changed to correspond; if not or if the paper fails to come, write without delay.

We discontinue during the first part of each month all subscriptions which expire during the preceding one except such as are ordered continued with a promise to forward the money soon. Address all letters with subscriptions or orders for Books, Tracts and donations to the Tract Fund to EZRA A. COOK & Co., 13 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Ohio State Meeting.

The next Anniversary of the Anti-secret Association of Ohio will meet in Cambridge, Guernsey Co., Aug. 30th, 7 P. M.

It is hoped that all the friends of the movement from its first announcement will exert their utmost influence to make this meeting a success.

The vicinity being one favorable to this sentiment, a very large local interest we hope will be aroused.

Able speakers may be expected.

If arrangements can be made Mr. Edmond Ronayne will be present to open the lodge and actually work out some of the degrees of Masonry.

Let pastors in the immediate and adjacent counties, who take an interest in the work, read this notice to their congregations, and urge as full an attendance as possible.

Large bodies of people are inspiring and greatly encourage the work. H.H. GEORGE, Pres. of State Association.

The Illinois State Convention

will be held September 5th and 6th in Straun's hall, Jacksonville, the county seat of Morgan Co., and a short distance west of the capital of the State. Arrangements are being made for a strong meeting. State agent Hinman is speaking and laboring to secure large delegations; and the corresponding secretary, Bro. Stoddard, will give his best efforts on returning from Missouri. Past-master Ronayne, and other good speakers will be present. Let there be a grand rally for the Reform.

THE ILLINOIS WORK has been well sustained since Bro. Hinman took the field two years ago. About $50 remains to be secured to carry out the present year or $20 more than is pledged. Are there not two or three friends who can deny themselves and make this up during this present month of August. And for next year send on your pledges for five, ten or twenty dollars, less or more as the Lord disposes you to give to this cause. Let this work be promptly done, brethren. Send funds and pledges to treasurer, H. L. Kellogg, Cynosure office, Chicago.

Missouri State Association

The State Christian Association opposed to secret societies will hold their annual meeting in Well's Hall in Chillicothe, commencing on the evening of the 30th of August at 7½ o'clock, and continue over the 31st. The election of officers for the coming year, and the appointment of a State lecturer will be in order. Rev. J. P. Stoddard of Chicago, Ill., is expected to be present to address the Association. By order of the Executive Committee.

G. W. NEEDLES.
Secretary.

The Centennial Tract Work.

—Do not forget to pray for Bro. Hodge and his great work at the Centennial. Pray that he may have physical and spiritual strength and divine wisdom for this work to which God has called him. Send in your contributions also for this work.

Sanctification vs. Masonry.

BY REV. GEO. H. VARCE.

While the general doctrine of sanctification is being mooted by all classes and being urged upon the people as an indispensable requisite to plenary salvation, I know of no denomination that is clamoring more for the prevalence of this sacred principle than is the Methodist Episcopal church. And why? Is not the very reason obvious? Is she not, as a church, more than all others combined, filled with all manner of clap-trap secrecy? Let all the members of secrecy who have gained ready access to the fellowship and communion of the honest-hearted of that body, be dismissed from contact and commingling, officially and otherwise, and a practical lessening of the great swelling tumult would be signally apparent. Besides that denomination might then be comfortably reduced to the numerical and financial strength of some others. To "purge out the old leaven" of rottenness, heart-secret corruption, would be the most telling work that church could do.

I have not forgotten the fact that four years ago, on the floor of the General Conference of that church, held in Brooklyn, N. Y., Dr. Curry, then of the New York Advocate, rose to his feet and in Christian language, with Christian courtesy, and with soul-earnest emphasis denounced the black, fiendish doctrine of Masonry, which at the time brought sneers and jeers from so many as were present of the unchristian, unscriptural institution. But if the church to-day had a thousand such men as Dr. Curry, a thorough renovation in matters and things of interest might be expected soon.

Taking it for granted that the M. E. Church embraces two general parties, the secretists and the non-secretists, which of them is the most likely to propose the holy doctrine of sanctification? Not the former class evidently, for the celebrated lodge influence is an asserted and claimed religion, and, as is boasted, when one is divided by death here, so that his body only is left, for after-displays of tactics, the soul, or the other part, over which they have no further control, goes immediately to join the great lodge above. Then, according to that preconceived opinion, Masonry is good religion enough so to satisfy the demands of the most stubborn and wilfully ignorant of these enlightened days. Such a class have no demand for sanctification, but the other feeling the doubly greater necessity of this holy work in order to rid the church of such heathenish and barbarous practices, and in order that they themselves may live in the enjoyment of a pure, undefiled religion, even while fellowshiping and being surrounded with such glaring idolaters, are the ones, who, more than all others, imploringly ask for sanctification.

But that all churches need sanctifying there can be no question; while others may not be so formally leagued with secrecy, yet there are divers other worldly influences destroying by sapping and undermining the very life and spirit of better professors, which call loudly for reformation. If we will only keep ourselves unspotted from the world there will be no necessity for extra labor, or for extra grace in order to live right.

Zion's Herald, the leading Methodist paper in New England, says: "Among the prominent causes of backsliding are secret societies, and church gatherings of a worldly character. Converts are brought into close contact with the world in these gatherings, and are taught to return to their former ways and practices. Often they are led even beyond what they had known of sin in their former life. Many have taken their first lessons in gambling at church festivals. Here they meet with the wheel of fortune, lotteries, grabbings, fishponds, target shooting, and a host of new and popular inventions; all as barefaced lessons in gambling as are given in any gambling hell on the face of the earth. But they are told that this is not gambling; and hence are taught lessons in lying, which is ever an accompaniment of gambling. If, however; it is allowed that these things savor of gambling, it is then taught that the end justifies; hence, 'let us do evil that good may come,' is the lesson impressed. Is it strange that converts backslide?"

The pious, nation-revered Bishop McIlvaine, when asked by a young lady whether there was any harm in a Christian dancing, replied: "My sister, Christians have no desire to dance." Sure enough; they are new creatures, created in Christ Jesus to good works. Paul says when he became a man he put away childish things. But the effrontery of carnal Christians is astounding. —Telescope.

Sketches of Summer Travel.

ISLAND POND, VT.—OLD ORCHARD BEACH—SACO, ME.

As we leave the cars at Island Pond at 9 P. M. we hear voices in the darkness saying "Go up stairs." This sounds strange, but we obey directions, ascend a flight of stairs, walk some distance under a covered bridge, then cross a street and find ourselves at an old, but large and comfortable hotel.

In the morning we walk out on the verandah to survey our surroundings, and find that we are in one of nature's most charming retreats. The air is pure and exhilerating. The pond lies before us at our left, with its waters rippling and sparkling in the sunshine, and a small island covered with evergreens, is set like an emerald in its center. Back of this a low mountain range with numerous peaks bounds the horizon. The picturesque little village nestles on the sides and tops of the hills at our right and behind us. So enchanting is the scene that every one involuntarily exclaims, "How lovely!" No wonder that at creation's birth its Great Author on surveying scenes like this should have pronounced "All very good," and should have given to his creatures also the privilege to pause amid life's cares and bustle and find rest in the contemplation of himself and his works. The sacred calm of the Holy Sabbath seems to rest upon all animate as well as inanimate creation.

Wending our way at the appointed hour to the neat Congregational church on the hill-side, we find it well filled with intelligent and devout worshipers, and are delighted to hear the word of life dispensed with simplicity and power, by a young minister of the Methodist denomination, who has been preaching with great success for some months to the united congregations. A social meeting held at 5 P. M. is well attended, a large part of the audience freely taking part in the exercises, which consist mostly in repeating passages of Scripture on the promises of God, the minister and others adding edifying remarks. Our temporal wants in this place are as well cared for as our spiritual, and we leave in the morning with many regrets.

Our journey now lies through a wild country, the scenery being pleasingly varied by mountain, hill, and river. We reach Gorham, Maine, at 9-15. This is a small place among the hills with mountain scentry. The most striking object is a very large new public house, where board and lodging may be had at four dollars per day. Stages run from this place to the top of Mount Washington, the round trip costing eight dollars.

Apropos of the White Mountains the following story is told us. An elderly woman ascending Moune Washington in the cars, suddenly began to contemplate the liabilities of the situation, and, calling the conductor, said: "Look here! supposing these wheels should break, where would I go to?" "That," said the conductor, "would depend very much on whether you were a Christian or not."

From Gorham we hasten on to Portland, where we change cars for Old Orchard Beach, three miles beyond the towns of Saco and Biddeford, which are separated from each other by the Saco River. We reach the beach about 2 P. M. and find ourselves in a new world as far as climate is concerned. Glad are we to see the face of old ocean again, and to drink in the refreshing sea air. We soon find very a home-like boarding place directly on the beach, where we may at all times look out upon the waters and continually listen to the dashing of the surf. This beach is one of the finest in the country, extending nine miles along the bay. The slope is very gradual, and there is no undertow, so it is quite safe for bathing purposes. This part of the beach derives its name from an old orchard found here when the place was discovered. A stump of one of the trees is still remaining. The houses generally lie along the beach, and among them are quite a number of good boarding houses. The "Old Orchard House" is situated on an eminence farther back. It has been rebuilt on a site not far from that of the old one, which was destroyed by fire last summer. It is very large. the center and ends being six stories high. The rooms are large and airy and there is a fine ocean view from the front. The bathing facilities are not equal to those of the houses near the water, and the air within doors was so contaminated with tobacco smoke, when we were there, as to make it extremely unpleasant. They have about 200 boarders at present. There are about sixty at the St. Cloud where we are stopping. Boston and Toronto are most largely represented. "No dancing allowed in this house" we find among the regulations. How came you to have so unusual a rule as that? we inquired of our hostess. "I think the Lord had something to do with it" she replied. "My son is not a professor of religion, but he has been about and observed a good deal, and he wrote out the regulations when we took the house, and brought them to me, and asked if that would do. I replied. Yes, and we have adhered to it ever since" (Several years.) We think she has suffered no detriment, as her house is always full, and many applicants have to be turned away.

On the Sabbath we had preaching in the parlor in the morning and a praise meeting in the evening. Quite a number of intelligent and talented young people are here, who have given entertainments of a high order on two evenings of this week, consisting of readings, recitalions, and musical performances. There is an Indian encampment in a pine grove a few rods back of our house; a favorite place of resort, when one wants a change from the monotony of the sea view. Here, under the shade of the pines, whose fragrant breath mingles with that of the sea air, the Indians have pitched their tents, and men, women, and children are busily employed making baskets of great neatness and beauty. I will defer a farther account to another time as this letter I fear is already of tiresome length.

H. W. P.

Vermont.

The progress of Freemasonry in Vermont, where it is prohibited by law, presents a curious study for those who are interested in the preservation of free institutions. Among the numerous forms which the spirit of secretism is capable of assuming a new one has been lately devised at North Bennington in that State. This new form of organized secrecy is called a "Masonic Historical Society," and around this nucleus are arranged some of the most brilliant supporters of the lodge. Its president is the editor of the Masonic organ of the State, Henry Clark of Rutland, whose devotion to Masonry evinces a fondness for the tricks of that institution rarely witnessed. And among its distinguished corresponding members are the well known A. G. Mackey and Albert Pike of Washington, D. C.; Phillip C. Tucker of Galveston, Texas; Geo. Frank Gouley of St. Louis, Mo.; Jed. P. C. Cottrell of Milwaukee, Wis., and others of less distinction though not less devotion to the cause.

What the object of this new transformation may be is of course a secret; but one of its effects doubtless will be to preserve the ring of Minister Schenck and Trevor W. Park from being broken to the detriment of the lodge. Whether Messrs. Schenck and Park are Masons or not, or whether Schenck's recent visit to Park had anything to do with it, we do not know; but their Emma mine ring was so Masonic in its character, that the lodge could hardly fail to recognize it as one of its own offspring, and observe towards it the pious duty of protection. It was one of the lodge's own orphans and it demands of the lodge particula, Masonic favor.

There are many other uses which this new form of Masonry may serve, all of which can be readily conceived by one who understands the ways of the sly craft.

A singular accompaniment of this item of news which we take from a Vermont newspaper, is a notice, in the same paper, of a farewell sermon preached in Rutland, by Rev. Wm. J. Harris, D. D., who, besides being an ardent Episcopalian, is also a devoted member of the Masonic lodge. The Rev. Dr. was about to leave Vermont for Detroit, Michigan, where the lodge will doubtless receive a new impetus from his Masonic labors. He is the only minister of the Episcopal church that we ever heard of who undertook by an act of discipline to separate the wicked from the good. He hence excommunicated two Anti-masons. His farewell text curiously enough, was from Hebrews vi. 1, 2, which urges us to leave the mere rudiments of Christian knowledge, and to press on to the higher degress of excellence, and not to return again to dead works, such as those of Masonry and other forms of paganism, by which we should incur anew the necessity of repentance. These two verses show very plainly that if a Christian turns back and relapses into such a false worship as that of Masonry, he will have again to lay the foundations of faith in God (through Christ), faith in the doctrine of baptism, faith in the laying on of hands, of resurrection of the dead, and eternal judgment; for faith in all of these is shaken by the teachings of the Masonic lodge. How can there be any faith in God except through Christ? and the lodge rejects Christ. There cannot even be any true charity without faith in Christ; where, therefore is the charity of Masonry? It is nothing but interested alms-giving, a species of advertisement for the lodge. There is no charity in the pompous burial of the dead.

It is to be hoped that when the reverend doctor carries the gods of Masonry with him, under his episcopal robes, to the new land of the West, we may perchance hear no more of them, as we hear no more of the gods of Laban after they were borne into the Holy Land under the skirts of Rebekah. But it is well enough not to lose sight of the course pursued by these shining lights of Freemasonry. Their proceedings are full of instruction for good or evil.

The lodge in Vermont ought to be pretty wealthy. The assessments or taxes which it imposes upon its members, together with the initiation fees, must amount to a very large sum of money, the interest on which alone would furnish sufficient support for the most widely circulated paper of the State, and at the same time give quieting sops to the other papers. No power in the United States, not even the slave-power, has ever had such a control of the press as has the Masonic lodge. It has the terrible power of blackmailing. If it once gets a business man, or an editor of a paper, into its power, he is subject to intimidation ever after, and feels that it is far safer to give his money and keep up the imposition, than to make an unaided effort to recover his liberty. And especially is this effort at enfranchisement difficult so long as the clergy make use of the sanctions of their sacred profession to aid in keeping men in subjection to the lodge.

Lodge Power against Law.

Editor Cynosure:—There is an ebb in the tide of prosperity in the secret societies in this place, and total indifference reigns with the mass of the people in that direction. There are a few, mostly aged people, who have learned to regret with sorrow the doings and effects of Masonic and kindred associations, who take an interest in the course you advocate in your able paper; and are glad that a standard is raised up against so great an evil. They witnessed the conflict between the civil law and that of Masonry in the time of Morgan's abduction and murder, and the subsequent trials when the law was put to the test to see which should rule. I should like to go into a brief history of the upheavings and intensified feelings that prevaded all ranks of society, were it not that the Cynosure has kept it so faithfully before the reading public.

A man was torn away from his family, his home, and all the endearments of social relations, by the laws of Masonry, and ushered into death and eternity, and the whole State of New York, with its laws, and at an expense of some $30,000, was not able to bring the perpetrators to justice. Here is manifested the danger of secret oath-bound and fraternized societies.

Another case. Somewhere near 1810, Stephen Arnold, who for the atrocious murder—whipping a child to death—was sentenced to be hung, had the noose loosed from his neck, taken down from the platform on the gallows in Cooperstown, N. Y., and rescued from paying that richly deserved penalty of the law, and Masonry through its subtle workings had the name of doing it.

Recently, and not remote from here, was a case where a quarrel ensued between two prominent Masons. The one with premeditated murder in his heart, shot and wounded the other, but not mortally; boasted afterward it was his intent to kill, whereupon he was arrested, waived examination, was indicted and bound over till the day of trial, when the prosecuting witness, not under bonds to appear, was nowhere to be found. Although any amount of ample testimony was at hand, the law and the court was blocked; defeat must be endured, the rights of law and the people are forfeited and the guilty go unpunished. But Masonry will say: "We did it not." But was she not bound to do it, and keep it a secret? Instances of a similar character run all through the history of Masonry. In proportion to the weakness of the law, society loses protection, and there lies the danger.

More to be regretted and deplored is its deceitful and false claims of morals and religion. What moral principle has Masonry ever originated? What have they more than others? Is not the whole of moral rights taught outside of a secret society as well as in? What audacity to claim that they have a purer and safer religion than Christ, the great teacher, who gave openly to every man. Why imperil the souls of men by luring them into the lodge away from an open Bible by false pretenses? It was a saying sixty years ago of Christians, that unconverted persons, who joined the lodge, scarcely ever one of them experience religion and became Christians.

Allowing that there are men of high esteem, talented, respectable and worthy citizens in the lodge—it proves nothing. Hundreds of just as good men with unimpeachable integrity have tested it and denounced it as a dangerous organization. Christians and Christian ministers have no right to grieve the brethren by dividing their affections and devotions between the lodge and the church. It is a fair deduction from the New Testament, that just in the proportion as they render to this Caesar their devotion, zeal and ardor, in the same proportion they fall off from their zeal, ardor and devotions to Christ and his cause. Will man rob God?

H. & P.

No Independence of God in Human Government.

[From the Hon. Robert C. Winthrop's address at Boston on the Centennial Fourth of July.]

Who and what are great men? "Woe to the country," said Metternich to our own Ticknor forty years ago, "whose condition and institutions no longer produce great men to manage its affairs." The wily Austrian applied his remark to England at that day; but his woe—if it be a woe—would have a wider range in our time and leave hardly any land unreached. Certainly we hear it nowadays at every turn, that never before has there been so striking a disproportion between supply and demand as at this moment, the world over, in the commodity of men.

But who, and what, are great men? "And now stand forth," says an eminent Swiss historian, who had completed a survey of the whole history of mankind, at the very moment when, as he says, "a blaze of freedom is just bursting forth from out the ocean,"—"and now stand forth ye gigantic forms, shades of the first Chieftains and Sons of gods, who glimmer among the rocky halls and mountain fastnesses of the ancient world; and you, Conquerors of the world from Babylon and Macedonia; ye Dynasties of Cæsars, of Huns, Arabs, Moguls and Tartars; ye Commanders of the Faithful on the Tiber; you hoary Counselors of Kings and Peers of Sovereigns; Warriors on the car of triumph covered with scars and crowned with laurels; ye long rows of Consuls and Dictators, famed for your lofty minds, your unshaken constancy, your ungovernable spirit, stand forth, and let us survey for awhile your assembly, like a council of the gods! What were ye? The first among mortals. Seldom can you claim that title! The best of men? Still fewer of you have deserved such praise. Were ye the compellers, the instigators of the human race, the prime movers of all their work? Rather let us say that you were the instruments, that you were the wheels, by whose means the Invisible Being has conducted the incomprehensible fabric of universal government across the ocean of time!"

Instruments and wheels of the Invisible Governor of the Universe! This is indeed all which the greatest of men ever have been, or ever can be. No flatteries of courtiers; no adulations of the multitude; no audacity of self-reliance; no evolutions or development of science—can make more or other of them. This is "the sea-mark of their utmost zeal"—the goal of their farthest run—the very round and top of their highest soaring.

Oh, if there could be, to-day, a deeper and more pervailing impression of this great truth, throughout our land, and a more prevading conformity of our thoughts and words and acts to the lessons which it involves; if we could lift ourselves to a loftier sense of our relations to the Invisible; if in surveying our past history we could catch larger and more exalted views of our destinies and our responsibilities; if we could realize that the want of good men may be a heavier woe to a land than any want of what the world calls great men, our Centennial Year would not only be signalized by splendid ceremonials and magnificent commemorations and gorgeous expositions, but it would go far toward fulfilling something of the grandeur of that "Acceptable Year" which was announced by higher than human lips, and would be the auspicious promise and pledge of a glorious second century of Independence and Freedom for our country!

For, if that second century of self-government is to go safely on to its close, or is to go on safely and prosperously at all, there must be some renewal of that old spirit of subordination and obedience to Divine will as well as human laws, which has been our security in the past. There must be a faith in something higher and better than ourselves. There must be a reverent acknowledgment of an Unseen, but All-seeing, All-controlling Ruler of the Universe. His Word, His Day, His House, His Worship, must be sacred to our children, as they have been to their fathers; and his blessing must never fail to be invoked upon our land and upon our liberties. The patriot voice which cried from the balcony of yonder old State House when the Declaration had been originally proclaimed, "stability and perpetuity to American Independence" did not fail to add, "God save our American States." I would prolong that ancestral prayer. And the last phrase to pass my lips at this hour, and to take its chance of remembrance or oblivion in years to come, as the conclusion of this Centennial oration, and the sum of all I can say to the present or the future, shall be: There is, there can be no independence of God; in Him, as a nation, no less than in Him as individuals "we live and move, and have our being!" God save our American States!

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage, is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. The charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discountenanced.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency, and a return to specie payment as soon as practicable.

CONVENTION CORRESPONDENCE.

LETTER FROM REV. I. A. HART, VICE PRESIDENT FOR ILLINOIS FOR LAST YEAR.

GENOA JUNCTION, WIS., June 16, 1876.

H.L. Kellogg,

DEAR BROTHER:—Your card giving me notice of the meeting of the Directors to-day, is just received. But the cars have gone by, leaving me no means of reaching Chicago to-day. It is, however, quite immaterial. Time, toil and trouble have spent their force upon me. I have not attained the age, nor the wisdom or learning of Moses, and yet, I cannot say that my "eye is not dimmed," nor my "natural force abated." I probably should not have gone in to-day if your notice had been in time. For the same reason I must deny myself the great pleasure of attending the anniversary next week. "The spirit is willing, but the flesh is weak." I am going the way the great and good Finney and Edwards have gone since the last anniversary.

But I rejoice that the Anti-masonic reform does not depend upon men, or if it does, men will not be found wanting. Already the seven thousand reserve are marshalled that "have not bowed the knee" in the Baal worship, that with new names and somewhat altered forms has surreptitiously crept into the Christian church as of old it did into the Jewish.

Please excuse me to the Directors, and the brethren at the anniversary, assuring them that my daily prayer is and shall be that Christ, our only helper and hope, will go forth with them an das his accepted host, crown them, in his own time and way, with glorious victory; for surely, the sword they wield is the truth of Christ, and the insidious error they oppose is an evil leaven compounded of infidelity, idolatry and hypocrisy, which, with whatever cunning craftiness it may be devised; with whatever deceivableness of unrighteousness it may assume—the Lamb or the lion, the angel of light, or the terrific powers of darkness—it must be Christ's purpose to expose and destroy. For this, therefore, with unwavering faith, let us incessantly pray, and watch and work, until the idols shall be utterly abolished; the dramshops and the secret lodges shall be shut up; Sabbath amusements shall be abandoned; and the corruptions of bribery, conspiracy and violence, shall be purged away, and with righteous laws and a just administration, our God shall bless us in abiding peace.

Yours, etc.,
I. A. HART.

LETTER FROM GEO. NEEDLES, ESQ., MISSOURI.

VENERABLE FATHERS AND BROTHERS OF THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION:—Finding that I could not be present and not often asking a hearing, and yet not wishing to waste your precious time, I hardly dare to intrude my opinion. Yet there is a spirit in man that prompts him to action, and, if that spirit is of God and we are willing to be governed by it, we may expect God's smiles and blessing on our efforts, in whatever undertaking we are engaged. Especially so if it is for the release of the poor and oppressed of our land from the iron grasp of the sworn leagues that now infest every department of our government, sapping it of its life-blood, drying up the avenues of a healthy growth by its baleful influence, transforming our once rich heritage into a despotism more to be dreaded than the government of the Czar; because it has awed into subjection the good and great of our land as they are called, without using force of arms, done by craftiness and deception more subtle and stealthy than any former subjugation ever known in the Christian era. More stealthy, did I say? Yes, because they stole the livery of heaven to do it in. Nothing less than this secret government, as they claim they are both religious and political, is it that we have undertaken in God's name to overthrow. Yes, to God alone we must go for counsel and wisdom and if we have ever undertaken any movement without first asking his aid let us at once abandon that object and commence anew. What can poor, helpless man do against the works of darkness without his aid and assistance?

It is true that we have made the great issue of our reform a spiritual one, yet there are other reforms that we have undertaken of a moral character, as well as political; for instance, the suppression of the liquor traffic, the desecration of the Sabbath and many others, all of which will demand legislation, and in order that legislation may be had we must be heard in Congress, and prayers alone will not avail much while the ring is in control; for that would break their power and wrest the government from their grasp. Action alone will accomplish this much desired object. It has appeared strange to me that there has not been a greater effort made to get our men and principles before the people. I well understand how hard it is to harmonize so large an association, and get each to act in his sphere when there is so much sacrifice to make, no visible means to pay expenses, or support the families of those absent from home; yet we have no more hardships to endure, no more privation to undergo, than the leaders of every great reform that has preceded us. I am also aware of the fact that the men who dig the ditches will not get free rides in the boats, yet somebody must dig or no boats can sail or be propelled by steam.

We understand that if self-ease or worldly emoluments were the objects we would at once abandon the unequal conflict and retire never again to be seen in the battle field of reform, but a noble object has, I trust, caused each of us to enlist in this warfare against the powers of darkness; if so, let wise counsel with God's grace help each of us to go forth to battle for truth and right. All cannot go from home to present our principles to the world, but it does seem that all could help furnish means to defray the expenses of those who are qualified to go. It does seem that at least two for every State ought to take the field by the first of August and open up the campaign and make it hot for the sworn clans that infest our government. Let the State be divided into as many districts as we can procure men qualified, to show up the corruptions of the two ruling parties. Let them show that both parties are equally governed by the lodge, that it is the spoils and not the people's interest they are after; that the great object is to plunder; that for fifty years the cry has been "To the victor belongs the spoils," so that God is robbed of all the glory, and so far as the people are concerned it cannot make any difference under what name the lodge rules, whether Democrat, Republican, or what not, it already boasts that it is the most powerful government on earth.

Whoever our speakers are they should understand our platform and be able to present it to the people as the best platform ever adopted, one that gives every man an equal chance before the law, no sworn clansman standing ready to give the sign of distress when the evidence is clear and conviction certain without it. No juryman ready to respond to the cry, "is there no help for the widow's son?" but that the government must be brought back to its original purpose; that it is a government by the people, for the people, and not only for accommodation of the office-holders and their needy brethren. This can only be done by persistent effort on our part. We have to unite as one man, lay aside all preference as to the manner of enlightening the people on this great and important question, and embrace the present opportunity to use the means God has placed in our hands, by distributing tracts, sending out cheap periodicals and books, and furnish as many speakers as we possibly can with the means at our command. Communication should be opened up at once with persons favorable to the movement all over the land; learn if they desire speaking and what amount they will furnish to bear the expenses, for the traveling expenses of our speakers must be met by the people, for men cannot be expected to serve for nothing and pay their own expenses. State meetings should be held and candidates placed in the field. Electors should be named so that the friends of the government for the people, and not for office-holders, may have a chance to cast their votes for men that have never sworn allegiance to a foreign or despotic government. There should be an address prepared and printed in tract form and sent to every subscriber of the Cynosure in the nation, urging them to action and to name the time and place when they meet in their respective States and hold a State meeting and make nominations. This we think will be the easiest and surest plan to get the friends together. If the national paper will insert a notice for its readers of my address and the position I occupy in Missouri, I will answer all communications and help arrange for our meeting.

Yours in Christ,
GEORGE W. NEEDLES.

THE STREATOR AFFAIR.

A business letter from Rev. J. W. Gilbert says that the Masons of that place are the "worst-whipped set you ever saw, and there are ten Anti-masons here now where there was one before." So much for the good effect of the exposition and the defeat of the lodge brought on by its own folly. Bro. Gilbert sends clips from the Streator papers, and we copy the editorial from the Monitor:

A DISGRACEFUL AFFAIR.—ROWDYISM AND ROTTEN EGGS DISGRACE STREATOR.—WILL THE GUILTY PARTIES BE PUNISHED?

A few days ago it was announced by bills, and other notices, that a Mr. Ronayne, of Chicago, would demonstrate in three lectures that "Freemasonry is a gigantic swindle," and that during the evening he would initiate a candidate "in due form" into the mysteries of "Ancient Craft Masonry." The lectures were to be free Mr. Ronayne, or his friends, having hired and paid for the use of the hall—and the lecturer inviting the public to come without paying entrance fee.

On Monday evening, the time the first lecture was to be given, Oriental Hall was well filled with men, women and boys, all doubtless anxious to hear and see the show. About 8 o'clock the lecturer commenced his talk and proceeded with but very little interruption until nearly or quite in the middle of the initiation, when he was interrupted with noise, yells and rotten eggs. The initiation was gone through with and the meeting adjourned.

During the progress of the meeting some of the young men and boys stole a lot of books belonging to the lecturer, for which act they are liable to the law. Besides this, one of the side scenes of the theater was damaged to a considerable amount; and in addition, the good name of our city has been "smirched," and an unjust reputation attached to Streator, for which she will suffer away from home.

To put it plainly: For the hours the hall was paid for, it was his for a specified purpose. The audience were his guests by invitation; and while he so occupied the premises, the audience had no more legal right to insult and maltreat him, than they have to enter the private residence of any of our citizens, on invitation, and then insult and maltreat them because they exhibited that which was announced before entering.

Suppose he did advertise to expose Masonry, what of it? Was that sufficient reason why the incipient rowdyism cropping out already too frequently in our streets and public meetings should receive encouragement from men holding positions in community, and who consider their wealth and position "iron-clads" them against censure.

The initiation was either true or false. If true, what outsider was the wiser for it? - if false, the order was not injured. With this view of the case, we most emphatically express the belief that no Mason of any standing in the organization, having a respect for himself and the community in which he resides, would encourage such a transaction as that on Monday night. On the contrary it was for the purpose of encouraging and increasing the rowdy element until respectable citizens are driven entirely away from our places of amusement.

Another report tells us that one of the rioters was arrested and fined ten dollars and costs. It is also said that the master of the Streator lodge guaranteed the protection of the lecturer on the second evening. Which will do for Masonic boasting when it is well known that the more respectable members of the fraternity had agreed to stay away entirely from the future meetings. The reform has gained a great victory at Streator, and the meetings stopped at the right time.

THE GOOD WORK IN SANILAC AND LAPEER COUNTIES.

Editor Christian Cynosure:—I spent the 4th of July in Speaker, Sanilac Co. I preached twice on the Sabbath and lectured over three hours on Masonry in a new barn seated for that purpose. God was with us, gloriously. Praise God, my preaching and lecturing there a few months before utterly wiped out their grange.

I have just returned from Hadley, Lapeer Co., where my wife and I have, by invitation, been spending a few days. I preached several times and lectured twice. On Monday evening I lectured three hours in a large school-house. The farmers were in the midst of their harvesting; but the house was packed full and they would not let me stop sooner than I did.

At the close of my address a wealthy Mason denied that I had given any part of Masonry correctly. I asked him if he was a Mason. He told me, roughly that it was none of my business. I asked him several questions, but he refused to answer. When the craft saw that their ineautious brave had fallen by his broken spear, they marched to the front the courageous Mr. Babcock. He is one of the leading men of the place. He made quite a long speech, in which he attempted to convince his neighbors that it was not at all probable that Masonry was so bad as I had made it seem, seeing there were so many great and good men in it, including Washington and himself. He said he would feel very sorry if his old neighbors should suspect him of having committed himself to such things as had been mentioned. When he sat down I asked him a few questions, and he tried to evade. But the people insisted on knowing if he took Masonry as I had given it. After squirming and dodging awhile he finally said, "Mr. Springstein, you are trying to get me to reveal some of the secrets of Masonry. You know too much about Masonry to ask me to do that." With the company gazing at him in astonishment, confused and beaten, he took his seat.

Mr. Brownell, a rich man, who by his conduct had convinced many that I was really divulging Masonry, took the floor and undertook to make an elegant speech. He tried to convince the people that he was a gentleman and would never do such things as I had been talking about. In presence of his wife and all his neighbors, I gave him a chance to say plainly whether I had given real Masonry. He tried to create merriment by telling me that I had given Free Methodist Masonry. Mr. Babcock then asked me if I had not been expelled from the lodge and from the M. E. Church. Brownell saw that that was admitting that I had exposed the thing. Mr. Brownell at last lost his temper and called me a villain and other such names. I then compared their statements and showed them that they had not told the truth, and that they had confirmed my revelations. The meeting continued till one o'clock. Thus closed a long meeting of thrilling interest. The Masons refused to let us use the school house again, though a large majority present voted to open it.

Mr. Moses stood up and offered us his large house which was crowded the next evening. Though quite tired, I talked to them over two hours. I would have stopped sooner, but they would not consent. Masonry has had things about its own way there, till lately. Elder Wetherald and his wife, both of them devoted Christians and faithful ministers of the Gospel, with a noble band of Zion's soldiers, are pressing the battle unflinchingly in the name of the Lord. God has wrought a great work here, and his saved ones stood by me undauntedly with their earnest prayers and shouts of victory.

The Free Methodists on this circuit are religiously opposed to secretism. They believe it to be the cause of iniquity and the work of Satan. Their church was burned down lately and they are persecuted on every hand. But they enjoy salvation. That cannot be coaxed or driven out of a man, as I know. Praise God. A Mason was buried in that vicinity, lately. He is said to have been a very wicked, profane man, but the Methodist minister preached him directly to heaven, as they say. The man who carried the Bible is a very intemperate, ungodly man. I am told that he was intoxicated when he was in the procession.

Not far from the same place one of the most wicked and debased men in the town died, and the minister preached him straight to the Grand Lodge on high, and an infidel M. D. carried the Bible—so I was told. But a great light has sprung up among them, and I pray that God will completely overthrow the huge system of iniquity. We can do nothing unless God is with us. I love the Lord with all my heart. He saves me from all sin. My all is on the altar. Praise the Lord.

A. H. Springstein.

The Centennial—The Journey Thither.

Harper's Ferry, Va., Aug. 3, 1876.

Well, here we are at the world renowned Harper's Ferry, the grand view from which Thomas Jefferson said it would pay to cross the ocean to see. From a most marvelous rock on Bolivar Heights, where I have just stood, he is said to have written his famous notes of the history of Virginia. This height is ascended by steps cut in the solid rock.

Amid the grandeur of this scene I am ready to exclaim: "Great and marvelous are thy works, Lord God Almighty." At this great height there is an enclosed cemetery which we have not time to visit. Here the Shenandoah enters the Potomac. A ferry connects with Loudon Heights on the opposite bank of the Shenandoah and the Potomac rivers and canal is here spanned by the beautiful iron bridge of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. The canal seems to be the chief route for freight; one boat after another forming a long line. Opposite here are the frowning fortifications of Maryland Heights, bristling with cannon.

Our sable guide, with much gusto, thinking perhaps of the "bucksheesh," which he afterwards very politely demanded, points out to us the famous engine house and arsenal, each showing due marks of war, where, for the sake of his race, John Brown, with his heroic little band, defied the commonwealth of Virginia, and the national army, fighting, bleeding, dying for their sakes. Truly, John Brown's soul is marching on. Here, too, is a recently explored cave. The Government property here, we are told by our host, is all for sale at a sacrifice. One offer of $180,000 has been received he says. But it is train time, and we are off for Washington.

WASHINGTON WONDERS.

We spent one day most delightfully at Washington. The wonders of the vegetable kingdom shown at the Botanical Garden are worthy of the most careful study, even of one who has been the wide world over, while the curiosities of the animal, mineral and vegetable kingdoms, as well as many specimens of the handiwork of men, are to be found at the Smithsonian Institute, which has a much more than a national celebrity. The building itself, a massive as well as ornamental structure of red freestone, with its beautiful grounds is an honor to the city and nation.

Here are gathered the rare and beautiful, as well as much that is useful, from all parts of the world. From the animal kingdom, from the tiny insect to the monsters whose skeletons make the largest animals now living look puny, there are specimens. The catalogue tells us that there are specimens of about thirty-five thousand different kinds of birds here. The race of man is represented by mummies 3,000 years old, and by wonderfully life-like models of Indians, Chinese, Japanese, etc., in costume. Heathen gods of many forms show the religions of these nations. Beautiful models show a wonderful variety of fruit, while the endless variety of seeds and grain and many petrified specimens of vegetable life are worthy a much more careful examination than we in our haste could bestow on them.

There are many wonders of the great deep" shown here. But even a catalogue of many pages gives but a faint idea of the wonders of this great national museum.

We take a look at the Presidential mansion, the "White House," and at the great equestrian bronze statue of General Andrew Jackson, cast from cannon taken by himself from the British, I believe. This is indeed a marvel of art. The grand old veteran and his magnificent war horse poised on two legs as he snuffs the battle, is indeed an inspiring sight. We take a peep into the two houses of Congress in the two wings of the beautiful Capitol, then hasten to settle with mine host and are off for the "city of brotherly love."

I have just reached Philadelphia, Aug. 5, and the house of my only brother whom I have not seen for more than twenty years nor did I know that he was living here till a few weeks since.

We have just been taking a look at the surroundings of the great "Centennial Exposition," as the grounds are close at hand. One of the most marked and remarked things is the lack of patronage of the great number of hotels and eating houses, many of which are of vast proportions. One of these establishments, designed to accommodate 2,500 guests, my brother thinks has not over fifty. Immense loss must attend these enterprises. We expect to see a portion of the great show to-morrow. E. S. Cook.

A Burial Desecration.

Saybrook, Ill.

Editor Cynosure:—I kindly ask you to indulge me in a few odds and ends of lodge doings in Saybrook, Ill. The lodges here have hitherto had things pretty much their own way. And now to have their peaceable reign intercepted by a contemptible cowan and a perjured villain (Masonically speaking), is a new thing under the sun, and intolerable with the craft. To give an idea of the infatuation of lodgemen, I give in full a preamble and resolution adopted by the I. O. O. F. of our town:

Whereas, W. W. Knipple, pastor of the U. B. church, did on the 20th day of June, 1876, at the burial service of our well beloved brother J. W. Bailey, as we are fully advised, sneeringly and derisively pretend to make the signs of the order in the presence of the dead, and that the said Knipple, while standing on the outskirts of the congregation there assembled, did make coarse and unchristian-like expressions of the services performed at the grave of brother Bailey, therefore,

Resolved, That we, the members of Saybrook Lodge, No. 460, I. O. O. F., denounce the said W. W. Knipple as an impostor and a hypocrite, and unworthy the confidence of all respectable citizens;

That we will not in the future recognize the said Knipple as a gentleman, much less a Christian, and all citizens in this community, without respect to creed or party, ought to treat him with that contempt, and scorn a desecrator of the sacred rights [rites] of the burial of the dead deserves.

R. A. Tarbet, Sec'y.

Now isn't that enough to flatten out almost any man, especially coming from a source so very respectable and influential as the Saybrook Lodge. But there is another side to it, the cudgel has fallen upon their own pate, and the contempt is coming in the other way, and there isn't a lodgeman to be found that is not ashamed to own that he voted for the resolution.

I did attend the funeral referred to in the above preamble. I had not witnessed a heathen burial in fourteen years before, and never by this order. The deceased was a stranger to me, but bore the reputation of a gentleman and a Christian. It is well to say that the funeral sermon was sacred, was Christian, and there was a Christian prayer offered at the grave by the officiating pastor, who is a highly esteemed Christian gentleman. But he, not being one of the order, could not, of course, complete the services in the most approved heathen style, so the fraternity had to intersperse with the sacred services, their heathenish, idolatrous mummeries, as the flourish of gilt spears and shepherd's crooks, and Aaron's budding rod, and their gaudy regalia of various shades and trimmings; one of which bore a representation of cross-swords, another the battle-axe. These were, I suppose, the warlike defenders of the dead body. And a third wore on his fantastic collar the cross-keys. He, I suppose, is the line of succession from the apostle to whom Christ committed the keys of the kingdom of heaven. If they relish such daring blasphemy, as to connect with their heathen rites a pretended symbol of Aaron's rod, they are wicked enough to do the other also. And their magnificent military parade of thirty men, uniformed in the highest style of the order, forming two open ranks, and then forming an arch by connecting spear points, and shepherd's crooks, over the open space, and bearing the dead under it, and casting their bits of evergreen into the grave, and then the reading of a Christless ceremony and a Christless prayer at the open grave. I understood the sacred services and acted accordingly; but this tom-foolery over the departed dead, in a Christian land, was beyond my comprehension. It drew from me a remark or two to a friend who stood near me, and that in an undertone so as to interrupt no one; nor was it during the funeral or the burial, but it was during the military paraphernalia preparatory to interment. If Barnum should bring his circus this way, and with it his clown, expressly to act the fool, and then would abuse the people for laughing, he would at once be denounced as unworthy the countenance of respectable society. And if these orders persist in practicing their heathen abominations over the remains of the Christian dead, they should be discountenanced by every American citizen.

Before closing, I will give the reader the motive in this lodge crusade: I charged the first assault to lodge malice, which was denied by the craft. But now Mr. O. C. Sabin (excuse personalities), a prominent member of both orders, Masons and Odd-fellows, expressing, no doubt, the sentiment of both, declares their purpose to slaughter me, meaning in character, I suppose; but I opine that some would readily do that thing literally, were they not too cowardly. And they, as usual, bring to their support their stereotyped slang phrases, such as, crazy, insane, lunatic, etc., but they don't go far with sensible men, and I suggest that we leave it with our readers to draw their own conclusions.

On the war path,

W. W. Knipple.

Hillsboro, Ind., July 23, '76.

Editor Cynosure:—I see in many of your papers from the letters of many of your writers, that the glorious cause of anti-secrecy is daily improving, and the downfall of secret organizations is becoming more certain. This town boasts of two secret orders, Odd-fellows and Masons, and we judge, by their movements, they are fast decreasing. One of the lodges, Masonic, has taken wings and flown away to the country, where they now hold their night scenes of secrecy. We have often heard it said here in our midst, that these two blessed institutions (as they so call them), fit their members to live a moral and Christian life, to dwell together in love and peace and harmony. We have often heard it said that the wolf shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid, etc., but we don't think that has any reference to the I. O. O. F. members of this town. Some of them can curse and swear, drink their whiskey and get drunk, and fall out, and quarrel and threaten to fight, and yet they are bright, shining lights of their sacred order.

The Presidential campaign is now at hand. Politics is about the only theme of conversation upon our streets. It is quite often we hear some of these gentlemen call one another thieves, and rascals, and liars, and yet meet together in their lodge-rooms. We need Bro. Wiggins here again in our midst, to tell them a few more truths that strike very forcibly on the minds of many of our best people. Once again it falls upon the ear, that many of them claim to be quite benevolent toward each other, but we have heard some of their members say, We would rather seek for favors outside of our orders than to call for help from its members. Some cloak themselves up with their wealth and stand on their dignity, as members in high standing in these holy institutions. The day, we believe, is soon drawing nigh, when the people of Hillsboro will see these ungodly institutions sink into oblivion, never more to pollute our town.

A Plea for Tracts.

As many anti-secretists do not appear to fully understand the importance of the tract department of the great anti-secret reform, we desire to offer a few reflections.

The world's history informs us that sly, crafty and brutal conspirators have ruled and ruined every nation that has ever existed. To-day such men are plotting and conspiring in every land upon the face of the earth.

The reform started by Luther greatly benefited the corrupt world in his day. Reformers are still needed; and there is now an opportunity for the grandest reformation that historians can ever record. Reader, if you are an anti-secret reformer, you may hold your head high and feel like a man of importance, for the historians of the future will speak of you with the highest respect.

Now, as a reformer, your best weapon is the tract. A well contrived tract is very effective. Busy men stop to read them. Everybody will accept them. They often contain that word which is said to be sufficient for the wise.

Good tracts give people an appetite for anti-secret pamphlets, books, newspapers, etc. They prepare the people for lectures, conventions and organization. They bring us friends, workers, writers, lecturers and money to carry on the reformation. Thousands have received the light from anti-secret tracts alone. To thousands the tract has been the anti-secret entering wedge. No one can estimate the good our tracts have already done. Shall the tract work be vigorously pushed at once? Let every reader of the Cynosure give as much as he or she can afford, as soon as possible, to make our tract department a power that the lodge will feel more than ever before. Act at once. Give any amount you can afford, from twenty-five cents up, and then wait patiently for the glorious results that will certainly appear in the future.

Masonic Keys.

Yates City, Ill.

Editor Cynosure:—I have just finished reading a little book which is in common use among Worshipful Masters as a key to the (so-called) unwritten portion of Masonry or as a means of insuring uniformity in the work of conferring the degrees. This book is not in use among the rank and file of the fraternity for two reasons: First, there are but few of them that know of the existence of any such book, as it is disguised by a fictitious title; and second, the Worshipful Masters in Grand Lodge assembled have issued edicts forbidding the use of any such books. It is true that no such edicts have ever been published, for edicts of that character are promulgated from the East of subordinate lodges. W. M.'s being responsible only to each other for their conduct find it very easy to evade the laws and edicts that they make for the government of the fraternity. It appears that some years ago, Grand Master Reynolds undertook to entirely suppress the use of keys and for that purpose he issued his edict as Grand Master, requiring all Worshipfuls in his jurisdiction to gather up these keys and destroy them. Some of the Worshipfuls gave their keys to their wives (they being entirely unintelligible to any but Masons on those who are posted) and reported that that they had no such books in their possession But one man, who thought he could see a design on the part of Grand Master Reynolds to clear the way for a monopoly of the business of publishing keys, refused to obey the edict, and was of course expelled, and his expulsion was confirmed by the Grand Lodge. The next year after his expulsion was confirmed he procured from a court of competent jurisdiction an injunction forbidding the meeting of the Grand Lodge until Mr. —— was restored to the rights and privileges of a member of said Grand Lodge or a reason shown why he was deprived of such privileges. This move brought the Grand Lodge to terms and since that time there has been no further move for the suppression of the use of keys by W. M. The way the book came into my hands is as follows: Dr. Marsh of Elmwood, some time last summer was in company with a Master Mason who in order to see whether the Dr. really knew anything about Masonry showed him his key and asked him to read it. The Dr. thus obtained the title and the publishers address and sent for one. One peculiarity of the book is it is perfectly intelligible to myself, who have never read an exposition (or at least any considerable portion of one) and the doctor, who has never been inside a lodge, but is a well posted book Mason.

OUR MAIL.

Joseph Backus, Pitcherville, Jo Daviess Co., Ill., writes:

"The Cynosure is doing a great work for our republican government, laying the ax at the root of the trouble."

L. Raymo, Unionville, Putnam Co., Mo, writes:

"I gave the number (that had Ronayne's letter in it that he wrote at Medina, O., I think) to our preacher. He was very much offended at it. He says the Cynosure is the most detestable paper published. It always makes mischief in the church where it is read. He would rather read a novel than the Cynosure. He thinks secret societies a good thing; but notwithstanding his views the Cynosure is sure to work, people will read it whether the preacher likes it or not."

Gordon Crum, Barr's Store, Macoupin Co., Ill., writes:

"I am in for Anti-masonic candidates for the President and Vice-president."

E. Bascom, Greensburgh, Trumbull Co., O., writes:

"I do believe there are some who sigh and cry for the abominations that are done in the land, and who have not bowed the knee to this mighty Baal of the lodge, the secret works of darkness."

S. E. Orvis, Waukesha, Waukesha Co., Wis., writes:

"I am rejoiced at the good being done in anti-secrecy. The Cynosure is a weekly feast. God bless his own cause."

Ben. F. Cole, Jacksonville, Morgan Co., Ill., writes:

"The cause has a few friends here, but they are lukewarm and afraid to show their colors. I believe the Convention will enable some of them to see what kind of high moral institution we are tolerating in our midst."

We hope all our Illinois readers will remember the State meeting to be held at Jacksonville, and attend if possible. Mr. Ronayne expects to be there. Remember the time, the first Tuesday and Wednesday in September.

P. W. Taintor, Jacksonville, Morgan Co., Ill., writes:

"Strauns Hall is engaged for the State meeting. The people here think this means business. Surround the place with good speakers and much good will be the result."

Don't forget the State meeting. We hope all Christians will remember it in prayer

A. Kilpatrick, Talley Cavey, Allegheny Co., Pa., writes:

"With us here, as everywhere in our broad land, we have the 'inevitables.' The churches are cursed with them, though they have not as yet attempted to interfere with the exercise of discipline. I expect to preach shortly on this subject, to warn young people against them as well as to show their antagonism to the Gospel of the grace of God, for even in those churches which pledge their members to refuse association with secret societies, and whose standards are plain and explicit on this point, those who love darkness rather than light seek to entangle the youth and lead them into the snare of the devil."

Mrs. C. W. Howell, E. Constable, Franklin Co., N. Y., writes:

"I would like to say to you that Wm. A. Wheeler is not a Mason and is strongly opposed to all secret societies, believing them to be a curse to our republican government. It seems wrong to me to divide the ticket when we have such true Christian men at the head, thereby giving a chance for the Tilden ticket. The Prohibition ticket and our Anti will draw seven-eighths of their support from the Republican ranks, and then get no better men for we think here, where Mr. Wheeler lives, there can be no better, truer, Christian men."

LESSON FOR AUGUST 27.—HONEST INDUSTRY.

SCRIPTURES.—Prov. vi. 6-22.

6 Go to the ant, thou sluggard; consider her ways, and and be wise. (Job xii. 7.)

7 Which having no guide, overseer or ruler,

8 Provideth her meat in the summer, and gathereth her food in the harvest.

9 How long wilt thou sleep, O sluggard? when wilt thou arise out of thy sleep?

10 Yet a little sleep, a little slumber, a little folding of the hands to sleep. (Prov. xxiv. 33, 34.)

11 So shall thy poverty come as one that traveleth, and thy want as an armed man.

12 A naughty person, a wicked man, walketh with a froward mouth.

13 He winketh with his eyes, he speaketh with his feet, he teacheth with his fingers. (Prov. x. 10.)

14 Frowardness is in his heart, he deviseth mischief continually; he soweth discord. (Mic. ii.1.)

15 Therefore shall his calamity come suddenly; suddenly shall he be broken without remedy.

16 These six things doth the Lord hate: yea, seven are an abomination unto him:

17 A proud look, a lying tongue, and hands that shed innocent blood,

18 A heart that deviseth wicked imaginations, feet that be swift in running to mischief,

19 A false witness that speaketh lies, and he that soweth discord among brethren.

20 My son, keep thy father's commandment, and forsake not the law of thy mother:

21 Bind them continually upon thine heart, and tie them about thy neck.

22 When thou goest, it shall lead thee; when thou sleepest, it shall keep thee; and when thou wakest, it shall talk with thee.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Not slothful in business; fervent in spirit; serving the Lord. —Rom. xii. 11.

LESSON NOTES.—(6.) Go to the ant: Nothing is so small, but we can learn a useful lesson from it. (7.) No guide, overseer, or ruler: Its own instinct instructs the ant to provide for the future. (9.) Wilt thou sleep: Sin, as well as lazy indifference to the future, is compared to sleep. See Rom. 13: 11; 1 Thess. 5: 6, 7. (11.) As one that traveleth: That is, as a highwayman or "footpad" comes suddenly and without pity upon a traveler. As an armed man: Too strong for the sluggard to contend with and sure to destroy. (12.) A naughty person: A depraved, or wicked man. A froward mouth: His language is profane and boisterous, and his speech insincere, slanderous and sinful. (13.) Winketh with his eyes: He is tricky and suspicious. Speaketh with his feet, and teacheth with his fingers: Finds means in secret ways to carry on and cover his base designs. (14.) Frowardness is in his heart: In his inner nature he is inclined to wickedness. See Matt. 12: 35; 15: 18. He soweth discord: An evil heart loves nothing better than to sow the seeds of discord among friends by false report or idle gossip. (15.) Therefore: "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." "They have sown the wind, and they shall reap the whirlwind" (Hos. 8: 7). Suddenly shall he be broken: See Luke 13: 1-5. (20.) Thy father's commandment—the law of thy mother: How tender this appeal. While we cherish the memory of our parents, we should try to imitate their virtues. (22.) Lead thee, keep thee, talk with thee: God leads us when our ways are dark, keeps us in places of danger, and communes with and encourages us at all times.—S. S. Quarterly.

A proud look is an assertion in one's aspect of having no acknowledged superior, and of intoleration of God's creatures—therefore God hates it. A lying tongue cheats the world of truth, and gives to it an uncertain footing, and plunges it into unbelief and doubt—therefore God hates that. Hands that shed innocent blood destroy the lambs of the fold—and of course the Great Shepherd hates them. An heart that deviseth wicked imaginations is one that is always weaving nets for the righteous—therefore God hates that. Feet that be swift in running to mischief mean harm again to the Lord's loved ones—and of course he hates them. A false witness that speaketh lies means to destroy the character of one of his children—therefore is God aroused in his defense. He that soweth discord among brethren aims to destroy the unity of the family of God—and hence he can not but hate him. The seven things which God hates are seven means for the destruction of his people—that accounts for the vigor of his hate. Gen. 9: 6; Ps. 18: 27; 101: 5; Jer. 22: 3; Zech. 8: 17; 12: 9; Mal. 3: 5; Rom. 16: 17, 18; Jas. 5: 4; Rev. 18: 22-24.

There are no such ornaments for a young man as reverence for his father and love and respect for his mother. Whenever they are exhibited they shine with such a conspicuous luster that they awake the approving admiration of every beholder. A thousand testimonials would not establish a young man's character so soon as an unhesitating obedience and a thoughtful regard for his parents. Ex. 20: 12; Prov. 1: 8, 9; Jer. 35: 18, 19; Matt. 19: 17, 19; Luke 2: 51; John 19: 27; Eph. 6: 2; Col. 3: 20; 2 Tim. 3: 14, 15.—Nat'l S. S. Teacher.

HINTS FOR TRAVELERS.

At this season many persons contemplate traveling. To do so with the largest amount of comfort and advantage, physical, social and mental, the following suggestions are made:

Take one-fourth more money than your actual estimated expenses.

Acquaint yourself with the geography of the route and region of travel.

Have a good supply of small change, that you may not take counterfeit change.

So arrange as to have but a single article of luggage to look after.

Dress substantially. Better be too hot for two or three hours at noon, than to be too cool for the remainder of the twenty-four.

Arrange, under all circumstances, to be at the place of starting fifteen or twenty minutes before the time, thus allowing for unavoidable or unanticipated detention on the way.

Do not commence a day's travel before breakfast, even if that has to be eaten at daylight. Dinner or supper or both can be more healthfully dispensed with than a good, warm breakfast.

The most, if not the only secure fastening of your chamber door is a common bolt on the inside. If there is none, lock the door, turn the key so that it can be drawn partly out, and put the wash basin under it. Thus any attempt to use a jimmy, or put in a false key, will punch it out and cause a racket among the crockery, which will be pretty certain to rouse the sleeper and rout the robber.

A sixpenny sandwich, eaten leisurely in the cars, is better for you than a dollar dinner bolted at a station.

Take with you a month's supply of patience, and always think thirteen times before you reply once to any real or supposed rudeness or insult, or inattention.

Do not suppose yourself specially and designedly neglected if waiters at hotels do not bring what you call for in double quick. Nothing so distinctly marks the well-bred man as a quiet waiting on such occasions—passion proves the puppy.

Do not allow yourself to converse in a tone loud enough to be heard by a person two or three seats away. It is the mark of a boor, if in a man, and want of refinement and lady-like delicacy if in a woman. A gentleman is not noisy; ladies are serene.

Comply cheerfully and gracefully with the customs of the conveyances in which you travel, and of the places where you stop.

Respect yourself by exhibiting the manners of a gentleman and a lady if you wish to be treated as such, and then you will receive the respect of others.

Travel is a great leveller. Take the position which others assign you from your conduct rather than from your pretensions. Ex.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, AUGUST 17, 1876.

TENNESEE MOUNTAINS.

John G. Fee, of Kentucky, when disinherited by his father in Bracken county, for his opposition to slavery, retreated back into the mountains and founded Berea College, which is now a strong institution. East Tennesee, like eastern Kentucky, is a mountain home of freedom and reform. That region has been called "The Switzerland of America." Rev. Paul Fecmster, of Tusculum College, Home post-offiee, in Greene county, in the eastern extremity of the State, and Elder Geo. J. Payne, of Knoxville, and Alexander Thompson of Crossville, Cumberland county, are all enlightened friends of the anti-secret reform; and if they, together with Rev. S. F. Thompson, Prof. Ramsey, Mr. Thos. Johnson and others could communicate with each other, and organize the State, there are hundreds of those true-hearted mountaineers who would rally around them, and vote and pray for American principles against the idolatries of the lodge.

We suggest that the brethren above named communicate together at once and see what can be done. Mr. Thompson was a beloved officer in the Wheaton College Church, as was also Mr. Payne. Mr. Payne is not a public speaker but Mr. Thompson is, and would make an excellent State agent. If he cannot be sustained in Tennesee, he can be in Iowa, and he is needed there greatly. As Mr. Feemster is confined by his labors to the vicinity of his home, Mr. Thompson is the proper person to speak to the people and organize them. Let these brethren communicate with each other at once and set watch-fires and signal lights on every mountain in the Cumberland chain. Mr. Robert Feemster, of Lowndes county, Mississippi, is a good speaker, and is accessible by rail from Knoxville. He might attend a State meeting, and speak when visiting his brother in Greene Co., Tenn.

HOLINESS.

We have received the following notice which we insert out of friendship to the cause. We are not acquainted with the persons promoting the "ten days" meeting called below, except that the chairman, Mr. Black, is a lawyer by profession, a Presbyterian by denomination, and an elder in the First Presbyterian church, Wabash avenue.

Swarms of fanaticisms and fanatics have hitherto infested every successful effort to promote holiness among men. The movement started by Christ and his apostles was no exception. The best money has the most counterfeits. But this is no reason why the Scriptures, promising temperance, justice and holiness, should not be sought out, understood and applied. We have heretofore noticed the "Western Holiness Association," whose president, Rev. L. B. Kent, is now stationed at Lacon, in this State, and their organ the Banner of Holiness, published at Bloomington, Ill. If this Chicago meeting is to be of the pattern of those held by brother Kent and his associates, we are heartily in favor of it, and wish its promoters God-speed:

TEN DAYS' SCRIPTURAL HOLINESS CONVOCATION,

At 400 Wabash avenue [Jacob's Tabernacle], commencing Saturday evening, August 19, 1876. Meetings day and evening.

This convocation is called for the consideration and presentation, particularly to Christian people, of the Scripture evidences upon the necessity and attainableness of personal holiness, and for individual testimony as to experience of the grace of God displayed in an uttermost salvation, a salvation from sin.

To these meetings all are earnestly invited who wish to know what is the witness of the Word and the Spirit upon this doctrine, of whatever denomination or creed, whether ministers or laymen, and particularly are those urged to attend who desire to be filled with righteousness, and to receive all that God has to give through Christ Jesus to the believer.

It is thought that many of the brethren in Christ Jesus are desiring to experience in their own hearts a consciousness of entire conformity to the will of God, and to possess, through the ministry of the Spirit, that "holiness without which no man shall see the Lord." To all such we say, come with us, and hear the testimonies of the sufficiency of His grace to preserve the soul that fully trusts, from falling into sin.

In behalf of the committee.

W. P. BLACK, Chairman.

A BIBLE-EXCLUSION MURDER.

On Monday evening, Aug. 7th, Alexander Sullivan and his wife, with a younger brother, went in a carriage to the house of Francis Hanford, late assistant Superintendent of public schools in Chicago, as they claimed to "get satisfaction" for a paper read in the City Council, and reflecting on Mrs. Sullivan. Hanford, who was sprinkling his lawn, refused to give the satisfaction. Sullivan struck him and knocked him down. Others interfered to part or pull off Sullivan from the prostrate Hanford, who rose up and was clutched by Mrs. Sullivan and younger Sullivan to keep him from Alec. Sullivan. McMullen, who had taken Sullivan off from Hanford, still held him back, but his right arm being free, he drew a loaded revolver from his pocket, and shot Hanford so that he died in thirty minutes.

Such are, concisely stated from the papers, the facts of this murder. The assailants, three in number, the Sullivan brothers and wife of the elder one, went armed to Hanford's house, assaulted and shot him. Hanford is buried, and his murderer is in jail awaiting trial. Counsel are engaged for the defense, and after a bitter and expensive trial this crime will take its place in the record of human guilt and wretchedness, and long arrears of sorrow to two families in Chicago will drag their weary lengths through coming years.

But what takes this crime from the calendar and gives it prominence as that it was the indirect result of the Bible-exclusion struggle.

The late Mayor Colvin, who said he was elected as the representative of the anti-Puritan Party, had removed Hanford as the friend of Superintendent Pickard, and one Doty was brought from Detroit at the instance and nomination of the Sullivans, who are Catholics and eager opponents of the Bible-in-schools. Mrs. Sullivan, whose maiden name was Buchanan, was a teacher in the Detroit schools where she knew Doty. She came to Chicago and was employed to write editorials for the Post, Times and Tribune. She was here married to Sullivan, who was a political adventurer, office-holder under the Republican party in New Mexico, a journalist, and, at the time he shot Hanford, was secretary of the Board of Public Works in Chicago, his younger brother also holding some post.

Mrs. Sullivan appears by all accounts to be the chief actor in the whole drama. She wrote; she electioneered; applied for office for her friends; claimed the rights of a man and the privileges of a woman; and by her vehement and indomitable energy caused the death of Hanford, more than the man who shot him.

Hanford had been displaced by the Colvin-Sullivan, anti-Puritan, Bible-exclusion, Roman-Catholic party, and the head and front of his offending was the following paragraph:

"The instigator and engineer-in-chief of all deviltry connected with the legislation of the Board is Mrs. Sullivan, wife of the Secretary of the Board of Public Works. Her influence with Colvin was proven by her getting Bailey dismissed and her husband appointed in his stead."

This paragraph, the severest in Hanford's paper, contained no imputation on Mrs. Sullivan, such as called for revenge from her gentleman friends. Besides, Hanford's paper was not signed nor intended to be read in the City Council; but seems to have been written as a memorandum or explanation, to aid Mr. Van Osdel, one of the Council to a due understanding of parties. She declared she had been "outraged and insulted," got into a carriage with her husband and took a personal part in the street skirmmage by clenching Hanford whom her husband had knocked down.

Wrangling for office is no novelty, nor are brawls ending in death. But this murder shows the temper and taste of those who are putting the word of God from our schools—aye, of those who have put the Scriptures from the schools of Chicago. So far as appears, Hanford's offence was that he had an office which the anti-Bible, Roman Catholic party wanted, and told in his paper who were the cause of crowding him out of it.

But what interests the readers of the Cynosure in this bloody case is that the head fountain and mother of all secret societies, viz: "The Society of Jesus" stands back in the darkness of its own shadow, acting but not agitating, silent, yet stimulating, reaching its bony fingers into our public schools, taking out the Word of God that it may put into them the words of priests; and the Masonic and lesser secret orders, all made out of the same stuff and sprung from the same dark source, are playing jackal to the Jesuit lion.

They are turning our American population into papists and pagans, by the simple process of giving them a religion invented by priests! We need scarce say that the only remedy, our only safety as men and as a nation is that proposed by the National Christian Association. To hope that churches made up in part and controlled by Freemasons, will ever displace popery, is to hope for what will never come. Freemasons sheltered slavery, and they will protect popery when the struggle comes. And as all that saved us in our late great civil war was the amount of light previously diffused among the people, so will it be in the bloody grapple of Freedom with Rome.

"Up then in freedom's manly part
From grey-beard eld to to fiery youth,
And on the nation's naked heart
Scatter the living coals of truth."

—The editor of the Milton (Ind.,) News thinks that the secret lodges "include in their bodies the real live men of every nation, and have been productive of more real lasting good to our nation than all the churches put together—as churches." Then the "real live men" are such renegades as the Prince of Wales; or such infidels as make up the Masonic order largely in France, Germany, Italy and South America, or "fast" young men as run the higher degree bodies in this country; and "real, lasting good" has been entailed upon our nation by the infamous Masonic plots of the Knights of the Golden Circle before the war and the White League and Ku-Klux since, and yet is distilling upon us in Belknaps and Delanos, political jobbery of all sorts, and such special benefits as the savage Pike can confer through the lodge at Washington where he is ostensibly practicing before the Supreme Court. This editor professes to be a follower of Alexander Campbell, who openly opposed the lodges and proved their un-Christian character. The sincerity of his profession must be doubted.

CROQUET:—"Please answer through your excellent paper: 1st, Do you consider it right for ministers of the Gospel to play croquet? And 2d, Does Mr. Moody play?"

SMITH LOVE.

I think Mr. Moody does not play croquet. I never did. And I heard Mr. Moody say of similar amusements: "There is so much to do for the Master, I have no time for them."

Mere amusement, whether in lambs frisking in a meadow, or children playing ball or goal on a green is not sinful. We do not understand the principle of power in the game called croquet, or what attracts the crowd and keeps up the interest. If it should ever be used for gambling, like cards and billiards it would be then clearly wrong; and if it has now the absorption of a strong desire to beat, or if it is idleness, or mere vacuity, it were better let alone. But whatever its nature, though innocent as fox-and-geese, or useful as fire and water, it should yet be used with moderation and judgment.

—Rev. L. N. Stratton, of Syracuse, one of the four State lecturers, appointed at the last New York Convention, attend the Seneca County Convention in that State this week at Romulusville, beginning on Saturday, the 19th.

—Past Master Ronayne held a series of expositions in Owaneco, Christian Co., Ill., last week, with his usual success. The lodge in that place is on the decline, and it is hoped, will now lock up its doors forever. The four meetings were well attended with peaceable and intelligent audiences.

—Elder Parker Hurless, of Polo, Ill., wishes to publish in connection with his paper, the Christian Radical, a tract entitled, "Shall we abandon our Position on Secret Societies," especially adapted for the United Brethren churches. May God speed the effort.

—The Radical says that a man named Thorpe, who was the chief persecutor of Elder Baird years ago when he spoke in Polo, has since been engaged in a lawsuit with a brother Mason, who had, he claimed, damaged his character. All he made from the suit was the privilege of paying $500 costs. About the same class of wretches have been attacking the Elder lately through "Brick Pomeroy's" paper here.

—Rev. James Hankins, who last year acted as State lecturer for Iowa, is yet living near Mason City in that State, and the Iowa Freeman promises its readers occasional articles from his pen.

—J. H. Vandever, editor and publisher of the Freeman, announces that he will lecture on the subject of secretism in Iowa on reasonable terms. If he lectures as well as he edits, his audiences will not fail of entertainment and profit. Send for him.

—A correspondent puts these questions to Bro. Woodruff Post:

If it is not right to be a Freemason, nor right for a church to admit them to membership, is it right for one to remain in a church that believes in and practices both of these? W. Post seems to me to say it is right, but is it consistent? What attitude shall he take—protest and contend (quietly but firmly) for a change, or what?

—A correspondent wishes to know if we have the expose of O. U. A. M. (Order of United American Mechanics). We do not know that such an exposition has been published.

Religious Intelligence.

—Professor P. P. Bliss and Major D. W. Whittle, the Chicago revivalists, will shortly start a series of revival services in Salem, Mass. They, in connection with Dr. James H. Brooks, of St. Louis, H. M. Brown, the Scotch evangelist, Rev. W. Erdman, of Chicago, and Rev. H. M. Parsons, of Boston, lately held a series of Bible meetings at Swampscott, Mass., which were of great value to those who attended.

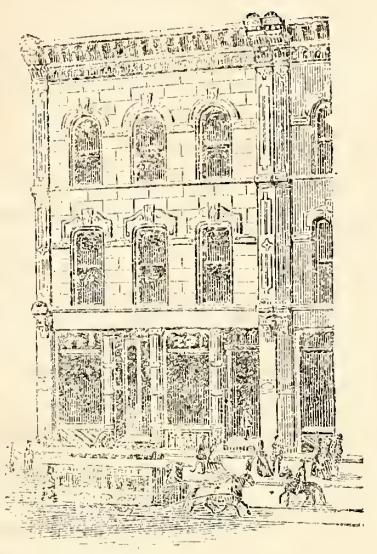
—The revisers of the authorized version of the New Testament have reached the end of the second Epistle to the Thessalonians.

—Rev. A. S. Allen, the venerable pastor of the Congregational church at Clear Lake, Iowa, whose testimony, as a seceder, against the lodge has been felt throughout the State, is spending a while at Oshkosh, Wis., for the benefit of his health.

—Fifty thousand copies of the Holy Scriptures were circulated last year in Spain, and eight thousand in Portugal.

—Miss Whately, daughter of the late Archbishop of Dublin, conducted a mission at Cairo, Egypt, employing a head native missionary, twelve teachers and a Bible woman. She has 280 children in her schools.

—The first Chinese pastor in connection with the American Board was recently ordained. His name is Tung-Long-Ko, and he has been settled over the Yungfuh church of forty members, near Fu-Chau.



—The Protestant churches of the world maintain, collectively, 1,559 missionary stations and 2,132 missionaries, at an annual expenditure of nearly six million dollars.

—A brother of Charles Bradlaugh has been converted from atheism, and is now holding open-air meetings in London. They are largely attended and are very interesting.

—The Methodist Preacher's Meeting of Boston on Monday, July 3, adopted the following resolutions in relation to the "color line" and Southern fraternity: "(1) That we most sincerely deprecate any action which looks to the division of existing conferences, or the establishment of new ones on the basis of color. (2) That any fraternization with any so-called Christian church that now involves the remotest recognition of the hateful spirit of caste now and forever rampant in the South will be an unspeakable disgrace to the Methodist Episcopal church.

The Postmaster-General has issued an official interpretation of the new postal law. The following named mail matter will be transmitted at the rate of one per cent. of every two ounces or fraction thereof: Pamphlets, occasional publications, transient newspapers, magazines, books, periodicals, hand bills, posters, sheet music, maps and proof sheets. The following-named matter will be transmitted for one cent for each ounce or fraction thereof: Printers cards and blanks, lithographs, prints, engravings photographs, stereoscopic views, manuscripts, unsealed circulars, seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots and scions, samples of merchandise and all other mailable matter of the third class not enumerated.

Grasses.

O, life that hideth in the sod,
How sweet and beautiful thou art;
Like Aaron's mystic almond rod,
By miracle the grasses start.

They crept about the naked land,
In silence shod they nimbly run;
They clothe the rock and deck the sand
And spread their velvet in the sun.

Upon a mighty loom they ply
With shuttle flying far and wide,
And woven in this tapestry
See buttercups and daisies pied.

O, sweet this green and humble home,
For all earth's kind that breathe and sing,
This dewy footstool 'neath the dome
Joy gives to every living thing.

O, sweet this fond, maternal care,
For nameless weeds that flower and fade;
And teeming millions flourish there,
The weakest races God has made.

O, sweet to think when day is done,
And tired we seek the common breast,
Like all that gaze upon the sun,
We, too, beneath this cloak shall rest.

The Santa Clara Valley of California.

III.

Located in Santa Clara Valley are a number of large villages as well as the city of San Jose. The largest and coziest of these is one bearing the same name as the valley, Santa Clara; which is situated some three miles to the north-east of San Jose, and connected with it by a wide avenue lined on both sides with ancient willows, which were set out by the Catholic fathers about a century since. There is also a street railway connecting the two places. Santa Clara is a nice, cozy little town of some three thousand inhabitants. The principal thing here to attract attention is the largest Catholic college on the Pacific coast, which is under the supervision of the Jesuit fathers. It was founded quite a number of years ago in an old adobe building. The original building of the college remains in use yet. Buildings have been erected from time to time at a total cost of more than half a million of dollars. The college has seven libraries, one of which contains 12,000 volumes. Its college hall and philosophical and chemical apparatus have no superiors in the United States.

During the Mexican rule large grants of land were made to nearly all the mission churches of California. Upon these lands vast herds of whatuis were raised. Upon the settlement of this State by Americans the land became very valuable. Thus at the expense of the public domain, have many of the Catholic churches of this State accumulated vast treasures. This college is now educating nearly three hundred students under Jesuit regime; which to all outward appearances, is severe in the extreme; but which evidently is not intended to, and does not lead the students to a holier and better life.

Situated on Alameda about equal distance from each of the two places is the principal M. E. college of this State. The buildings consist of a fine three story college and a nice ladies' hall. This college was established in 1856.

Situated at about equal distances from the mountains and nearer the northern than the southern limits of the valley, lies the beautiful city of San Jose. Here, as in many other places in this State, the origin of improvement dates back to another century. The Spanish explorers and adventurers of the Pacific slope, having firmly established themselves at San Francisco, made search for some agricultural district from which to draw their supplies. Therefore, an expedition partly agricultural, so that the soil should be tilled; partly pastoral, so that the flocks and herds should be looked after; and partly religious, so that the Indians upon the surrounding hills should be brought under and within the jurisdiction of the Catholic Church, was fitted out. Therefore in 1777, about a year after the Declaration of Independence had been adopted, the mission of San Jose was founded. Plowing in those days and even for more than three-quarters of a century after them consisted in dragging the end of a sharpened pole through the earth, thus slightly loosening it. This was done by means of a pair of long horned steers, the yoke being lashed to the base of their horns. Notwithstanding this primitive method of farming, their granaries grew plethoric; but the number of inhabitants did not increase so rapidly, for in 1831 they numbered only 531 souls. In 1846 the Americans took possession of the "city" and the stars and stripes floated in the place of the Mexican ensign.

Although there was abundance of excellent timber within less than a score of miles it was not used for any purpose, and all buildings throughout the State were made of adobe. Adobe bricks were made from a black sticky soil and then thoroughly dried in the sun. The walls of their buildings were made of these; the rafters of willow, with smaller twigs interwoven after the manner of a basket; and on this were placed red tiles which made a successful watershed. While these buildings were frequently large, the doors and windows were always small and consequently the buildings dark within. The floors were of Nature's furnishing, the earth. A front porch was indispensable to a Spanish mansion, for it served as a lounging place during the middle of the day. But the indomitable will and energy not only of the present Spanish population, but also of the early adventurers is clearly and justly illustrated by their habits. It is said that it was the custom for the family, the frugal morning meal having been disposed of, to seat themselves in the sunshine outside of the house. As the sun rolled westward they moved around the house, being careful all the while to keep within its rays; and when it disappeared they retired to their similar evening meal and bed. As has been before stated this was only practiced in the sunshine of spring and early summer, for when the hot blazing days arrived, this practice was reversed by commencing on the shady side and following the shade around.

When one comes to contemplate this grand method of recuperation by balances, it is no longer wonderful that Columbus discovered America by means of the same principle. Under Spanish and Mexican rule the resources of the country had lain dormant and it was not until after 1850 that Santa Clara Valley began to be rapidly developed.

The thriving city of San Jose now numbers about fifteen thousand inhabitants, and claims to be the third city in the State. It is noted throughout the Pacific slope for its fine climate, beautiful gardens and nice business blocks and residences.

One of the finest public buildings is the Court House, which was erected at a cost of two hundred thousand dollars. In form it is a parallelogram one hundred feet wide and one hundred and forty long. Its architecture is Roman Corinthian, and it is adorned in front by six large Corinthian pillars thirty-eight feet in length.

San Jose is one of the educational centers of the State, and located here is the State Normal School. This building would be an ornament to any city. It was erected at a cost of more than a quarter of a million of dollars. Several hundred students are now in attendance, but the building is large enough to afford educational advantages to one thousand. There are also four large grammar schools as well as a number of primary schools in the city; and such success has been attained in their management that these schools have gained a State reputation, and families are daily moving here on account of the educational advantages.

The Sin of Evil Speaking.

Hardly is any sin so common as that of evil speaking. If it were known only among ungodly people, and people who make no profession of religion, it would be even then a sorrowful matter enough. But sad to say, the sin is as rife and ruinous among those calling themselves Christians, as among those who are not. Worse still, persons are to be found, inside a day's journey, professing holiness, who are evil speakers, backbiters and reporters and repeaters of untrue and uncharitable sayings against others, often against their brethren.

Do you think these statements wrong and untrue? Then, we say, listen to what is spoken in the company you next enter. Note how long you will be there until some ill-natured word, some uncharitable remark, some disparaging sentence will be pronounced against some absent person. Likely it will be some professing Christian who will be found speaking against a Christian brother not present. Or, it may be a church member professing holiness, who will be heard speaking to the prejudice of another church member professing holiness, who is likewise absent. Rare will be the event if, being in public or social company an hour, some hint or innendo, or sly insinuation, or mean suspicion be not breathed into your ear, adapted, and purposed, no doubt, to disturb your good opinion of the censured person, and undermine your confidence in his character. What is said, may be untrue—probably is. At least it is ordinarily a matter of mere report. "They say" so-and-so. And the repetition of what "they say" adds another stab to the reputation of the absent or injured one.

Or, what is said may be true. Evil speaking is simply speaking with evil intent. It is not to speak falsely, necessarily. But it is to speak wickedly, always, even though what is spoken be true. Suppose a brother really fall into sin through sudden temptation, and act wrongly. The event is sad enough, and probably no one feels this so keenly as the sinning person himself. Yet, in nine cases out of ten, the wound of his fall will not pain him half so much as the deeper, crueler, deadlier wounds that will be inflicted by cold, unsympathizing, censuring, backbiting brethren, in the evil reports that they "take up" about the matter. The sad business cannot be left, it would appear, with the penitent offender and his merciful Saviour. It must be bruited. The occasion of evil speaking is too tempting. And tongues are set agoing to depict the meanness of the sinner and his sin.

There can be nothing so contrary to the spirit of true holiness as this sin of evil speaking. And nothing is so conclusively decisive of the utter want of holiness as its indulgence. The profession makes no difference in the fact. A man may sound out his claim to holiness as loudly as he will. He may trumpet his profession to the ends of the earth. If he be a whisperer, or a talebearer, or a backbiter; if he be a retailer or circulator of unfriendly or slanderous speeches; if he be a taker up of evil reports against his brother, let him not profess holiness. He is either deceived or a deceiver. His profession will not go for the breath that is used in making it.

Said Mr. Wesley, after laying down the divine law on this subject of evil speaking: "But if this be the rule by which Christians walk, where is the land where the Christians live? A few you may find, scattered up and down, who make a conscience of observing it. But how very few! How thinly scattered upon the face of the earth! Alas for the Christian world! Alas for Protestants, for reformed Christians! 'O who will rise up with me against the wicked?' Who will take God's part against the evil speakers? Art thou the man? By the grace of God wilt thou be one who art not carried away by the torrent? Art thou determined, God being thy helper, from this very hour, to set a watch, a continual watch before thy mouth, and keep the door of thy lips? From this hour wilt thou walk by this rule, speaking evil of no man? . . . Put ye away evil-speaking, tale-bearing, whispering! Let none of them proceed out of thy mouth! See that ye speak evil of no man; of the absent, nothing but good."

St. James says: "If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man. . . . The tongue is a little member, and boasteth great things. Behold, how great at matter a little fire kindleth. And the tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity; so is the tongue among our members that it defileth the whole body, and setteth on fire the whole course of nature; and it is set on fire of hell." Also: "If any man among you seem to be religious and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain."—Banner of Holiness

Children's Corner.

Time Enough.

Two little squirrels out in the sun,
One gathered nuts, the other had none;
"Time enough yet," his constant refrain,
"Summer is still just on the wane."

Listen, my child, while I tell you his fate;
He roused him at last, but he roused him too late
Down fell the snow from a pitiless cloud,
And gave little squirrel a spotless white shroud.

Two little boys in a school-room were placed;
One always perfect the other disgraced;
"Time enough yet for learning," he said,
"I will climb by and by from the foot to the head."

Listen my darling: their locks are turned gray;
One as a governor sitteth to-day:
The other, a pauper, looks out at the door
Of the alms-house, and idles his days as of yore.

Two kinds of people we meet every day;
One is at work, the other at play,
Living uncared for, dying unknown—
The busiest hive hath ever a drone.

Tell me, my child, if the squirrels have taught
The lesson I longed to implant in your thought;
Answer me this, and my story is done:
Which of the two would you be, little one?

Recommendations.

A gentleman once advertised for a boy to assist him in his office, and nearly fifty applied for the place. Out of the whole number he in a short time chose one and sent the rest away.

"I should like to know," said a friend, "on what ground you selected that boy. He had not a single recommendation with him."

"You are mistaken," said the gentleman; "he had a great many:—

"He wiped his feet when he came in, and closed the door after him; showing that he was orderly and tidy.

"He gave up his seat instantly to that lame old man; showing that he was kind and thoughtful.

"He took off his cap when he came in, and answered my questions promptly and respectfully; showing that he was polite.

"He lifted up the book which I had purposely laid on the floor, and placed it on the table, while all the rest stepped over it, or thrust it aside; showing that he was careful.

"And he waited quietly for his turn, instead of pushing the others away; showing that he was modest.

"When I talked with him, I noticed that his clothes were carefully brushed, his hair in nice order, and his teeth as white as milk. When he wrote his name, I observed that his finger-nails were clean, instead of being tipped with jet, like the handsome little fellow's in the blue jacket.

"Don't you call these things letters of recommendation? I do; and what I can learn about a boy by using my eyes for ten minutes, is worth more than all the fine letters he can bring me."

Mr. Choate and the Ambitious Plowboy.

A great many boys mistake their calling, but all such are not fortunate enough to find it out in as good season as this one did.

It is said that Rufus Choate, the great lawyer, was once in New Hampshire, making a plea, when a boy, the son of a farmer, resolved to leave the plow, and become a lawyer like Rufus Choate. He accordingly went to Boston, called on Mr. Choate, and said to him:

"I heard your plea up in town, and I have a desire to become a lawyer like you. Will you teach me how?

"As well as I can" said the great lawyer. "Come in and sit down."

Taking down a copy of Blackstone, he said:

"Read this until I come back, and I will see how you get on."

The poor boy began. An hour passed. His back ached, his head and legs ached. He knew not how to study. Every moment became a torture. He wanted air. Another hour passed, and Mr. Choate came and asked:

"How do you get on?"

"Get on! Why, do you have to read such stuff as this?"

"Yes."

"How much of it?

"All there is on these shelves, and more," looking about the great library.

"How long will it take?"

"Well, it has taken me more than twenty-five years."

"How much do you get?"

"My board and clothes."

"Is that all?"

"Well, that is about all that I have gained as yet."

"Then," said the boy, "I will go back to plowing. The work is not near so hard, and it pays better."

Comparative Geography.

Greece is about the size of Vermont.

Palestine is about one-fourth the size of New York.

Hindostan is more than a hundred times as large as Palestine.

The Great Desert of Africa has nearly the present dimensions of the United States.

The Red Sea would reach from Washington to Colorado, and it is three times as wide as Lake Ontario.

The English Channel is nearly as large as Lake Superior.

The Mediterranean, if placed across North America, would make sea navigation from San Diego to Baltimore.

The Caspian Sea would stretch from New York to St. Augustine, and is as wide as from New York to Rochester.

Great Britian is about two-thirds the size of Hindostan; one-twelfth of China and one-twenty-fifth of the United States.

The Gulf of Mexico is about ten times the size of Lake Superior, and about as large as the Sea of Kamschatka, Bay of Bengal, China Okhotsk or a Japan Sea; Lake Ontario would go in each of them more than fifty times.

The following bodies of water are about the same size: German Ocean, Black Sea, Yellow Sea; Hudson Bay is rather larger, the Baltic, Adriatic, Persian Gulf, and Ægean Sea, half as large, and somewhat larger than Lake Superior.

Home and Farm

If you have been picking or handling any acid fruit, and have stained your hands, wash them in clear water, wipe them lightly, and while they are yet moist strike a match and shut your hands around it so as to catch the smoke, and the stains will disappear. If you have stained your muslin or gingham dress, or your white pants with berries, before wetting with anything else pour boiling water through the stains, and they will disappear. Before fruit juice dries it can often be removed by cold water, using a sponge and towel if necessary. Rubbing the fingers with the inside of the parings of apples will remove most of the stain caused by paring.

Tomato Pie.—Slice down some good ripe tomatoes; put in your crust; fill with tomatoes; sprinkle two or three spoonsful of sugar, one of flour, and pepper to your taste; also, one spoonful of butter. If this does not make a good, rich pie, I don't know what will. As there are no apples this season, this may be useful to some one.

A Secret Worth Knowing.—Boil three or four onions in a pint of water. Then with a gilding drush daub over your glasses and frames, and the flies will not light on the articles washed. This may be used without apprehension, as it will not do the least injury to the frames.

An old farmer said to his sons, "Boys, don't you ever spekerlate, or wait for somethin' to turn up. You might jest as well sit down on a stone in the middle of a meder with a pail twixt your legs, and wait for a cow to back up to you to be milked."

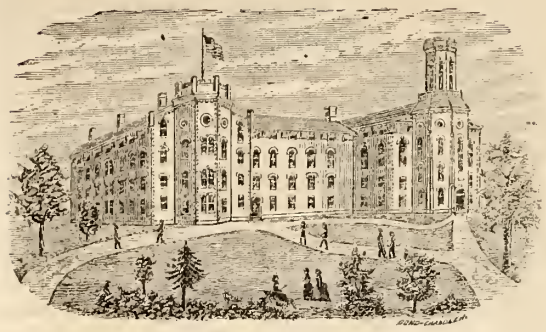
Every lady ought to know that fruit stains may be readily removed from linen or cotton, simply by immersing the article, before being wet in suds, in clear boiling water.

Wash your tea-trays with cold suds, polish with a little flour, and rub with a dry cloth.

Fruit For Food.

Dr. M. L. Holbrook a good while ago in speaking of fruit as food said: There is one other value in fruit which I cannot pass over in this connection without notice. One of the common diseases of children is worms in the bowels. If a child's digestion become impaired, and the gastric juice become weakened or defective in quantity by overeating or bad food, the whole alimentary canal becomes clogged up and filthy, and furnishes nests for such worms as will breed there. In the weakened condition of the system, they cannot be destroyed by the process of digestion, and hence great harm comes from them. Now, it is an interesting fact that fresh ripe fruit is the best preventive for this state of things. Dr. Benjamin Rush pointed this out a hundred years ago. He made a series of experiments on earth worms, which he regarded as more nearly allied to those that infest the bowels of children than any other, with a view to test their power of retaining life under the influence of various substances that might be used as worm medicines. The results proved that worms often lived longer in those substances known as poisonous than in some of the most harmless articles of food. For instance, in watery solutions of opium they lived eleven minutes; in infusion of pink root, thirty-three minutes; in claret wine ten minutes; but in the juice of red cherries they died in six minutes; black cherries, in five minutes; red currants, in three minutes; gooseberries, in four minutes; whortleberries, in seven minutes, and raspberries, in five minutes.

From these experiments Dr. Rush argued that fresh, ripe fruit, of which children are very fond, are the most speedy and effectual poisons for worms. In practice this theory has proved to be correct.



If we eat and drink hot and exciting materials, the blood becomes inflamed, the nerves exasperated, and the brain sends out thoughts that are base and mean. If we would do away with those foods that only influence the passions, and substitute more fruit in their place, we would need less restraint on wrong doers, for our heads would be clearer our blood cooler, our nerves steadier, our impulses more subject to reason and life would be a hundred per cent truer and better than it is today.

Do Not Get Cool.

"Do not get cool," is the Scientific American's hot weather advice, the meaning being that a sudden cooling of the body is likely to induce bad colds, which are harder to cure in summer than in winter. It also says that ice water should be drank slowly, with a pause after each swallow. Hot tea is recommended because "the debility and downward progress of the system is arrested by the warmth of the water and the stimulating quality of tea, until strength begins to be imparted to the system." Gauze worn next the body absorbs prespiration and prevents colds, but should be often thoroughly aired and dried. Persons who allow mental overwork to exhaust them are particularly liable to sunstroke. "It is a foolish popular idea that this terrible malady is due to the concentration of the sun's rays on the head. Persons are frequently struck, as it is termed, in the night, but more are apt to be so late in the afternoon, when the system is depressed by the heat and nervous exhaustion. The way to avoid sunstroke is to order one's doing so that vitality shall not be lowered, and the conditions favorable to the disease superinduced. A sunstroke, if not fatal, leaves the patient less able to indure mental or physical work ever after, and requires from him constant care against a second visitation."

A good time to canvass for the Cynosure in some localities is just after the mail comes in. A good place, the post office.

LOCATION.

Wheaton College, of which a cut is seen above, is located on the Iowa Division of the Chicago and Northwestern rail-road in the village of Wheaton. This town is one of the most healthful and pleasantly located in northern Illinois. It contains about two thousand inhabitants; and Congregational, Wesleyan, Baptist, Methodist, Free Methodist and German Lutheran Churches.

INSTRUCTION.

It is the intention of the Board of Trust and the Faculty to make the instruction of this Institution thorough in every respect, without caring to develop the merely showy and ornamental, they intend to furnish facilities which will enable young men and women to obtain a solid education in the Classics, Mathematics, Natural, Mental and Moral Science, Music, Painting and Drawing, with Book-keeping and Penmanship.

EXPENSES.

Young Ladies can board, in the Building represented above, for one hundred and fifty dollars per year; payable seventy-five dollars at the opening and seventy-five dollars at the middle of the year, and assisting one hour per day in the domestic department. Daughters of ministers and missionaries can have the same privileges for one hundred dollars per year and one hour labor per day in the domestic department. For this sum of money the student has board, tuition and room during the year. Each room contains bedstead, mattress, pillows, stove, washing utensils, etc. Fuel and lights are furnished at cost. There are also a few families where young ladies dependent on their own exertions can defray a part or the whole of these expenses by assisting in the family work.

Young men board themselves in rented rooms, or rent rooms and board at the College, or have their board in families. They can get along with one hundred dollars a year by boarding themselves; one hundred and seventy-five boarding at the College, and from that sum to two hundred and fifty boarding in private families. In other words the expenses are from one-third to one-sixth part as great as at Eastern Colleges, while the facilities are, in many respects as good. The tuition is thirty dollars per year in the College classes, twenty-four in the Scientific, Preparatory and English Course. This tuition includes everything but Drawing and Painting, Music and Penmanship, which are extra. For further and definite information see Catalogue.

RELIGIOUS INFLUENCE.

It is and will be the constant endeavor of the Faculty to promote the spiritual as well as the intellectual welfare of their students. While there are no religious tests for admission students are expected to attend some church on the Sabbath and devotional exercises daily in the Chapel. It is also understood that students attending this Institution entirely abstain from Tobacco, Billiards, Cards, Secret Societies and other hindrances to good morals and good scholarship. The efforts of the Faculty in the past to this end have been, by the blessing of God, successful to a great degree and it is hoped may be still more so in the future.

REFERENCES.

There are now nearly one hundred Alumni who are doing credit to themselves and the Institution in the Ministry, at the Bar, in the Schools and Colleges of the country and in other places of responsibility. The Illinois State Association has repeatedly commended it to the confidence of the intelligent public as have Dr. J. E. Roy, Rev. James Powell, Dr. Geo. N. Boardman, Prof. F. W. Fisk, Rev. L. T. Chamberlain, Hon. Wm. H. Bradley, Philo Carpenter, Prof. James T. Hyde, Rev. N. A. Prentiss, Prof. T. W. Hopkins, Jas. W. Scoville, Rev. S. J. Humphrey, Dr. W. A. Bartlett, Hon. S. B. Gookins, Dr. E. WHEATON, ILL.

News of the Week.

Rev. M. M. Parkhurst of the Mich. Ave. M. E. Church, in this city, preached a sermon on Sabbath morning on the Hanford murder, in which he charged the whole affair to Romanism. Sullivan, the murderer, and his wife are strong Catholics. Parkhurst is said to be a 32 degree Mason; can he be leading a Masonic feint on Romanism?—— The report of an Indian battle in which the Sioux were badly beaten, has been received, but wants confirmation. The forces of Crook and Terry number 4,000, and it is believed they can make short work with the hostile horde. —The Eastern war is not yet closed, notwithstanding the report that Servia had appealed to the European powers for mediation. The cause of the provinces, however, is almost hopeless, as the Turkish have vastly greater forces in the field, and are gaining substantial advantages. The conduct of the Turkish government in allowing unorganized bands of Caucasians to roam freely in Bulgaria and such parts of Servia as they dared, is reproved by the other powers. Awful atrocities have been committed by them and large districts have been pillaged and burned, the males slaughtered and the women taken for an awful slavery.

In Congress last week the Democratic opposition gave way to the Senate on the Appropriation bills and that long contest is over. The appropriations, as agreed to, show a reduction of over 29½ million dollars. A special appropriation for the re-establishment of the fast mail train has passed. The Senate has voted to restore the franking privilege. An early adjournment of this remarkable and infamous Congress is expected.

The Health Reformer maintains its excellence as an instructor of the people on health topics. It treats the subject in an exceptionally candid and liberal manner, though it may be considered some what radical. Extreme positions are avoided, however, and there is no family which may not be benefited by the perusal of this instructive and interesting journal. The August number is a good one. Specimen copies can be obtained free by addressing the publishers at Battle Creek, Mich.

MACKEY'S TEXT-BOOK

Of Masonic Jurisprudence,

ILLUSTRATING the Laws of Freemasonry, both written and unwritten. This is the Great Law Book of Freemasonry—570 pages. Price, $2.50.

The Oaths and Penalties of Thirty-three Degrees of Freemasonry Compiled by Franklin Paine, Sen., a Seceding Master Mason.

Be it so then, that annually, on the anniversary of St. Albert, you swear to these great questions; and the confidence of the Knights Companion of the order in you, rests on your being able so to do.

4th. For the future, then, you promise to be a good man, and to be governed by the moral laws of God and the rules of the order, in always dealing openly, honorably, and above deceit, especially with the Knights companions of the order.

"I do."

5th. You promise so to act with all mankind, but especially with the fraternity, as that you shall never be justly called a bad paymaster, ungrateful, a liar, a rake, or a libertine, a man careless in the business of your vocation, a drunkard, or a tyrant.

"I do."

6th. You promise to lead a life as upright and just in relation to all mankind as you are capable of but in matters of difference to preserve the interest of a companion of the order; of a companion's friend for whom he pleads, to any mere man of the world.

"I do."

7th. You promise never to engage in mean party strife, nor conspiracies against the government or religion of your country, whereby your reputation may suffer, nor ever to associate with dishonorable men even for a moment, except it be to secure the interest of such person, his family or friends, to a companion, whose necessities require this degradation at your hands.

"I do."

8th. You promise to act honorably in all matters of office or vocation, even to the value of the one third part of a Roman penny, and never to take any advantage therein unworthy the best countenance of your companions, and this, that they shall not, by your unworthiness, be brought into disrepute.

"I do."

THIRD OBLIGATION.

I do now, by the honor and power of the mark of the Holy and Illustrious Order of the Cross, which I do now hold to Heaven in my right hand as the earnest of my faith, and in the dread presence of the most Holy and Almighty God, solemnly swear and declare, that I do hereby accept of, and forever will consider the cross and mark of this order as my only hope: that I will make it the test of faith and fellowship; and that I will effect its objects and defend its mysteries to the end of my days, with my life and with my property—and first, that in the state of collision and misunderstanding impiously existing among the princes and pilgrims, defenders and champions of the Holy Cross of Jesus our Lord, now assembled in the land and city of their peace, and considering that the glory of the Most High requires the greatest and strictest unanimity of measures and arms, the most sacred union of sentiment and brotherly love in the soldiers who there thus devote themselves to his cause and banner, I swear strictly to dedicate myself, my life and my property forever hereafter to his holy name and the purposes of our mark, and to the best interest of all those who thus with me become Knights of the Cross. I swear for ever to give myself to this holy and illustrious order, confiding fully and unreservedly in the purity of their morals and the ardor of their pious enthusiasm, for the recovery of the land of their fathers, and the blessed clime of our Lord's sufferings, and never to renounce the mark of the order nor the claims and welfare of my brethren.

2d. And that the holy and pious enthusiasm of my brethren may not have slander or disgrace at my hands, or the order be injured by my unworthiness, I swear forever to renounce tyranny and oppression in my own person and place, whatever it may be, and to stand forth against it in others, whether public or private; to become the champion of the cross, to observe the common good; be the protector of the poor and unfortunate; and ever to observe the common rights of human nature without encroachment, or permitting encroachment thereon, if in my power to prevent or lessen it. I will moreover, act in subordination to the laws of my country, and never countenance any change in the government under which I live, without good and answerable reasons for so doing, that ancient usages and immemorial customs be not overturned.

3d. I swear to venerate the mark as the wisdom and decree of Heaven to unite our hands and hearts in the work of the holy crusade, and as an encouragement to act with zeal and efficacy, and I swear to consider its testimonies as the true and only proper test of an illustrious brother of the cross.

4th. I swear to wear the mark of this order, without the least addition, except what I shall be legally entitled to by induction, for ever, if not without the physical means of doing so, or it being contrary to propriety; and even then, if possible, to wear the Holy Cross; and I swear to put a chief dependence for the said worthy and pious objects therein.

5th. I swear to put confidence unlimited in every illustrious brother of the cross, as a true and worthy follower of the blessed Jesus, who has sought this land, not for private good, but pity, and the glory of the religion of the Most High and Holy God.

6th. I swear never to permit my political principles nor personal interest to come counter to his, if forbearance and brotherly kindness can operate to prevent it; and never to meet him if I know it, in war or in peace, under such circumstances that I may not, in justice to myself, my cross, and my country, wish him unqualified success; and if perchance it should happen without my knowledge, or being informed thereof, that I will use my best endeavors to satisfy him, even to the the relinquishing my arms and purpose. I will never shed a brother's blood nor thwart his good fortune, knowing him to be such, nor see it done by others, if in my power to prevent it.

7th. I swear to advance my brother's best interest, by always supporting his military fame and political preferment in opposition to another; and by employing his arms or his aid in his vocation, under all circumstances where I shall not suffer more by so doing, than he, by my neglecting to do so, but this never to the sacrifice of any vital interest in our holy religion, or in the welfare of my country.

8th. I swear to look on his enemies as my enemies, his friends as my friends, and stand forth to mete out tender kindness or vengeance accordingly; but never to intrude on his social or domestic relations, to his hurt or dishonor, by claiming his privileges, or by debauching or defaming his female relations or friends.

9th. I swear never to see calmly nor without earnest desires and decided measures to prevent the ill treatment, slander, or defamation of any brother Knight, nor even to view danger or the least shadow of injury about to fall on his head, without well and truly informing him thereof, and, if in my power to prevent it, never to fail, by my sword or counsel, to defend his welfare and good name.

10th. I do swear never to prosecute a brother before those who know not our order, till the remonstrances of a council shall be inadequate to do me justice.

11th. I swear to keep sacred my brother's secrets, both when delivered to me as such, and when the nature of the information is such as to require secrecy for his welfare.

12th. I swear to hold myself bound to him, especially in affliction and adversity, to contribute to his necessities my prayers, my influence and my purse.

13th. I swear to be under the control of my council, or, if belonging to none, to hat which is nearest to me, and never to demur to, or complain at, any decree concerning me, which my brethren as a council, shall conceive me to deserve, and enforce on my head, to my hurt and dishonor.

14th. I swear to obey all summons sent from any council to me, or from any Most Illustrious Knight, whether Illustrious Counsellor for the time being, or by induction, and to be governed by the constitution, usages, and customs of the order without variation or change.

15th. I swear never to see nor permit more than two candidates, who, with the Senior Inductor, will make three, to be advanced, at the same time, in any council where I shall be; nor shall any candidate by suffrage, be inducted without a unanimous vote of the illustrious brethren in council; nor shall any council advance any member, there not being three Illustrious Knights, or one Most Illustrious and four Illustrious Knights of the Cross present, which latter may be substituted by Most Illustrious Induction; nor yet where there shall not be a full and proper mark of the order, such as usage has adopted to our altar, of metal or other durable and worthy material, contained within the apartment of council, as also the Holy Bible; nor will I ever see a council opened for business without the ceremony of testing the mark, exercised on the character of every brother, prayers, and the reading of the 35th Psalm of David; nor will I ever see, consent to, or countenance, more than two persons of the same business or calling in life, to belong to, or be inducted and advanced in any one council of which I am a member, at the same time; nothing therein going to exclude members from other parts of the country, or from foreign parts, from joining us, if they consent formally and truly to staud in deference and defence, first of their special bar-brethren in the council, nor to prevent advancements to fill vacancies occasioned by death or removal. To all this, and every part thereof, I do now, as before, by the honor and power of the mark, as by an honorable and awful oath, which confirmeth all things in the dread presence of the Most Holy and Almighty God, solemnly and in truth, bind and obligate my soul; and in the earthly to wit: that for the violation of the least matter or particle of any of the here taken obligations, I become the silent and mute subject of the displeasure of the Illustrious Order, and have their power and wrath turned on my head, to my destruction and dishonor, which, like the nail of Jael, may be the sure end of an unworthy wretch, by piercing my temples with a true sense of my ingratitude—and for a breach of silence in case of an unhappy event, that I shall die the infamous death of a traitor, by having a spear, or other sharp weapon, like as my Lord, thrust in my left side—bearing testimony, even in death, of the power of the mark of the Holy and Illustrious Cross before I. H. S our Thrice Illustrious Counsellor in Heaven, the Grand Council of the good. To this I swear.

The American Party,

ITS OBJECT, ORGANIZATION, PLATFORM AND CANDIDATES.

Some of the ablest men in the nation have pronounced our platform the best that has been presented to the American people for the past fifty years Our Candidates are men of acknowledged ability and honesty, and if every voter in the United States could read this our "POLITICAL TRACT," our Candidates could undoubtedly be elected. Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Freemasonry.

Six Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason.

By Rev. A. GROLE, Pastor, German M.E. Church, Worchester, Mass

FREE TRACTS.

A Tract Fund for the Free Distribution of Tracts

HAS BEEN SECURED AND SHOULD NEVER BE EXHAUSTED. A friend has pledged this fund a dollar for every other dollar received, so EVERY NEW SUBSCRIPTION TO THE TRACT FUND COUNTS DOUBLE, and thus $10.00 pays for 20,000 pages of tracts.

The distribution of these tracts has already saved hundreds of young men from the lodge, but there is a great lack of funds to supply the constantly increasing demand for Free Tracts.

During the year ending July 1st, 1875 a little less than 150,000 pages of Cynosure Tracts were gratuitously sent out, mostly in very small lots. The present demand is fully 100,000 pages per month, but funds are lacking to meet it.

Many of our most earnest workers in the cause of God are poor men, who would be glad to circulate thousands of pages of Antimasonic literature if they could have them free.

"THE ANTI-MASONS SCRAPBOOK."

Contains 24 Cynosure Tracts, bound together and is just the thing to select from. Price 20cents. See advertisement page 15.

Enoch Honeywell Esq., pays for an unlimited number of his tract addressed "TO THE YOUNG MEN OF AMERICA." It is an excellent tract, bearing the printed endorsement of Executive Committee of the National Christian Association. He has furnished the public over 150,000 pages of these tracts during the past year.

Gain in one week,	25

No clubs of five or more to report this week. Several smaller clubs which we were very glad to receive, brings up the number of subscribers one notch.

WATCH THE THRESHERS.

One friend writes that several neighbors have promised to subscribe for the Cynosure as soon as their threshing is over. Still another writes: "Money will be getting more plenty soon. I think we can work up a dozen subscribers." When people have money, generally they will spend it. Watch and help them make a good investment of $2.20 by using it to secure the Christian Cynosure every week for a whole year.

PLEASE SECURE CLUBS AT CONVENTIONS, LECTURES AND OTHER MEETINGS. Do not wait until the people have dispersed and other duties crowd. Kansas, Ohio, Missouri and Illinois hold State meetings within a month. We suggest that at the earliest practicable moment in each convention, they appoint a committee of their most wide awake, faithful men to solicit, personally, a subscription from every one present not already taking the paper. Do not neglect this important matter. You want the paper "widely circulated." Let all take hold and this desire will be accomplished. Do not let this Centennial year close with a list of less than ten thousand subscribers for the Cynosure. Will you? WILL YOU?

The Cynosure is now published in new type.

Postage on the Cynosure.

THE POSTAGE ON THE CYNOSURE MUST BE PAID AT CHICAGO. It is twenty cents a year.

The cost of postage now depends entirely on the size and weight, and therefore some smaller papers charge but fifteen cents; and others about the size of the Cynosure charge twenty-five cents a year for postage.

If the subscription price of the CYNOSURE was $2.50 or $3.00 a year, the price of many religious papers containing no more reading matter, we might afford to pay the postage ourselves, but at $2.00 a year we cannot do this with our present Subscription list.

Therefore let all send the postage, 20 cents a year, 10 cents for half a year with their renewals.

The commission on one new subscription for a year will pay the postage on your own and the new subscriber's paper. We would rather have the postage paid by commissions than in any other way.

When postage is not paid we shall have to shorten the time of subscription sufficiently to pay it.

How to Send Money.

Post office orders, checks or drafts on Chicago or towns east of Chicago, and currency by express may be sent at our risk. If it is not possible to send by either of the four ways named, money in a registered letter may be sent at our risk, but it is not as safe.

The date at which subscriptions expire is with each subscriber's name on the address label. Send renewals before this date occurs. Notice if this date is changed to correspond; if not or if the paper fails to come, write without delay.

We discontinue during the first part of each month all subscriptions which expire during the preceding one except such as are ordered continued with a promise to forward the money soon. Address all letters with subscriptions or orders for Books, Tracts and donations to the Tract Fund to EZRA A. COOK & Co., 13 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

By many who are more likely to seek the real welfare of the Chinese on the Pacific coast, the outcry against their importation is denounced as folly. If the laws regulating immigration and common cleanliness and decency in cities were enforced the Chinaman, they say, would be compelled to a different life, and a serious and certain check would be put on their further importation by the Chinese companies. These six companies should also be made amenable to wholesome regulations. The Mayor of San Francisco a while since proclaimed the enforcement of health laws in that city. Little has been done as yet, but a few nights ago, a number of Chinese lodging houses were raided upon and their occupants arrested, for violating the California law requiring that each and every sleeper shall have a specified number of cubic feet of air. There were in all thirty heathens taken into custody, eleven of whom were in a room containing but 2,436 cubic feet of air, eight in a room containing 1440 cubic feet, six in a room of 1361 feet, and five in a room containing 1589½ feet.

Archbishop Purcell of Cincinnati has issued a "declaration to the people of the United States" on the public school question, which looks like opening a new campaign from the Catholic side. He claims that the Romish church has been misrepresented and falsely and "maliciously accused of designing the destruction of the common school system;" and then goes on to state that the Catholic priests do not want to interfere with the schools; Protestants may manage them as they like. They only aim to educate their own children in their own religious tenets. Putting all this along side the statements repeated time and again in the Archbishop's Cincinnati organ, the Telegraph, as, "It will be a glorious day in this country when under the laws of justice and morality our school system is shivered to pieces," it seems that a flank movement in which Jesuits are not unskilled is under way.

More light is thrown on these papal maneuvers by a quiet study of the wonderful recuperation of France from the terrible blow of the German war. Just before Bismarck's war on the Jesuits a brief correspondence took place between the Pope and Emperor William, in which the firmness of the latter seemed to quiet Rome, and nothing more was heard of it. But now after a lapse of time a Prussian officer, who has been taking notes in France, publishes his report and finds that the reorganization of the French army is progressing at an astonishing rate, and the priests have a great deal to do with it. So that the German Falk laws have a pretty intimate connection with the French army, remote from each other as they may seem. The "Black Pope" and his "Society of Jesus" are not yet done with their work among the kingdoms of earth.

Congress adjourned last Tuesday. After nine months of wrangling with each other, its three or four hundred members are let loose upon the country to practice politics from the stump instead on the floor of the House or Senate. The closing days of the session were very carefully watched in party interest and probably less wretched and rascally legislation than usual is to be complained of. The Senate, in a fit of magnanimity voted to restore the franking abuse and to run "fast mail" trains all over the country, but the House did not endorse the folly. The school amendment proposed some time ago by Mr. Blaine, passed the House with but one or two dissenting votes, in the Senate clauses were added, providing that the act should not be construed as prohibiting the reading of the Bible in anyschools, and that public endowments already established should not be impaired. These additions aroused discussion and the Senate failed of giving the needed two-thirds vote. In the House the Democrats were rather shamed into the passage of a resolution expressing the necessity of protection to all classes in the exercise of the ballot. This has given the executive an opportunity to move through the War Department for the protection of the negro voters with U. S. bayonets, which support they greatly need in many localities.

What Concord hath Christ with Belial.

BY REV. JOHN BALL.

In reading the article of Bro. Post in Cynosure of June 29th, entitled "Errors of Good Men," I felt moved to give mine opinion also of certain passages of Scripture. A free interchange of opinion whilst influenced by the Spirit of Christ will not lead to bitter controversy or a defense of self. The truly consecrated one has no reputation to defend in the eyes of the world. It is said of Christ, He made himself of no reputation.—Phil. ii. 7. It is said by Christ it is enough that the servant be as his lord. John Wesley was accused of almost every crime in the catalogue, and when notified to appear and answer charges, kept on about his Master's business; replying to his brother Charles, "In my consecration reputation was included; God will care for his own."

Bro. Post's article is appreciated. I am glad it was written and published. It is true that in the admonitions given by the Holy Son of God through the revelator, not an intimation was given to the seven churches of Asia of separation, but they were to repent or God would separate himself from them. They had raised a wall of separation between themselves and God by their wicked works and abominations, and I have no doubt but they were instigated to acts of persecution of the faithful by the devil as much as papal Rome has been, or the Jewish church in the time of the early Christians; or the persecutors of John and Charles Wesley and their coadjutors, in the time of the reformation of their day; or in the case of Bro. Post himself and similar ones, faithful in letting the light of God shine through them in denouncing the works of darkness. Voting supernumerary is much more convenient than excommunication, and can be done on the sly without creating as much of a stir; as in the case of B. T. Roberts, Loren Stiles and others, who like Peter and John in Acts iv. 20, could not but speak the things they had seen and heard; others who wanted to be let alone would not have their works brought to light, and took action to silence the disturbers.

I shall not offer advice to Bro. Post and his co-workers in this reform, only to follow the Lord in all things. I was given plainly to understand that I must come out from among them and be separate to get my own soul saved. To have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, for Christ hath no concord with Belial. What communion hath light with darkness? When Ephraim was joined to his idols God said let him alone.

Let me ask Bro. Post what would have become of the reformation under Luther and his co-workers had he or they concluded the reform could not be accomplished elsewhere than within the pale of the papal church; the same of the reformation under the Wesleys, whilst the fox-hunting, cock-fighting, carnal-minded priesthood of the mother church stood ready to encourage the mobs and lend a hand in persecuting the reformers. How much did the Wesleyan secession have to do with the final emancipation of the slaves in our own land, and when the Almighty had with sword and bayonet struck the shackles from the slave, who in General Conference assembled was so ready to take a part in working this reform and could then engraft the new rule prohibiting slave-holding in the church. Why it was now popular. Come out from among them and be ye separate, saith the Lord. Are evil workers the temple of the living God, can God dwell in them and walk in them. When they grieve and drive away the Spirit, do not they fall into formalism. "These be they who separate themselves, sensual, having not the Spirit." Jude xix. verse, (separation from God). Hence the spurious conversions and multitudes of worldly conformed professors, deceiving and being deceived, evidently destitute of vital godliness, swarming the road to the pit; has not the salt lost its savour? Are not their souls precious? What is to be done? Those in authority will decry you and destroy your influence, you are a disturber in Israel, you are creating divisions, you are not effective. God says make the divisions; better now than in the eternal world. Separate yourselves from evil workers rather than be separated from me; for without me ye can do nothing. My article will subject me to charges of sweeping assertions and want of charity, but the half has not yet been told, time-serving, man-pleasing or fearing, is not mine, but in the fear of and at the bidding of God would I write and act. Eternity will reveal.

Leipzig and its University.

BY PROF. H. A. FISCHER.

Every German city has a history, but few a more interesting one than Leipzig, or Leipsic. Though it cannot vie in antiquity with some other cities, it is sufficiently old to hide its origin in the mists that hung over the forests and swamps of central Europe during, and immediately after the migration of races. By the aid of astrology, one man ascertained that the "corner stone" was laid April 16th, A. D. 551, at 9:41 a. m., but his information is too accurate to be reliable. Most authorities agree that a colony of Wends settled in "Lipzk" about the eighth century of the Christian era. The name, after a number of transformations, such as philologists are fond of tracing, became Leipzig, and the Wendish village has risen to the dignity of the second commercial city in Germany, the center of the German book trade, and the seat of one of the finest Universities in the world.

It passed into the hands of the Germans early in the 10th century, and Christianity was introduced in the following century. Since then it has acted an important part in the history of the German people.

Markets, which contributed much to the commercial importance of Leipzig, were held there since 1190, and at different times received important privileges from emperors and popes; among others the order issued in 1509 that no similar market should be held within a radius of 70 miles: These markets, or fairs, are still held three times a year under the name "Messe," the German for mass, so called from the fact that in the early days they were formally opened with a mass. The most important "Messe" is held in the Spring, when, it is said, the number of strangers in the city exceeds 40,000. Though the number may be an exaggeration, the city seems to be overflowing with buyers and sellers. The more aristocratic venders rent shops on the principal streets; others use booths built in the market places and along the wider streets; still others display their wares on stands, and the humblest merchants have their cheap crockery and other goods spread out on the ground. For three or four weeks they all stand guard over their stores, sell what they can, pack up the rest, and leave for their homes in different parts of Europe.

The wholesale booktrade here is probably greater than in any other city in the world. There are nearly 100 printing firms in the city, and every prominent publishing house in Germany aims to have a depot here.

One of the results of all this trade is that Leipzig has for a long time had many rich citizens—"furchtbar reich" they are called by their less fortunate neighbors. The love of show which these rich "Kaufleute" could afford to indulge in, and persons in more moderate circumstances thought necessary to imitate, has given rise to a number of curious city ordinances. In the fourteenth century the length of a man's purse was supposed to be measured by the length of his "Schnabelschuhe" (shoes with beaks pointing upward from the toes), and the beaks grew to such dangerous length, that an ordinance was passed limiting them to from 1½ to 2½ feet, according to the rank of the wearer. Even this moderate length was found to interfere so much with the genuflexions necessary in the Catholic church, that spiritual and temporal rulers united in condemning the "schnabel" altogether.

In 1580 an ordinance was passed bearing the elaborate title, "Ordnung und Reformation der stadt Leipzig, von der Tracht der Einwohner, auch wie man sich in Wirthschaften, Verloebnissen, und andern halten soll." (Order and Reformation of the city Leipzig, about the dress of the inhabitants and how they are to conduct themselves at entertainments, engagement celebrations and others.) By this ordinance the wives of councilmen, of "Doctors," of the most respectable citizens, and of "brave" merchants were permitted to wear silks, satins and less expensive dresses, also a limited amount of lace, jewelry, etc. Their daughters were restricted to a smaller supply of apparel and ornaments. The wives and daughters of "common" laborers had to content themselves with still less, while servant girls were denied the privilege entirely of wearing silk or gold. Those who were permitted to wear gold had to have the genuine article, for wearers of brass ornaments were fined as many ounces of silver as equalled the weight of their counterfeit gold. Men seem to have had the unrestricted use of their wardrobe, and every young lady could look forward to one day when she would be permitted to wear all the jewelry she had, by inheritance or otherwise; this was her wedding-day, but the wise old "Rathsherren" protected their pocket-books by providing that the happy bride should not purchase any ornaments for the occasion. Weddings could not last longer than a day; at least the host was not permitted to furnish more than three meals for his guests. The higher classes above specified, were permitted to set ten tables for their city friends and two for friends from abroad, and to furnish two kinds of wine and beer, while ordinary citizens practiced hospitality with seven tables in all, and one variety of wine and beer. The number of courses was also limited, and the presents that might be given to the bridal pair and to the servants. The city drummer and fifer were allowed a fixed fee for performing on the occasion.

Proclamations appear on the records, complaining of the disregard of these wholesome provisions; still they were sometimes rigorously enforced. One good burgomaster caused his own wife and daughters to be led out of the church by the sexton, "because they appeared in the house of God, wearing wide laces on their heads, which is indeed forbidden by the will of the city."

The Beast with the Seven Heads.

BY D. B. TURNEY.

1. Some people insist that popery is the wonderful beast having the seven heads, ten horns, ten crowns, the name of blasphemy, and the number 666, because Lateinos, and Hee Latinee Basileia each sum up that number, according to the numerical value of Greek letters. But it is also a fact to be noticed that Napoleonti, which is Napoleon written in the Greek dative case, numerically equals 666. And Freemasonry, also, which is Preimasonri as written in modern Greek or Romault, foots up 666. Here are the figures:

Pi	80
Rho	100
Epsilon	5
Iota	10
Mnu	40
Alpha	1
Sigma	200
Omicron	70
Nu	50
Rho	100
Iota	10
Footing up	666

Freemasons may be astonished at the result; but figures do not lie. The number of the beast belongs to the fraternity as well as to the Latin kingdom, et numerus ejus, sexcenta sexaginta sex.

"Here is wisdom. Let him that hath understanding count the number of the beast: for it is the number of a man; and his number is six hundred, three score and six." So far as the number of the beast is concerned, six hundred and sixty-six may be found as much in Freemasonry as in popery. This is a fact to be remembered.

2. The mystic order, also, has the name of blasphemy in a pre-eminent degree. It blasphemes the incomprehensible Jehovah by its claims of mystery, and its refusal to recognize that hidden things should belong exclusively to God. In many respects it arrogates the prerogatives of God; and it manifestly abrogates the Divine authority over the conscience. The extra-judicial, blasphemous, corrupting oaths of the fraternity fully entitle it to rank as one head of the wonderful beast. This is a fact so evident to me, that I regard it as really almost axiomatic.

The ten crowns of the order:

1. Flattery.
2. Pomp.
3. Patronage.
4. Sagacity.
5. Power.
6. Wealth.
7. Security.
8. Sanctity.
9. Applause.
10. Guilt.

The ten horns on which the crowns are worn:

1. Pretension.
2. Deception.
3. Shame.
4. Secrecy.
5. Craftiness.
6. Selfishness.
7. Criminality.
8. Hypocrisy.
9. Treason.
10. Assassination.

On the seven mountains of mystery, these ten horns are the reigning monarchs developing their power through a great variety of secret oath-bound orders.

The seven heads:

1. The abomination of Egypt—Osiris.
2. The Nabathæan abomination—Tammuz.
3. The Syrian abomination—Baal.
4. The abomination of Phœnicia—Adonis.
5. The Arabian abomination—El Khouder.
6. The Babylonian abomination—Yanbushadh.
7. The abomination of England—Hiram Abiff.

These seven abominations have had their power through a multitude of cotemporary and inferior conclaves, and have given tone and character to all the pernicious religions of the world.

In each of them, the legend of a man bewailed and sought for, who had been put to death in a shameful manner for refusing to reveal some great secret, is the heart of the leading mystery. Typhon could not extort the secret of Phez from Osiris. Tammuz would not save his life by the betrayal of the knowledge-word. Baal refused to communicate Aphroditee's wonder-word. Adonis could not be prevailed upon to part with the word that holds the mystery in his possession. El Khouder would not betray the method by which he could lift the veil of futurity. Yanbushadh would not produce his mystic word for producing oceans and earthquakes. Hiram Abiff refused to betray the Master Mason's word.

1. Osiris, slain by Typhon, bewailed by men in the garb of women, who recover his remains from the sea. 2. Tammuz, cruelly put to death several times, but revives after each martyrdom to punish his murderers; bewailed by women only. 3. Baal, the half-human, who had the key of knowledge by pronouncing Aphroditee's wonder-word, was murdered by an angry deity, and his body buried in the sand. Bewailed by both sexes, who search for his body and find it. 4. Adon, or Adonis, slain by the furious boar-god of Ares, subject of wailing, seeking and finding. 5. El Khouder, assassinated for concealing the word by which he could lift the veil of futurity; greatly lamented by men in the head-dress of women—bonnet-wearers—who find his body but cannot restore it to life till his murderers are punished. 6. Yanbushadh, the holy. For one whole night the sekain of the gods and angels lamented the murder of Yanbushadh, and there came a great flood of rain with loud thunder and fearful lightning, as also a furious earthquake, to punish those who had abandoned Yanbushadh; while his dead body lay on the bare ground in the desert of Shamaz. 7. Hiram Abiff, slain by three ruffians; lamented by the apron-wearing fraternity; his body found and raised by the Master's grip, or lion's paw.

The fatherless condition of these bewailed victims is worthy of remark. While Osiris was an infant, in one of his baby plays, he accidentally choked his father to death. The mother of Tammuz became a widow on the day of his birth. The father of Baal died seven months before Baal could walk. The mother of Adonis had no husband. El Khouder was only seven days old when his father died. Yanbushadh with a word of magic turned his father into an ocean and left his mother a widow, because his father forbade him to make it thunder more than seven times in course of an hour. Hiram Abiff was a widow's son.

At the hour of full twelve, Osiris retired to the inmost room of his temple to hear the sacred birds sing. Tammuz always retired to a secluded grove for meditation whenever noon arrived. Baal invariably sought the chamber of Aphroditee when the sun stood in the center of the heavens, and gained her embraces by speaking the wonder-word. Adonis went to his apartment regularly at the meridian of the day and dressed himself in white garments. Upon the advent of midday, El Khouder went to a booth in his garden for prayer. Yanbushadh bathed in the ocean an hour every day, beginning his bath just at noon. It was the custom of Hiram Abiff to enter into the sanctum sanctorum at high twelve to offer up his devotions.

Typhon fled far west of the sea in which the dismembered remains of Osiris were found. The furious Boar-god of Ares, who killed Adonis, was pursued to the west of heaven, where he hid in a thicket. The destroyers of Tammuz were always carried to the western border of Nabath to be punished. The slayer of Baal fled to the west, and was concealed in a cave of diamonds. The three murderers of El Khouder, having confessed, were taken to the west of the garden to be beheaded. The three assassins of Yanbushadh became, by magical incantations, three rivers flowing westward to the ocean. The three ruffians who slew Hiram Abiff were taken without the west gate of the temple to be executed.

The processions in quest of Osiris went, in June, seven times around his temple. Among the weeping women, as their wailing for Tammuz took place in June, the month itself was often styled the month of Tammuz. The search after Baal occurred in June. The quest of Adonis took place in June. The ancient Arabs regarded June as sacred to the memory of El Khouder. The sekain who lamented Yanbushadh held their mourning in June. Freemasons generally esteem June as the month of Hiram Abiff, holding that his body was raised on the 24th day of that month, on what is called the five points of fellowship, which are foot to foot, knee to knee, breast to breast, hand to back, and mouth to ear.

The priests of Egypt have a ridiculous and verbose history of Osiris, which they relate to those whom they admit to their mysteries. The weeping women were taught a long silly story of Tammuz, when initiated to his secret rites. The Baalites had to memorize a foolish and tedious account of Baal. A wild, fanciful narrative regarding El-Khouder was taught in the secret meetings of his order. The Kuthamians had a startling and windy mess of lies about Yanbushadh. The Freemasons indulge in a wearisome, absurd account of Hiram Abiff.

There was the dance of men dressed as women, to reverence Osiris; the feast of weeping women in honor of Tammuz; the festival of wailing maidens celebrating Adonis; the banquet of mourners, for the worship of Baal; the fair of the bonnet-wearing men on finding El Khouder; the convocation and sekain supper for lamentation over Yanbushadh; and the refreshment of apron-wearing men after the raising of Hiram Abiff's body. But I would weary the reader by tracing all the points of analogy.

Some of these secret orders have ingrained their tendencies, doctrines and precepts upon the Latin kingdom, and live in the order of Jesuits. Some of them have influenced the course of Mormonism. Some of them have leavened the infidelity of France and shaped that fickle-minded nation. Some of them have given birth and activity to Spiritualism, Universalism and Materialism. Some of them are now at work wherever the number of the beast, 666, is not carefully guarded against. The chances of moral degradation by Blue Lodge Masonry, Preimasonri, are six in the first degree, sixty in the second degree, and six hundred in the third degree. Paganism, Romanism, Mohammedanism, Mormonism, Spiritualism, Universalism and Materialism derive their chief support from this seven-headed beast.

Osiris is strictly Paganism; Tammuz is essentially Romanism, in her nuns and sisterhoods; Baal is, with few variations, the creed of Mohammed; Adonis is Mormonism; El Khouder is Spiritism in essence; Yanbushadh is Materialism in all its grossness; and Hiram Abiff is Universalism, when carefully scrutinized. It would be easy, in my opinion, to prove this, by going into a detailed examination of these seven abominations of the earth. God says, "Proclaim;" they say, "Conceal." He says, "Forsake and confess;" they say, "Never reveal." He says, "Obey the Lord;" they say, "Yield blind compliance to associations of men." He says, "Do not swear;" they say, "Swear vehemently, repeatedly, terribly." He says, "Renounce the hidden things of shame;" they say, "You are perjured if you do."

The knaves who fabricated Freemasonri in 1717, understood their business. They made a history of lies about "Hiram Abiff"—seizing on the mere phrase as found in Scripture, and palmed the stuff off on their deluded dupes as a genuine transaction.

Instead of "women weeping for Tammuz," the modern abomination is men who wear aprons bewailing Hiram Abiff; and the self-styled "Order of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons" is essentially anti-Christ, being idolatry refitted with Scripturally named symbols, and passing itself off as the handmaid of religion, although pagan in every nerve and fiber of its framework. I might say more, but the present article is long enough already, and furnishes a little key to the mystery of the beast with the seven heads and the ten horns.

Let us beware of the beast and of whatever has his number.

THE AMERICAN PLATFORM AND NOMINATIONS FOR 1876.

FOR PRESIDENT:
James B. Walker,
of Illinois.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT
Donald Kirkpatrick,
of New York.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage, is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. The charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discountenanced.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency, and a return to specie payment as soon as practicable.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And finally we demand for the Americanpeople the abolition of the Electoral Colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

Good speakers are expected to be present and address the people.

By order of the Executive Committee, G. W. NEEDLES,

WHY VOTE FOR WALKER AND KIRKPATRICK?

1st. Because to vote for either the Republican or Democratic ticket is to vote for the continuation of Masonic rule, which is a wicked vote.

2d. Because it is not right to allow the weakness or wickedness of other men to force us to compromise our principles and to state that if our voting the American Party ticket enables the Democrats to carry the election, therefore we would be responsible for their rule, is but to repeat the lie which for the past fifty years has in thousands of instances caused anti-slavery men to vote for slavery, temperance men to vote for intemperance, Anti-masons to vote for Freemasons and Freemasonry, good men to vote for tricksters and scoundrels.

3d. Because it is as plain a duty to vote right as to pray right, and if we vote for Walker and Kirkpatrick, we shall not only vote as we pray, but also set an example, which, if followed by all, will give us the best rulers our nation has had for a generation past. Tolerably sensible women have felt compelled to marry men to save them from threatened suicide in case of their refusal. We say let such men die—the world would be better off without them. We also say let the corrupt Masonic Republican party die rather than unite our destinies with it, and become thereby partakers of its sins as we must.

LOCAL POLITICS.

We recognize the fact that some conscientiously believe it their duty to vote for Hayes and Wheeler, and some may also as conscientiously vote for Tilden and Hendricks, and in this respect we, of course, differ widely in our belief. But there can be no possible dispute as to the wisdom, nay the plain duty to carry our principles into local politics and nominate none but out and out Anti-masons all for Town, County, and where practicable, State offices.

HOW TO PROCEED.

Write out a simple call for a meeting of the friends of good government, and get the signatures of from five to fifty voters, the more the better, who are sound on this question.

The following form will answer every purpose;

We, the undersigned, voters of the county of ——, and State of ——, hereby call a public meeting of those citizens who, with us, are opposed to secretism and ring rule and in favor of good government, for the purpose of nominating Town and County officers for the pending election.

Put your very best men in nomination, and if you cannot vote the straight American Party ticket, whatever national ticket you vote, paste your local ticket on to it in place of the other local offices. Hundreds of local elections can be carried in this way. Electoral tickets have been made out for Connecticut and Indiana, and are being prepared for New York, Ohio, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, and some other States. EZRA A. COOK, Acting Chairman Central Committee, American Party.

TO THE FRIENDS OF THE AMERICAN PARTY IN MICHIGAN.

You are American citizens. As such you are endowed with certain "inalienable rights." These rights carry with them important duties and obligations which may not causelessly be neglected or thrown off. Among these is the duty of choosing rulers for the people in towns, municipality, State and Nation. This is a solemn and important obligation, and admitting that you, and each of you hold the rights of citizenship, it is your individual duty,—as much as though you were the only individual concerned—to see that good men, and good men only, are put in nomination and voted for, to fill the offices of the land, at least so far as your influence extends. To one worthy the name, and the privileges of a good citizen, this can never prove a matter of indifference. The discharge of this duty, will necessitate action with others, or party action. But this action with a certain party is only obligatory so long as that party shall act righteously and select such men as standard bearers as are men of honor, free from entangling alliances with men and institutions whose principles, objects and aims are of vicious or of doubtful tendencies. When parties become corrupt and are found to be departing from righteous principles, acting in the interests of a few, rather than for the good of the whole, then it becomes the duty of the citizen to refuse to act longer with such party, and to join and act with some other of purer principles, and under the lead of better men. Should there be no party to which he can go, without being compelled to act from the miserable maxim, "of two evils, choose the least," let him seek for others like-minded, with himself, and let them start another party!

Crises will come, at longer or shorter intervals, in which enlightened and conscientious men will find it difficult, if not impossible, to act with either of the existing parties, without sin. Both the great parties, as now existing, are corrupt—one terribly so, and is in every way unworthy the confidence and support of any good man. The people long ago condemned it. As now principled and led, it is, if possible, less worthy of support than ever before.

THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY

of to-day, is incurably bad. The Republican party has had a glorious record, and has deserved well of the people; but long possession of great power has demoralized it. It had a mission to overthrow slavery and the foul rebellion engendered in its behalf. This, under God, it has accomplished; but other, and equally imperative reforms, it dares not touch with its little finger. It has in a great measure ceased to be the party of progress. So far as the rescue of the country from other and crying evils is concerned it is a failure. It could not save us from the injuries inflicted by the liquor traffic, if it would. The party is largely dependent on the German vote, which it would lose, should it attempt a reform in this direction. And so, under its rule we must suffer under the deluge of lager beer, and the infidelity which floats on its turbid current. It could not, if it would, stay the torrent of oath-bound secretism, which is eating out the piety from the pulpit and the pew—dishonoring the marriage relations, poisoning the fountains of justice—undermining the very foundations of our republican government, by thus corrupting all its safeguards. Should it dare to strike at these secretists it would be as fatal to the party as a hearty blow at the liquor traffic. Against these evils, it is powerless, and we have nothing to hope from it. If it lives longer, 'tis not as the party of progress—leading the nation on to new victories over the enemies of its very life.

THE REPUBLICAN PARTY

has done much that is to be commended; but it has failed to render its victories and their results, permanent. It has ceased to be effectively aggressive against the foes of the nation's life, and its attention is now given almost wholly to a defense of its own existence, against a foe it once conquered, but has weakly allowed to rise up and bully it in its own citadels. It asks the people for a new lease of power, pointing to what it has done; forgetting to confess what it has left undone by which our national life is imperiled; and is utterly unable to give a guarantee of protection against other and growing evils.

Such is the crisis we have now reached. In consequence of this condition, a new party called the "American Party" has sprung into existence, as yet weak in numbers, but mighty in its principles and in the fact that it is the creature of Providence—born of a holy purpose—the offspring of prayer, having for its aim the deliverance of the nation from the enemies which beset its life, religiously, morally and politically.

The attempts to keep us from voting for the platform and the nominees of this party are multitudinous; the arguments used are plausible, but specious, and many good men are carried away by them. The nominees of the Republican party may as individuals be unexceptional. I believe they are so, but they are wedded to a party which is "weighed in the balances and found wanting." It is impossible to assist in keeping the Republican party in power, without strengthening the hands of the Masonic despotism, already too strong for our safety. Can we, who are enlighted, do this innocently?

We are cited to certain possible results if we now break off and vote for the party which we in the fear of God have formed. If it was right to form it, or encourage its formation, then it will be wrong to desert it. Let the Anti-masons of Michigan do right, and God will take care of the results. "Of two evils, choose" neither; but do right if the skies fall. More anon.

J. L. BARLOW.

POMEROY'S TESTIMONY OF RONAYNE'S REVELATIONS.

The Ethiopian has not changed his skin nor the leopard his spots and neither has "Brick" Pomeroy—the notorious Brick—changed from what he was long before his ebon locks began to fall and he became barefoot on top of his head. Some weeks ago "Brick" published in his venemous copperhead sheet a statement which he pretended to have copied from the "records" of Keystone Lodge to that effect that that lodge meets at 62 N. Clark st., but that I was never "either an officer or a private in such lodge," while in his paper of the twelfth inst. he positively states that "Edmond Ronayne was at one time Master of a lodge in this city as we learn from the records." In which of these statements has the "Brick" lied, and in which has he told the truth? and yet he "invites attention" to his scurrilous editorial claiming that he "answers in truth" and with "a disposition to give correct information." His next attempt at truth-telling, however, is truly remarkable, and his knowledge of history both sacred and profane is doubtless the result of his deep researchies into the mysteries of Masonic science. Hear him on the origin of Masonry. "At the building of Solomon's Temple armies of men were employed. The room where the plans were lodged or kept underground was the lodge room. To this room those who had the signs, grips and passwords had free access at all times because they were men who were free. . . The temple built by the free and accepted Masons as the spirit outlives the material it once actuated," etc., etc. Now compare this with the Grand Lodge Report of Illinois for 1874. On page 63, "Foreign Correspondence," we read as follows from the pen of Past Grand Master Parvin of Iowa, and Grand Secretary of that State, "And while it may be safely said that the fools are not all dead, and yet he who now asserts that either Adam or Seth or Solomon were Freemasons, sins against light and knowledge and ought to be excluded from the platform of public instruction." Again on page 128, "The third degree was not manufactured until about the year 1721." Where then is poor Brick's beautiful fiction of Freemasonry being organized and perfected at the Solomonic Temple and being transmitted to us unimpaired from that period to the present time? But Pomeroy, as a truthful teacher of Masonic science and a faithful chronicler of Masonic history, wishes to put himself more squarely upon record and so he boldly asserts that the "secrets of Masonry have thus far been kept." They have, have they? Why, Brick, you must be getting far into your dotage or else you wilfully misrepresent the facts of American history. Do you not know that one hundred and thirty-eight Masons met in convention in the town of Leroy, New York, July 4th, 1828, and published to the world their celebrated "Declaration of Independence" and with it thirty degrees of Masonry? Do you not know that Elder David Bernard published the Masonic secrets; that Wm. Morgan published them and thereby lost his life; that Avery Allen published them; that Samuel Pritchard of London in 1730, in his book entitled "Freemasonry dissected," published the Masonic secrets and for which his throat was cut from ear to ear? Are you not aware that "Carlisle" of England published the entire ritual and secret workings of the Grand Lodge of England and that Duncan's Ritual contains the so-called secrets of Masonry up to and including the "chapter" while "Richardson's Monitor" gives the Masonic secrets of thirty or forty degrees. Are you not also aware that the "Hand Book of Freemasonry" contains a literal revelation of Ancient Craft Masonry, giving the "Standard Work" of Illinois as I received it from Ed. Cook, John O'Neil, H. F. Holcomb, Geo. O. Ide and M. D. Chamberlain, all Deputy Grand Masters and Grand Examiners in the Grand Lodge of Illinois, and who dare not deny, over their own signatures, that they have not been my teachers and that my revelation of Freemasonry is not literally correct. You know all this to be the naked truth, but from the very nature of your obligations you must of necessity utter falsehoods to bolster up your infernal iniquity. Your foul vaporings about Masonic morality and Masonic brotherhood is too thin; it is mere bosh and you know it is so, and what is more, you know that I know it is so. The statement, that "for a long time after the great fire he (I) lived on Masonic charity, doing no work, but demanding money from Masons, wherewith not only to live, but to engage in business," is on a par with the rest of his foul calumnies and would deserve no notice were it not that it is intended for country readers, and is the only weapon Masonry or its advocates can use in self-defense. It is a deliberate Masonic falsehood. In the Chicago fire of 1871, I lost three houses, two of them two-story and one a newly finished three-story house. I received $2,000 insurance from the Ætna Insurance Co., of Hartford, as the books will show, and by selling one of my lots I was enabled to build my present residence which is twenty feet wide, sixty-eight feet long and four story, and rented in May, 1872, for $136 per month. So much for Pomroy's defense of Freemasonry.

I renounced and denounced the institution in 1874. I have publicly exposed in this city its blasphemous and soul-destroying ceremonies, both in my own school-room, in the Father Mathew Temperance Hall, and in Farwell Hall last June. All of these meetings were numerously attended, especially those in Farwell Hall, where over five thousand people witnessed the working of the Masonic degrees, and yet neither "Brick" Pomeroy nor any other Mason in this city dare attempt to refute a single charge I made against Masonry, or even to deny that $60,000 out of the paltry pittance sent to relieve the sufferers by the Great Fire were misappropriated by the Masonic grand moguls of this city.

In closing this letter I will briefly notice one more item in "Brick's" truthful narrative. It is to be found in his pretended account of my interview with him in what he calls his "sanctum." He bravely publishes his own boorishness and vulgarity by boasting that he called me "a deliberate liar, a thief," etc. Now hear him—this truthful, immaculate teacher, this champion of Masonic morality and virtue, this man who, by aid of the square and compass, "has learned to subdue his passions." In the first part of his editorial venom he publicly and positively states that "Edmond Ronayne was at one time Master of a lodge in this city, as we learn from the records." Now that point is settled. There can be no further doubt on that score. Brick Pomeroy has at last published to the world the truth that I was really Worshipful Master of Keystone Lodge.

Now then hear how terribly brother Pomeroy raves in the same breath in which he uttered the foregoing declaration, "You are not a Mason, for a Mason never gives away nor sells his secret, or the secret of his brothers" (murder and treason not even excepted). Why, "Brick," for shame! You naughty, naughty man! you stated plainly just now, that I was not only a Mason, but even a W. Master, and now you—well, every one knows what you are, you do it all on the square, just as Jake Rehm and A. C. Hesing, two eminent Chicago Masons, robbed Uncle Sam and after all are yet "in good standing."

But further. Let us listen to Brick's new ritualistic dialogue—his mighty arguments in favor of Masonic virtue, etc.

Ronayne—"I am not a liar."

Brick—"Then you are not a Mason."

Of course admitting, though perhaps unintentionally, that a Mason and a liar signify one and the same thing.

Ronayne—"Yes I am a Mason."

Brick—"Then you are a liar."

Again alleging that a liar and a Mason are one.

"If you are a Mason trusted with secrets, then you are a liar when you go about the country telling what you promised under a voluntary obligation never to reveal and never to tell to a person you did not know to be a Mason." Now this is really too bad of Bro. Pomeroy. He published, in fact advertises me as being W. Master of Keystone Lodge—and now he boldly asserts, for the benefit of the entire craft everywhere, that I am going about the country, revealing what I promised not to reveal; that is, that I am exposing Freemasonry correctly and working the degrees as I worked them for two years in Keystone Lodge No. 639. By doing this, of course I must at all times be speaking truth to my audiences, but Pomeroy claims that while all this is true as regards my public meetings, yet I did lie to the lodge when I promised to "conceal and never reveal," and am now publicly making Masons by the thousand at least, every week. Every Mason who admits that I am revealing the so-called Masonic secrets is himself a wilful revealer of the same secrets. Every Mason who admits that I am violating my obligations is himself a violator of his Masonic obligations, because he is bearing testimony to Indiana.—From Dr. Cook's Work in Grant County.

Marion, Ind., Aug. 10th, '76.

Dear Cynosure:—Allow me, through your columns, to say to the friends of truth and light, that Dr. S. L. Cook, of Albion, Noble Co., Ind., visited our county (Grant) some weeks since, and delivered seven lectures at seven different points just previous to our State convention. The Dr.'s lectures were well received by the friends of the cause, but not so well received by the cable-towed and hood-winked. The strength of his arguments consisted in copious quotations from both Masonic and Odd-fellow Grand Lodge reports, also quotations from their standard authorities and current literature. He proved by their own publications that they are not only a stupendous falsehood, cheat and swindle from beginning to end, but that their claims of charity and benevolence, are the most transparent shams of the basest fabrication. I think the Dr. would make us a good State lecturer. We endorsed him at our State convention.

I received a postal card from him a few days since. He informed me that while going to fill an appointment in Whitley Co., the gentleman's team, with whom he was riding, ran away, threw him (Cook) out of the wagon, the tire striking his head and considerably injuring it; also hurt his back and breast, so that he was unable to get up or down without help—was truly sorry to hear of his misfortune; hope the good Lord may preserve him.

Our convention passed off very pleasantly, and I hope profitably. We were in a little too much of a hurry. Our attendance would have been much larger the second than the first day, as a number were disappointed. Rev. Milton Wright was hindered, but reached there the second day. Suppose the Secretary has furnished you a full report ere this. Respectfully yours, etc.,

Geo. W. Champ, M. D.

Dr. Cook at Larwill, Whitley Co.

Last night, 12th of August, our friend, Dr. Cook from Albion, was with us and gave us a lecture which was a very able one. As I can judge it has reached the hearts of the people. Some grangers or Odd-fellows tried to injure his argument but did not gain anything by it. The more they defend their devilish institutions the more ground we gain, for God and his saving Gospel is on our side. I am confident that some of our best neighbors felt like rejoicing and I hope the dry bones will soon be covered with flesh and a mouth will be given them to speak and testify to the truth that is in Christ Jesus, and against the unfruitful works of darkness of which the founder is the devil.

Brethren in Christ Jesus, let us pay our tithes unto the Lord. "Render Cæsar that is Cæsar's and unto God that is God's," and unto the devil and his hosts their just punishment if they will not repent of sin. Let them know that God is a powerful revenger as well as rewarder.

Your friend in the Lord.

Twilight at Waukesha, Wis.

The readers of the Cynosure and friends may be glad to learn that an opening has been made and light admitted into this corner of the domain of the lodge, and that the mysteries of iniquity are being duly uncovered. Bro. U. D. Lathrop, of Walworth Co., was here on the 14th and 15th of June, and lectured on both evenings, but owing to the heavy rains and the fact of weekly meetings in the various churches, and one or two business meetings, and the annual Baptist convention at the same time, all helped to make a light attendance, but the main trouble was, doubtless a dread of light by the secret fraternities and their friends.

Bro. L. showed the whole dark arrangement of sworn secrecy to be wrong, a swindle against individuals and a lying imposture, from the top to the bottom of the dark conspiracy against Christianity and free government. On the last evening our fearless champion of God's truth used the words of Christ, "This is the condemnation, that light is come into the world," etc., and though few were present, the word was with power and unanswerable argument against lodge religion, the sworn enemy to Christianity. He also sent the javelin of the Lord after the rum-power. Here, as in other towns, are straightout Masons in plenty, but some are desiring the coming light. There are a very few open and avowed Anti-masons, and a large number opposed (though far too quietly so), to Masonry in the churches, and another very numerous class of real "jack Masons," who readily do the braying for the fraternity unhonored and unpaid.

A New Advocate of the Reform in Connecticut.

Putnam, Conn., July 31, 1876.

Editor Cynosure.—Mr. Joseph S. Perry, of Thompson, Conn., addressed an audience here yesterday (Sunday), at 5 o'clock P. M., on "The Religion of Freemasonry." Over forty turned out in a heavy, drenching rain, which shows an interest (abundantly indicated otherwise also) that would have given him a crowded house had the weather been favorable. He quotes from the highest Masonic authorities, with their book before him, which any Mason who doubts may examine for himself.

There were Masons present, both professors of the Christian religion and non-professors.

Interesting incidents, during and after the address, I have not time to relate. I think no Christian, in or out of the lodge, who heard Bro. Perry, can fail to feel that Freemasonry is a false religion, utterly opposed to Christ, and ruinous to souls. He easily shows how those outside of the lodge may know more of the true character of Freemasonry, than most of those inside the lodge do know. I firmly believe that the great mass of Masons are as ignorant of that character, as the great mass of Roman Catholics are of the character of the Romish church. Friends of the reform, in Connecticut and adjoining States, should invite Bro. Perry to visit them. The enemy honors him by beginning to throw mud at him plentifully, according to his usual practice. Bro. Perry's address is Joseph S. Perry, Thompson, Conn. Yours truly,

Geo. H. Williams.

TRAVELING ACQUAINTENCES AND INCIDENTS—READY FOR WORK—THE GRAND OPPORTUNITIES—FRIENDLY VISITS AND HELPERS—THE REFORM A WONDER—MORGAN NOT FORGOTTEN.

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 10, '76.

On the cars I found myself next to a subscriber of the Cynosure, a lawyer, who would require an enormous fee to plead for a Freemason if guilty of any illegal act.

About half way, on changing cars, I had a seat beside two students on their way East to College. Both were of Methodist families and had received right impressions regarding secret organizations. Another gentleman was very decided, and proved to be a Lutheran minister, who may address you a letter with his sentiments. The baneful influence of the system may be verified by any intelligent Christian daily, if he chooses to elicit proof. It is more than social. Even grant it to be benevolent in some of its features, what then? If it is also a religion, it is not the Christian, nor any part of the Christian religion. Freemasonry has prayers but none through Christ. It has a god but not the God and Father of our Lord and Saviour. It is a popular delusion that the word religion refers only to that of Christ in this country. Let the young men wake up to the fact that there are other religions, seducing from that of Christ, sapping their faith in him, and virtually teaching that if a man is a good Mason he needs no Christ. How it is that so many members of churches continue to allow their names to be on record as Freemasons. It must be ascribed very much to moral cowardice. It is so unpleasant to incur reproach!

The route via Buffalo and Lehigh Valley was very beautiful, and the weather quite pleasant. The scenery in moonlight was quite as fine as during the day in some respects, and no aceident nor any unpleasantness came across the pathway to this beautiful city.

Aug. 12th. I am at a private boarding house, where I have to pay six dollars a week. Have got photograph taken and pass stamped, so that now I am fully installed here. At the rate of distribution now going on, another supply of tracts will be needed soon. [Bro. Hodge shall not lack for tracts if friends continue their contributions. He had 8,000 pages to begin with.]

There is here such a grand opportunity to win young men to our cause that I am not surprised at the zeal of Elder Freeman. I have met men from so many parts of the world that it would be a long list to enumerate them. J. S. Hickman of Iroquois Co., Ill., called to-day and at once went to distributing tracts also. He is a zealous friend of our cause, and brought news of an encouraging character. Several other Cynosure subscribers have called. Two gentlemen were attracted to the stand, one of whom, if I may judge from his readiness to enter upon an argument, was a lawyer, who attempted to justify secretism by the "good man" argument, and referred to his brother as a Mason and a Presbyterian minister, but was reminded that this was the old pro-slavery argument. He admitted that the forty who swore they would kill Paul ought to have broken their oath, and failed to show why Freemasons were any more bound to keep their murderous oaths.

The incidents are interesting and numerous, and it is amusing to see how tenderly and with what an air of eandor the oath-bound ones begin and endeavor to elicit some kind expression, but whenever the question is asked: "Are you a Mason"? and an affirmative answer is given their demeanor changes.

Many who have heard of our reform seem greatly surprised at our work, and at the many tracts and books on the subject, and open their eyes in amazement at "Freemasonry at a Glanee," as pictured in the Cynosure. There are many warm friends so far as words go. To-day, however, gave an example of a more eneouraging eharacter in the hearty proffer of a dollar for the traet fund from Thomas Bell of Iowa, a Cynosure subscriber.

I think our stand is in a very good place, and has its full share of visitors, among whom are ministers of all denominations, and in fact all who wish to see the Book Department of the Centennial in its old and new features.

I find that the Morgan murder has by no means been forgotten, and many express surprise at the undaunted courage of Mr. Ronayne. Several young men have shown a warm interest in this question, and I like to encourage them to post themselves, for eertainly it is by the young men that the future victory will be obtained.

Thomas Hodge.

A Funeral Ceremony Wisely Improved.

Carlinville, Ill., Aug. 2d, 1876.

Dear Cynosure:—During a few weeks sojourn here, nothing occurred to bring the lodge to notice until yesterday. Burke, one of the wealthiest and most prominent citizens of the county, and sometime a State Senator, died suddenly Saturday night of heart disease, (or anger at the proceedings of the recent Democratic convention at Springfield), and of course he was buried with Masonic honors (?).

Early in the afternoon the stirring music of the band aroused my attention, and I saw parading around the square a procession of about sixty of the white-aproned gentry followed by several ragged boys. They were on their way to the residence of the deceased, and, understanding that the services were to be at the M. E. ehureh, I went thither with much the same feeling and purpose that I would have gone to any heathen ceremony, but I was agreeably disappointed, for the pastor went into the pulpit without any Masonic emblem and conducted the whole exercise in a Christian manner. When he had finished he said that he believed the Masonic order were to have some exercises at the grave and they would now take charge of the body. Several young men, newly formed acquaintances, were asked to notice the proceeding carefully so as to satisfy themselves in regard to the use of Christ's name by Masons.

The usual performances were gone through with, prayers, singing, remarks by the Master, apron and evergreens explained and deposited, mystic motions, etc., but nowhere, not even in the final benediction by some stray Masonic Methodist minister was the name of Christ used.

The affair has set people to thinking upon the subject of Freemasonry, and now, while the field is freshly plowed, I conceive it to be my duty to scatter freely the seeds of truth.

Last evening as I was making a call at the house of one of the county supervisors, a lady, who is a member of the faculty of the Illinois Female College at Jacksonville, asked me to state my objections to Freemasonry, but just then the M. E. pastor and lady appeared on the scene. When all were seated and conversation resumed, the request was renewed. Turning to him, I said, "Mr. M——, I was about to explain why you did not wear a white apron to-day, but probably your can do so better than I." "I don't belong to the order," said he, "isn't that reason enough?" "No," said I, "that is a surface answer. there must be something behind that." "Well, I did join about twenty years ago; they didn't charge me anything to join; but I have backslidden, I don't like their ceremonies, oaths, &c., in fact I have told them that they need not count me as one of them any more."

That was all I could get out of him in the presence of the company, but I intend to improve his very cordial invitation to call at his house.

Later in the evening questions were asked about Westfield College and the U. B. church. Brother M. was able to explain its position on secret societies, for once a young man applied to join the M. E. church bearing a letter of dismission from a U. B. pastor stating that he was in good standing except that he had joined the Good Templars. The idea of excluding from church relation for such a reason caused some merriment, mingled with indignation, among the young people present; but soon after in explanation of my church relation, I said, "I am a Congregationalist in principle, but would rather a thousand times belong to the United Brethren than to a Congregational church that has Freemasons in its membership."

"May God bless you for that," said the lady of the house, "give me your hand on that, my brother; that is just the way my father used to talk."

As I saw the interested crowd staring at the Masonic performances yesterday and thought of the secret but terrible power wielded by this band of organized selfishness which, in this county, rules everything with an iron hand, destroying relentlessly the business of any one who may dare to raise his voice against it, (as I know from bitter experience), and could not think of a single person in this whole city willing to stand by me in opposition to it, I felt somewhat as Paul did when he first began to preach Christ in heathen Rome, but now I thank God and take courage. There are some here who have not bowed the knee to Baal, and many are willing to receive the truth, some are even seeking it.

If all the readers of the Cynosure would present their views upon the subject of secret societies whenever opportunities occur, I believe the cause might be advanced wonderfully. Men are more easily influenced by the earnest words of a friend, than by the utterances of a lecturer who is a stranger to them however eloquent he may be. The circulation of printed matter is a very valuable agency, but, unless preceded by the spoken word to secure attention, our tracts and papers are seldom read.

Brother M. thinks that an appeal to the Grand Lodge of Ill. to forbid the use of the name of Christ in the lodge was tabled. Can the Cynosure cite positive evidence of the position of the Grand Lodge on this point? Elliot Whipple.

The Contrasts of Secretism.

Dear Cynosure:—I am glad to see your handsome face. You have improved so much lately that all your friends delight in your appearance. You are a great comfort to old eyes, and are very attractive to young ones. Long life to you!

Half a century ago, I well remember, when visitors called, the bottle and glass were as regularly produced as the question "How d'ye do," was asked. Not to have offered liquor would have been regarded as a cut, and an end to friendship. Now the insult lies in offering the glass; for certainly no sensible hostess or host would venture to do so in these days without incurring a certain degree of odium. Thanks to the advocates of temperance for the change.

A quarter of a century ago, I well remember, to advocate freedom to the slaves of these United States, was as much as one's life was worth in many parts, and in many more the brand of fanaticism was put upon men who have already become the glory of the country, while the panderers to and abettors of the accursed system would gladly tear the leaves from the record of their grand error. Negro slavery cannot again be re-established under the stars and stripes, thanks to the men to whom principle was more precious than popularity.

Half a century ago secretism had, like slavery, awakened the honest indignation of the community of the Eastern States, and was apparently overthrown. But secretism is based on a perversion of the human faculties. It hypocritically smiles and whispers, like the serpent to Eve, "Ye shall not surely die." It entices men from acknowledging the sole supremacy of Christ, and requires them to be illegally oath-bound by men. It pretends to not interfere with one's faith, yet tells him it is useless in the lodge. It talks of brotherly love, and has penalties of terrific hate. It ever insinuates wondrous benefits, yet denies that it solicits membership. It magnanimously accepts the homage of its dupes, and chains them as slaves to its triumphal car. It professes equality, but demands abject submission to its despotic power. It is not a religion in one breath, and in the next it is the best of any. It has an open Bible here, but the Koran yonder. It has a Great Architect, but no Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. It has a god, but not God in Christ, who is reconciling the world to himself.

What Christian exists in our land who does not feel called upon to pray for our protection and act against this fearful power which is daily perverting our sons and citizens? Shall the lodge or the church prevail? Shall we proclaim openly the pure Gospel, or bow to its arrogant perversion of religious truth? Up, freemen! Awake to duty! The foe is upon you, and a fate more mournful than that of Custer and his men awaits you, if you will not fight the good fight. Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty. H.

Lesson for Sept. 3.—Intemperance.

SCRIPTURE.—Prov. xxiii. 29-35.

29 Who hath woe? who hath sorrow? who hath contentions? who hath babbling? who hath wounds without cause? who hath redness of eyes? (Isa. v. 11, 22.)

30 They that tarry long at the wine; they that go to seek mixed wine.

31 Look not thou upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth his color in the cup, when it moveth itself aright. (Eph. v. 18.

32 At the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder. (Prov. xx. i.)

33 Thine eyes shall behold strange women, and thine heart shall utter perverse things. (Hab. ii. 5)

34 Yea, thou shalt be as he that lieth down in the midst of the sea, or as he that lieth upon the top of a mast.

35 They have stricken me, shalt thou say, and I was not sick; they have beaten me, and I felt it not: when shall I awake? I will seek it yet again. (Prov. xxvii. 22; Jer. v. 3; Eph. iv. 19; Isa. lvi. 12; 2 Pet. ii. 22.

LESSON NOTES.—(29.) Woe: Misery, resulting from poverty, sickness, etc.. Sorrow: Remorse of conscience. Contentions: Intoxicating liquors usually make men quarrelsome. The convivial party often breaks up in a fight. Babbling: The senseless, absurd, incoherent talk of a drunkard. Wounds without cause: Such as are consequent upon falls, and as are given and received in drunken brawls by those who, when sober, are fast friends. Redness of eyes: An outward sign of the fiery appetite within, and of the dreadful results of this. (30.) Mixed wine: Made by pouring different wines together, or mixing spices or some strong flavors with wine. (31.) When it is red: Attractive to the eye and strong to the taste. Gireth his color: Is bright and sparkling. Moveth itself aright: Foams, or shows the alcoholic spirit, bubbling up from the depth of the cup. (32.) At the last: However pleasant drinking or any sin is now, there is always a very different result at the last. Biteth like a serpent, stingeth like an adder: A serpent's bite is deadly, an adder's bite is incurable. There is death in the cup. (33.) Behold strange women: Drinking and licentiousness go hand in hand. Bad men and bad women associate readily. Perverse things: Drinking inflames the baser passions and excites in the breast impure or perverse imaginations. (34.) The midst of the sea, the top of a mast: Showing the drunkard's insensibility to danger. (35.) Stricken me and I was not sick: Better rendered, "And I felt it not, have beaten me and I knew it not, when I shall awake I will seek it yet again." The drunkard is insensible to the treatment he receives; a mere log, all manhood gone, and lower than the beasts of the field. And yet when he does awake to his situation, he finds himself subject to an awful craving, and says, "I will seek it again."—The S. S. Times.

Our Mail.

Dr. S. L. Cook, Albion, Ind., writes:

"I am better of my hurt and will lecture in Whitely Co. in a few days."

Moses Varney, Springdale, Cedar Co., Iowa, writes:

"Several of us expect to vote the American ticket. I circulate the paper to try to get new subscribers. It is hard to make a start, but when it becomes popular they will want to be on our side and claim the honors of the victory."

James M. Russell, Waterbury, Conn., writes:

"I think your plan is a good one to stop the paper when the money stops; the only one on which you can succeed."

Mrs. Mary A. Gamble, Birmingham, Oakland Co., Mich., writes:

"I have lent my papers containing the reports of the late anti-secrecy Convention in Chicago, to one and another and cannot supply all who wish to read and who rejoice with me in the growth of this great reform movement."

J. C. Spoonemore, Heppner, Umatilla Co., Oreg., writes:

"As my heart is fully in sympathy with the anti-secrecy work, I would gladly receive some of your 'free tracts' to distribute to the young men of Oregon who are daily being exposed to the slimy, polluting influence of secret societies. If I had the means I would scatter such literature all over this western country. May God hasten the day when the children of men will bow the knee to Christ instead of the modern Baal."

Philo Shepard, Decatur City, Iowa, writes:

"We do not wish to cast our votes
For men with rum devouring throats,
Nor those who seek unlawful wealth,
Who have no care for nation's health.

"Brethren, let us never scare,
But cast our votes with fervent prayer,
And God will evil overthrow,
And his power and justice show."

Geo. G. Gurnea, Tonica, LaSalle Co., Ill., writes:

"I thank God that you are enabled to speak out fearlessly in the cause of truth and righteousness. May the Lord prosper you in your arduous labors. May truth and righteousness prevail."

O. Emerson, Sabula, Iowa, writes:

"It is sad that we need so many societies for reform purposes, but this N. C. A. cannot be disposed with. There is no way of removing the evils of the lodge but in the destruction of the institution itself."

W. W. Stringer, Ridge, Noble Co., O., writes:

"There is much anti-secret sentiment in the country, but there is not backbone enough to face the beast and false prophet. May God speed the day when we all shall see eye to eye, and God's people be delivered from the curse of secret abominations in the earth."

Wm. Matthews, Ambrose Pa., writes:

"They are all Anti-masons here and need no information on the subject, still they vote Masons into office, and say What can you do? They get the nomination, and what can you do? We have so many what can-you do men. Our representative nominee for Congress, Gen. Harvey White, is a high Mason, but what can we do? We must vote for him or let the Democrats elect their man. I know one, however, who will not. I hope with God's blessing you will be instrumental in helping to break down one prominent branch of anti-Christ. We think we see some good signs. One is they are quarreling among themselves; a house divided against itself cannot stand."

A. J. Loudenback, Glidden, Carroll Co., Ia., asks:

"Could we not have a lecture here this fall soon? Do you have a ticket in Iowa?"

An electoral ticket for Iowa is now in preparation. Is there not an Anti masonic lecturer who can correspond with Mr. Loudenback and make arrangments for a lecture in his vicinity?

It chills my blood to hear the blest Supreme Rudely appealed to on each trifling theme;
Maintain your rank, vulgarity despise.
To swear is neither brave, polite, nor wise.
You would not swear upon a bed of death;
Reflect! Your Maker may now stop your breath.

thon withhold thy hand," how long shall the fetters of secretism bind in slavish fear, and silence the tongues of those we love. We can do little but pray; yet tracts like white winged doves, silent and unbidden like angels' visits, none knowing from whence they come, settle in many a home to raise their voice against this system of darkness. May the Lord continue to send dismay into their camp.

I have no malice in my heart because Masonry has drawn many of my kindred into its slimy folds, but I hate it because I feel that it is a great hindrance to Christ's kingdom, and to this cause I have consecrated my all. Yours in Christ,

MRS. A. A. DANLEY.

A Mason in Sabbath School.

ANITA, Iowa.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I have for some time past contemplated writing a few lines for your valuable paper, which I hope will be of interest to its readers. There are quite a number of anti-secret men here, and they are just now getting warmed up ready to work in the good cause. They expect to try for a lecturer as soon as a room can be secured for the purpose. There is some hope of getting the Congregational church as soon as it is completed. The Masons here have been very quiet until lately; my husband has been distributing some papers and a book or two on Masonry, and now they are beginning to howl like so many wolves. I hope we shall soon be able to get a lecturer here who will give them something to think about.

A few Sabbath's ago at Sabbath school, the Superintendent asked the children who built Solomon's Temple? The children did not answer the question at once, and a man, member of the church, teacher in Sabbath school, and a Mason, answered the question by saying that Hiram Abiff built the Temple. Now I should like to have you inform that worthy brother Mason who Hiram Abiff was, and also who built Solomon's Temple, seeing he is so ignorant, I think he should be enlightened.

Odd-fellows here are more numerous than Masons, they sneak around the corners and are afraid to say anything publicly. Walker will not get many votes in this place, but there is one man says he will put in his anti-secret ticket if there is not another man that votes it in this State. The battle still rages, and right will surely reign.

MRS. M. TIPTON.

Another Name for the Seceder's Roll of Honor.

BARABOO, WIS.

EDITOR CYNOSURE: As I have been a constant reader of your paper since the expose has been given by Mr. Ronayne, I would like to say that I was hood-winked into the Masonic humbug (as that is all it is) and wish now to denounce it publicly as such. The playing of Hiram Abiff looks more ridiculous every time I think of it. I wish to exclaim like one of old, "How long will these things be!"

I have taken three degrees in Masonry and wish my name put on the list of seceding Masons.

A. E. WATKINS.

From a Kansas Pastor.

McPHERSON, Kansas.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Living as I did but fourteen miles from Batavia, New York, at the time Morgan was kidnapped, I became opposed to secret societies, and have remained so opposed ever since. Seeing the request for ministers to preach on that subject on the fourth of June last, I volunteered to do so on the evening of that day. I had a good congregation, and said a few words in reference to the origin and objects of the National Christian Association, and some of the reasons why we sought the destruction of all secret societies. Quite a number of Masons, Odd-fellows and grangers were present. Some interest in the subject I think will result. A Mason told me on Tuesday after, that they would furnish me a room and light it if I would give a course of lectures on the subject, as I was helping them by exciting the curiosity of the people, and he had heard two persons say that they intended to join the lodge so as to know whether I had told them the truth or not.

I see by the Cynosure that it is the intention to form electoral tickets for the several States. I hope Kansas will not be forgotten, as a number of us here in McPherson county want to vote for the American Party.

Your brother in Christ,

AMBROSE SHELLEY.

The Strength of the Lodge Wasting.

MARSEILLES, Ill., Aug. 8, 1876.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I have long desired to communicate with you, with regard to the craft in this place. There is, evidently, trouble among them. Some of them may have had a vision of a "barley cake" rolling into their camp. Many adhering Masons do not deny the expose but denounce the exposer. One man, who has adhered long and closely to the fraternity, telling his wife a thousand lies about the lodge, now admits that "Masonry is dying."

But as the fabled Sphynx is said to "rise from warm ashes," so we have a new dogma; its followers christen it "the council," a child, methinks very like its mother; as one of the leading men in it confidentially told his wife that "it was so near like Masonry it was no trouble for him to learn it." But amid all these obstacles I feel to raise my heart in grateful prayer that He that is for us is greater than all those who are against us, though their name is "legion."

There are a good many here who do not believe in Masonry, and would rejoice to see its fetters broken; but who will not speak loud for fear of injuring their business. For secretism and whiskey rule here, and we very much need lectures in this place, to rouse the public spirit. A few earnest souls are crying, "How long, O Lord, how long, wilt

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, AUGUST 24, 1876.

PAGE 7 of this week got a Chinese twist in making up the forms. Read the fourth column first and so back.

'SUNDAY' OR 'SABBATH.'

The Presbyterian General Assembly has recommended the name "Sabbath" insteadof "Sunday;" whereupon Rev. W. W. Patton, D. D., in the Independent, argues for the use of "Sunday" with some research and ingenuity, on the score of "common sense." This perhaps is well enough for those who have leisure and taste for such matters. But his fling at the early Puritans as "Judaic," has neither religion or sense to recommend it. He closes thus:

"Indeed, the action of that body is not the voice of modern critical scholarship or of ancient faith and practice, but is simply an echo of that Sabbatarianism which is still so characteristic of Scotland, and which was prevalent in our own land, under the teachings of a Judaic exegetical school."

The resting of God when the six days of creation were ended, whether days or periods; the division of time into heptades by the nations before and since Sampson's "seven days of the feast," the Sabbath-tkeeping manna, which fell only six days; the execution of the Israelitish Sabbath-breaker by the whole multitude in the wilderness; but, above all, the wording of the precept, "Remember the Sabbath day," as a thing established and well known; these together, must, it would seem, satisfy all reflecting men, that the Old Testament Sabbath was not "Judaic," but universal and old as creation, and that Cain and Abel kept it "at the end of days," when they brought their offerings to God."

Nor, it would seem, was the decalogue "Judaic," since it is as wrong for other men to murder, steal and lie, as for Jews, and Christ gave the "Commandments" whatever authority he had. And since the word Sabbath means "Rest," if time was divided into weeks, and the Sabbath kept from and since the rest of God from creation; Sabbath would seem a more fitting name for the day than Sunday, since it describes the object of the day, which Sunday does not.

Labor, marriage and the Sabbath were Eden institutions, and as Christ taught morals as they were "from the beginning," the change of the day from Saturday to Sunday signifies little more than the change of marriage customs, or those of labor. All three belongs to the race. Forms and times vary, but the institution is one. The circumstance that the Sabbath and marriage entered into the Jewish civil code no more made them Jewish than their adoption by the British constitution made them English. But since the murder of Christ has made the name Jew a by-word, infidelity, and that false liberalism which is worse, delights to call the Sabbath Jewish, and its advocates "Judaic." But if there be one perpetual universal institution belonging to men, it is a weekly religious day of rest and the name of that day is Sabbath.

ANTI-SECRET POLITICS.

Joshua Leavitt placed the picture of a cedar tree at editorial head of the Emancipator as the badge of "Birney the Just," with the motto: "The just shall grow like the cedar in Lebanon." The device was to match Gen. Jackson's hickory tree, and create enthusiasm for the anti-slavery candidates. It produced little effect. Reforms do not go by the "hurrah boys," and the men who now stand facing the dark conspiracy of the lodge are reformers.

But there is "the sound of a going in the tops of the mulberry trees," and as God commanded David in like circumstances, we must "bestir ourselves."

The care of the campaign was committed to a committee on politics. Prof. C. A. Blanchard, chairman, resigned in favor of Ezra A. Cook because he could attend to it and Mr. Cook is burdened with business, but will do what he can.

Immense clerk-labor is required to get up electorial tickets in every State, composed of men who will stand strong for Walker and Kirkpatrick. This is being done as fast as it can be.

It is contemplated putting the portraits of our candidates in the Cynosure that the country may look the men in the face who are willing to confront the masked batteries of the lodges. The tract also should be circulated by tens of thousands, entitled: "The American Party;" containing our noble platform, and the letters of acceptance of our candidates. The expenses of our campaign will of course be trifling but they should be provided for. Mr. French of Jacksonville expended $700 on one Republican struggle when the country needed friends and means to meet and put back the myrmidons of slavery nestling under the name and prestige of Democracy. Let every man whose name is put on an electoral ticket, and every candidate, and every active political friend raise a little means and send on orders for campaign documents while the iron is heating, and then "strike while the iron is hot." Every vote for Walker and Kirkpatrick is a nail for the coffin of the lodge, and either of them would administer our Federal Government better than the nominees of the Masonic parties.

—Prof. A. C. Rideout of Hillsdale College, Mich., who has been identified with our reform from the first received the degree of L. L. D. from Muskingum College, New Concord, Ohio, at its late commencement.

DR. MILLIGAN.—We have received a pleasant call from Rev. A. M. Milligan, D. D., of the Reformed Presbyterian church, Pittsburgh, Pa.

He desires a meeting in Chicago in the interest of the National Reform movement for a religious amendment of our Constitution, declaring, what we declare in the 1st article of the American Platform, that:—

"Ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation; and that the God of the Bible is the author of civil government."

We need not say that the Cynosure, and its readers will earnestly support such a convention, if one is called here. Few meetings of any sort ever called out more popular interest than the meeting in behalf of this reform held in Monmouth, Ill., a few years since. And we think a convention properly called and vigorously prepared for here in Chicago, might extend its influence along the lines of thought and travel from this city to the Pacific. We are thoroughly convinced that the idea of divorcing religion from government advocated by some shallow Protestants means nothing in practice, but suppressing the Bible and strangling the cause of Christ. Herod and Pilate, priestism and paganism are a unit against Him. Put the Bible from our schools, the oath from our Courts, prayers from our Legislatures, and chaplains from our armies and asylums, and God from our entire government, and you not only dethrone Christ, but enthrone his rival and antagonist ANTI-CHRIST. Neutrality is impossible.

POSTPONED.—Some weeks ago we published a note stating that from letters received from Ohio the Annual Convention in that State would be postponed. Pres. George, the presiding officer of the State Association, had been at the East for several weeks and immediately on his return he began arrangements for the meeting. The brethren of the U. B. church were ready and notices were published. But like other plans set for this Centennial season, the difficulty of constraining our patriotic spirits is insurmountable, and it has been found that engagements have been made by so many leading workers in Ohio which would prevent their attendance that the notice has been very reluctantly withdrawn. In the course of two or three months, more or less, no doubt arrangements can be made for another of those great conventions for which the Ohio Association is becoming justly celebrated. Meanwhile cannot there be some representative gathering of friends in that State who wish to act politically and an electoral ticket be put in nomination?

THE MISSOURI MEETINGS.—Bro. Geo. W. Needles, of the Albany Freeman, is a capital worker, and as wise to plan as efficient in action. The list of meetings in north-western Missouri he has been getting up proves his ability. The first of these meetings at which the General Agent was present was at Princeton, Mercer county, whither he went after lecturing and preaching at Meadville, Linn county, on Saturday and Sabbath, the 12th and 13th inst. Of the Princeton meetings he writes on the 17th, briefly: "The meetings here have been of interest and profit. Everything passed off quietly. The meetings were well attended and business transacted with dispatch. A committee consisting of three in each township in the county was selected to nominate candidates for county officers and delegates appointed to the State meeting at Chillicothe. There are here some of the most earnest, fearless, determined friends of our cause that I have met anywhere. I start this morning with brothers Needles and Cooper for Bethany, where I will report again in due time." J. P. STODDARD.

The Princeton Telegraph of Aug. 17th, has the following notice of the meetings: "Rev. J. P. Stoddard, of Chicago, National Lecturer of the Christian Association, spoke to a large and attentive audience at the court house last night, and will address the Anti's of Mercer county this afternoon and to-night; and will fill all the appointments made for him in Missouri. The Reform Party propose to hold an advisory meeting to-day, at which they will appoint a committee who will make the nominations for a county ticket at some future time.

Mr. Stoddard is a fine speaker, and will lecture again this (Wednesday) evening at the court house. The ladies are respectfully invited to attend."

THE STATE MEETING at Jacksonville, Ill., to meet on September 5th and 6th will be a very important meeting for our cause in this State. The work has chiefly been carried on in the northern part, and with a few exceptions there has been little effort to arouse the counties south of the State capital. Strong meetings have been held among the United and Reformed Presbyterian congregations of Washington and Randolph counties, otherwise southern Illinois has been almost neglected. The late visit of our State Agent to White county was very hopeful for the introduction of the reform in that section. A strong convention in Jacksonville must be the inauguration of this movement. Besides, the political measures to be discussed in connection with the Convention will be of the greatest importance. Illinois was the only State to put a full State and electoral ticket in the field four years ago. She must not be behind in the present election. These and other questions are of enough importance to bring scores and hundreds of our friends. Let Bond and Washington and Randolph, flanked by Clark, Coles and Effingham, supported by a delegation from far Cairo, meet with Iroquois and Vermillion, Will and Cook, and a multitude from the score of counties from north of the Illinois river. Let us meet at this central point and stand by our worthy co-laborer, Samuel French, and the State Agent, and Mr. Ronayne. Straun's Hall is engaged. Entertainment will be provided. Come one, come all. Mr. Ronayne speaks on Monday evening preceding the Convention, and the citizens of Jacksonville will expect you. If you can't come yourself club together and send one or two delegates. Two questions should be thought over as you are on the way: (1) What shall be done to carry the reform into every county in the State; (2) Who shall be nominated for Governor?

ARE YOU GOING TO THE CENTENNIAL?—If you are going to the Centennial by way of Chicago, and can do so, please call at the Cynosure office and take with you a package of tracts for Bro. Hodge. Also take some free tracts to scatter on the way there and back.

BISHOP SIMPSON.—A member of the East Genesee M. E. Conference, New York, who has long been active in the reform and should know whereof he speaks, corrects a statement made by one of our correspondents that Bishop Simpson is a Freemason. It was with some misgivings as to the correctness of the statement that it was admitted; and it surely is a matter of rejoicing to be able to say that the leading bishop of the M. E. church has no smell of the lodge upon him.

—A correspondent writes that the friends of the "Christian Association" of College Springs, Iowa, are not allowed to sleep, during the hot weather even; that our aged friend, the Rev. Geo. Jaquis, is a watchman who gives no uncertain sound. Sabbath, Aug. 13th, he spoke in the U. P. church on this subject, "The first Masonic Conspiracy."

—The Baptist Weekly of New York, the successor of Dr. Brown's American Baptist has the following notice of Elder Bernard's death, which to say the least lacks the denominational enthusiasm usual over men so prominent as he has been in Gospel labo.:

"The Rev. David Bernard, once a widely known preacher among us, and who took a very active part in the Anti-masonic movement, having been once a prominent Mason, died in Troy, N. Y., on July 11th. He was born in Utica, December 24th, 1798 and was ordained in Stillwater, N. Y., in 1824. From this time he continued to preach as long as his health would permit. Thirty years of his life were spent in prominent pastorates. fifteen years in agency work, mostly for the Bible Society, and a number of years as a successful evangelist."

—Enquiries have been lately made about the Temple of Honor. The following report from its late annual meeting will give some indication of its relationship in the Masonic family:

"The Supreme Council Templars of Honor and Temperance, at the annual session, recently held in Philadelphia, elected the following officers to serve for the term of two years:

M. W. Templar, J. N. Stearns, New York city.

M. W. V. Templar, Gardner Hepburn, St. Louis, Mo.

M. W. Recorder, R. C. Bull, New York city.

M. W. Treasurer, Charles Kelly, Philadelphia.

M. W. Chaplain, Rev. N. A. Reed, Muscatine, Ia.

M. W. Usher, J. A. Watrous, Fond du Lac, Wis.

M. W. Guardian, W. C. Peckham, Providence, R. I.

The next session will be held in the city of St. Johns, New Brunswick, the second Tuesday in August, 1877."

OHIO STATE MEETING.

Because of unforeseen difficulties, the anti-secret convention of the State of Ohio, appointed to meet in Cambridge, Guernsey Co., has been postponed until further notice be given by the Executive Committee.

THE ILLINOIS STATE CONVENTION

will be held September 5th and 6th in Strann's hall, Jacksonville, the county seat of Morgan Co., and a short distance west of the capital of the State. Arrangements are being made for a strong meeting. State agent Hinman is speaking and laboring to secure large delegations; and the corresponding secretary, Bro. Stoddard, will give his best efforts on returning from Missouri. Past-master Ronayne, and other good speakers will be present. Let there be a grand rally for the Reform.

MISSOURI STATE ASSOCIATION.

The State Christian Association opposed to secret societies will hold their annual meeting in Well's Hall in Chillicothe, commencing on the evening of the 30th of August at 7½ o'clock, and continue over the 31st. The election of officers for the coming year, and the appointment of a State lecturer will be in order. Rev. J. P. Stoddard of Chicago, Ill., is expected to be present to address the Association. By order of the Executive Committee.

G. W. NEEDLES.
Secretary.

THE NIAGARA COUNTY ASSOCIATION, opposed to secret societies will hold its next semi-annual meeting in the Baptist church in the village of Wilson on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, the 5th and 6th of September, 1876. Meeting will commence on Tuesday evening at 7½ o'clock, followed by a convention Wednesday morning at 9 a. m. The Rev. J. L. Barlow will address the meeting. All friends and enemies of the cause are cordially invited to attend. By order of Executive Committee.

P. D. MILLER,

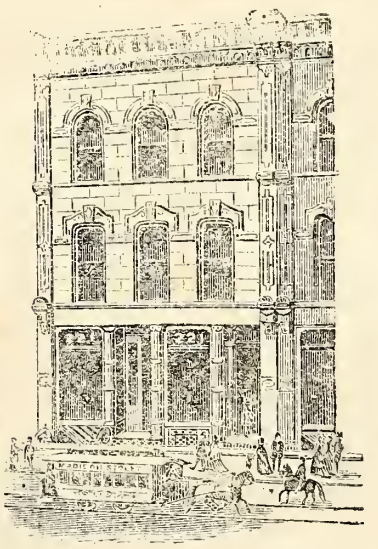
News of the Week

—Hon. M. C. Kerr, Speaker of the House of Representatives died at Rockbridge Alum Springs, on Saturday evening last, after a lingering illness.



—Rev. E. P. Smith, late Indian Commissioner, died in July at Accra, Africa, whither he had gone under a charge from the Am. Missionary Association.

—Advices from the hostile Indian country are unusually important and interesting. A junction was effected on the 11th between the columns of Gens. Crook and Terry, and their combined forces proceeded at once on the trail that Crook was following. The precaution was at once taken to organize a patrol of the Yellowstone River to ascertain whether the hostiles had succeeded in crossing that stream, and if not, to hold them in check until Crook and Terry could come down upon them in force and bring on a general engagement.

—The Commissioner of Indian Affairs has authorized Gen. Sheridan to employ 1,000 Pawnee Indians ostensibly as scouts in the pending war with Sitting Bull.

—Prince Milan. of Servia, has received from several, if not from all the powers, congratulations upon the birth of an heir, all of which contain expressions which leave no doubt in the mind of the Prince that the powers are desirons of seeing an end to the war which is dangerous to the general peace of Europe. The result is that Servia is ready to treat for peace, but will not consent to the deposition of Prince Milan, or the sacrifice of any territory, nor will she consent to Turkish administration.

—A dispatch from Scutari says the report of a Turkish defeat at Brisanski on the 8th inst., is confirmed. The Turkish losses are estimated at 1,100. Gen. Tchernayeff is reported to have issued a general order that all Circassians and Bashi-Bazouks shall be shot without parley when captured. The same correspondent adds: "Russian sympathy in the Servian cause is becoming most ostentations. Russian officers are in the Capitol in uniform, and many Russian Sisters of Charity are seen in the streets and hospitals. The Servian Government has just received a loan of 3,000,000 roubles in Russia, and the war is gradually becoming an affair not of the Russian Government but of the Russian people. I feel no doubt that there is great danger of Russia drafting or being driven into the war."

TRUST IN GOD.

Leave God to order all thy way,
And hope in him whate'er betide;
Thou'lt find him in the evil days
An all-sufficient strength and guide.
Who trusts in God's unchanging love,
Builds on a rock that naught can move.

What can these anxious cares avail,
These never-ceasing moans and sighs?
What can it help us to bewail
Each painful moment as it flies?
Our cross and trial do but press
The heavier for our bitterness.

Only your restless heart keep still,
And wait in cheerful hope, content
To take whate'er his gracious will,
His all-discerning love has sent;
No doubt our inmost wants are known
To him who chose us for his own.

He knows when joyful hours are best,
He sends them as he sees it meet;
When thou hast borne its fiery test,
And now as freed from all deceit,
He comes to thee, all unaware,
And makes thee own his loving care.

Nor in the heat of pain and strife,
Think God hath cast thee off unheard;
Nor that the man whose prosperous life
Thou enviest, is of him preferred,
Time passes, and much change doth bring,
And sets a bound to everything.

Sing, pray, and swerve not from his ways,
But do thine own part faithfully;
Trust his rich promises of grace,
So shall it be fulfilled in thee;
God never yet forsook at need
The soul that trusted him indeed.

CHRISTIAN ATTIRE.

"Be not conformed to the world," is as plain a precept as, "Thou shalt not kill." The world has its forms, its modes, its fashions. If conformed to the world, we are shaped, modeled, and fashioned into the likeness of the world. This is sin: for "the whole world lieth in the wicked one." This forbidden conformity is not a mere inward sympathy and fellowship with, but an outward and visible imitation of, and participation in, the customs, fashions, follies, and fooleries of this age, leading to that "friendship of the world," which "is enmity with God."

The leaders of the world's fashions in Paris, that sink of luxury and profligacy, in the interest of the manufacturers and sellers of purple and fine linen, without reference to the glory of God or the good of men, proceed to invent and concoct certain styles of dress which must combine the following several characteristics: First, they must differ from the last year's fashions, so that people will be obliged to buy new clothes, whether the old ones are worn out or not, and whether or not they are able to pay for the new. Second, they must require the largest possible amount of cloth, stitching, trimming, and adorning. Third, the more frail and delicate the fabric the better, as that will prevent their wearing too long, and so help the business of Vanity Fair. Fourth, there must be, if possible, some devilish ingenuity of torture, or exposure, or deformity involved in the fashion, so that the feet may be pinched out of shape, as in China; waists laced out of proportion, as in America; lungs compressed, vital organs displaced, spines weakened, extremities chilled, shoulders bared, hair destroyed, muscles enfeebled, exercise impeded, vitality impaired, usefulness prevented, idleness fostered, evil passions excited, disease induced; and pride, misery, discontent death, and damnation brought upon thousands of souls.

When all these Satanic conditions are met in a certain style or fashion, then it becomes elegant, lovely, and bewitching, and is sure to have a great run. And then "everybody that is anybody" must straightway lay aside all their comfortable and useful clothing, and load themselves with all their ambitionable tawdriness, even though to do it God must be robbed of his offerings and the poor of their alms,—even if time, health, peace, comfort, strength, beauty, and virtue are sacrificed to feed the appetite for show and vanity, and enable people to be conformed to a world which is at enmity with God, which is guilty of the rejection and of the blood of his Son, and which is doomed to wrath, and reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men. And any person who does not fall into this infernal trap is ostracised, sneered at, and cast out as evil by the gay slaves that wear their gilded fetters, keeping "lock-step" with the fashionable world, and traveling steadily down the broad road that leadeth to destruction.

"Be not conformed to the world." There is no tyranny like that of fashion. It touches wealth, health, time, and opportunity; it robs at every point in life; it ruins, it destroys. God calls his children to separation from these things. He bids them walk in a higher and holier path; to be followers of him as dear children, and walk in love, as Christ hath loved them.

"Be not conformed to this world." God's poor are destitute of needful raiment, and Christian women are wasting that which might cover and comfort them—heaping it in unsightly piles upon their forms, fashioning it into all manner of grotesque shapes at the beck of the dire enchantress who rules her fashionable minions with a most despotic sway.

"Be not conformed to the world!" "Choose ye this day whom ye shall serve." Put away pride and vain glory. Earn your clothes, wear them out, and let the surplus that fashion's butterflies would waste, go to clothe the poor and bless the needy. Let the beauty of a divine simplicity shine in all your life. Let your foot be on the neck of pride, and fashion, and folly, and display. Let your adorning not be that of outward adorning of plaiting the hair and wearing of gold, and of putting on of apparel. Let a higher beauty beam in your countenance,—the beauty of holiness, "the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is, in the sight of God, of great price." 1 Pet. iii. 3, 4; 1 Tim. ii. 9, 10. Com. People.

What if a man save my life with a draught that was prepared to poison me? The providence of the issue does not at all discharge the obliquity of the intent. And the same reason holds good even in religion itself. It is not the incense, nor the offering that is acceptable to God, but the purity and devotion of the worshiper.—Seneca.

LET IT DRY.

Mr. Spurgeon once went to preach in a church a little outside of London. The day was wet and muddy, and the pants of Mr. Spurgeon were plentifully covered with dirt. A good deacon in the vestry said, "Brother Spurgeon, let me get a brush and take off some of that mud, you can't go into the pulpit in that state." "Don't be foolish, Deacon!" said Mr. Spurgeon, in his usual good-humored way, "don't you see the mud is wet, and if you try to brush it off now, you will rub the stain into the cloth? Let it dry, and then it will come off easy enough, and leave no mark." There is an admirable hint here for every one. When evil spoken against, as we may be for the sake of the truth, and men throw mud at us, don't be in a hurry about brushing it off. Too great eagerness in this respect is apt to rub the stain into the cloth. Let it dry, and then, by and by, if need be, it can be removed by a little effort.

If there is a little trouble in the church, don't foster it by haste and hurry in doing something. Let it alone, let it dry, and it will be more easily settled than you think now. Time has a wonderful power in such matters, and it is surprising how many things in this world would be far better arranged and how many difficulties easily got over by judiciously letting them dry.—Baptist Standard.

SLEEP-WALKING.

A case is related of an English clergyman who used to get up in the night, light his candle, write sermons, correct interlineations, and retire to bed again; being all the time asleep.

The Archbishop of Bordeaux mentions a similar case of a student, who got up to compose a sermon while asleep, who wrote it correctly, and read it over from one end to the other, or at least appeared to read it, made corrections in it, scratched out lines, and substituted others, put in its place a word which had been omitted, composed music, wrote it accurately down, and performed other things equally surprising.

Dr. Gall notices a miller who was in the habit of getting up every night and attending to his usual avocations at the mill, then returning to bed; on awakening in the morning, he recollected nothing of what passed during the night.

Martinet speaks of a saddler who was accustomed to rise in the night and work at his trade; and Dr. Pritchard of a farmer who got out of bed, dressed himself, saddled his horse, and rode to market, being all the while asleep.

Dr. Blacklock, on one occasion, rose from his bed, to which he had retired at an early hour, came into the room where his family were assembled, conversed with them, and afterward entertained them with a pleasant song, without any of them suspecting he was asleep, and without his retaining, after he awoke, the least recollection of what he had done. It is a singular but well authenticated fact, that in the disastrous retreat of Sir John Moore, many of the soldiers fell asleep, yet continued to march along with their comrades.—Ex.

THESSALONICA.

Salonica, the city where a Musselman mob recently murdered the German and French consols, is the Thessalonica of ancient history and of the New Testament. It is the same place where Paul preached and planted a Christian church. In 315 before Christ the ancient name Therma was changed by Cassander to Thessalonica, in honor of his wife, the daughter of Philip. Its subsequent history has been notable. Xerxes rested his army here. Under the Roman empire it was the capital of the Illyrian provinces. Cicero took refuge here during his exile. It was captured by the Saracens in 904, when the population amounted to 220,000. The Normans from Sicily took it in 1185. It was held during the first half of the thirteenth century by Boniface, of Montferrat, and afterward by the Venetians. It fell into the hands of the Turks in 1430. It is at the present day the second city in European Turkey, and has a large population and an extensive commerce. The recent outrage perpetrated by Mohammedan fanaticism may help, in connection with Herzegovinian war, to hasten the dismemberment of European Turkey, and to drive the Turks out of Europe altogether.—N. W. Chr. Adv.

HINTS TO TATTLERS.

The heights and recesses of Mt. Taurus are said to be much infested with eagles, who are never better pleased than when they can pick the bones of a crane. Cranes are prone to cackle and make a noise (Isa. 38: 14), and particularly so while they are flying. The sound of their voices arouses the eagles, who spring up at a signal, and often make the talkative travelers pay dearly for their impudent chattering. The older and more experienced cranes, sensible of their besetting foible and the peril to which it exposes them, take care before venturing on the wing to arm themselves each with a stone large enough to fill the cavity of their mouths, and consequently to impose unvoidable silence on their tongues, and thus they escape the danger.

Reader, hast thou an unruly tongue? Learn a lesson from the elder cranes, and to bridle thy tongue by watchfulness and prayer, that thou mayest say with the Psalmist, "I said, I will take heed to my way, that I sin not with my tongue."—Ex.

The Jews were accustomed, says an authority, to bestow fanciful titles upon learned Rabbis. They called one, for instance, the Remover of Mountains, because he was famous, like Bishop Sanderson, for settling questions in casuistry. A mountain with a Jew was a synonyme, and by no means a bad one, for a big or insurmountable doubt. We may gain a very important sense of Christ's words about faith which can remove mountains from this fact.

Shutting Doors.

"Don't look so cross, Edward, when I call you back to shut the door; grandpa's old bones feel the cold wind; and besides you have got to spend your life in shutting doors and you might as well begin now."

"Do forgive me, grandpa, I ought to be ashamed to be so cross to you. But what do you mean? I ain't going to be a sexton. I am going to be a lawyer."

"Well, admitting all that, I imagine Squire Edward C—— will have a good many doors to shut, if ever he makes much of a man."

"What kind of doors? Do tell me, grandpa."

"Sit down a minute, and I'll give you a list. In the first place, the door of your ears must be closed against the bad language and evil counsel of the boys and young men you will be at school or college with, or you will be undone. Let them once get possession of that door, and I would not give much for Edward C's future prospects.

"The door of your eyes, too, must be shut against bad books, idle novels, and low, wicked newspapers, or your studies will be neglected, and you will grow up a useless, ignorant mon. You will have to close them sometimes against the fine things exposed in the store windows, or you will never learn to lay up money, or have any left to give away.

"The door of your lips will need especial care, for they guard an unruly member, which makes great use of the bad company let in at the doors of the eyes and ears. That door is very apt to blow open; and if not constantly watched, will let out angry, trifling, or vulgar words. It will back-bite something worse than a March wind if it is left open too long. I would advise you to keep it shut much of the time till you have laid up a store of knowledge, or at least till you have something valuable to say.

"The inner door of your heart must be well shut against temptation; for conscience, the door-keeper, grows very indifferent if you disregard his call; and sometimes drops asleep at his post, and when you may think you are doing very well, you are fast going to ruin. If you carefully guard the outside doors of the eyes and ears, and lips, you will keep out many cold blasts of sin, which get in before you think.

"This shutting doors, you see, Eddy, will be a serious business; one on which your well-doing in this life and the next depends."—American Messenger.

Books of The Old Testament

The great Jehovah speaks to us,
In Genesis and Exodus;
Leviticus and Numbers see,
Followed by Deuteronomy;
Joshua and Judges sway the land,
Ruth gleans a sheaf with trembling hand;
Samuel and numerous Kings appear,
Whose Chronicles we wondering hear;
Ezra, and Nehemiah, know,
Esther, the ambitious mourner show;
Job, speaks in sighs, David, in Psalms,
The Proverbs teach to scatter alms;
Ecclesiastes then comes on
And the sweet Song of Solomon;
Isaiah, Jeremiah, then
With Lamentations takes his pen,
Ezekiel, Daniel, Hosea's lyres,
Swell Joel Amos, Obediah's—
Next Jonah, Micah, Nahum, come,
And lofty Habakkuk, finds room,
While Zephaniah, Haggai, calls,
Wrapt, Zechariah, builds his walls,
And Malachi, with garments rent,
Conclude the Ancient Testament.

The Gift of Song.

A touching story is told of a little girl sent by her parents from Spain, during a time of religious persecution there, to take refuge with some friends in England. The vessel was lost on a rock-bound coast during a severe storm; but the little girl was saved through the efforts of some heroic men. She was too young to tell her story, but, by a series of providential events, was brought at last to the house of a friend of her parents, just as, released from imprisonment, they arrived in England to seek their long-lost darling. A familiar tune, that the mother had taught to her little girl in former days, became the clew that led to their joyful meeting.

A remarkable incident is that of a Scottish youth, who learned with a pious mother to sing the old psalms that were as household words to them in the kirk and by the fireside. When he grew up he wandered away from his native country, was taken captive by the Turks, and made a slave in one of the Barbary States. But he never forgot the songs of Zion, although he sung them in a strange land and to heathen ears. One night he was solacing himself in this manner, when the attention of some sailors on board of an English man-of-war was directed to the familiar tune of "Old Hundred," as it came floating over the the moonlit waves. At once they surmised the truth, that one of their countrymen was languishing away his life as a captive. Quickly arming themselves, they manned a boat, and lost no time in effecting his release. What a joy to him after eighteen long years passed in slavery!—Child's World.

A cow in the town of Eden, the mother of a handsome calf, was crossing the railroad a few days since. She had cleared the last rail when the passenger train appeared. The animal hastened towards the fence. Looking back, she saw her offspring standing on the track. With a frightened look she made a piteous but useless appeal to the foolish little creature to follow her. On came the train, and still stood the calf, by this time facing the train. The engineer tried to scare the little fool away by making the whistle scream, but he wouldn't scare. When the train was within 10 rods of the calf the cow made a rush for her silly child, caught him on her horns, and bore him away in safety.

Pros and Pens

Walking Horses.—We are glad that many of our Western fairs are offering handsome premiums for the fastest walking horses. There is no disguising the fact that a good walk is the most useful gait that a general-purpose horse can possess; and if one-half the attention were paid to cultivating this gait, and breeding with a view to its transmission, that is now given to that of training and breeding trotters, horses that could walk five miles an hour would be soon as abundant as 2:30 trotters now are. The trouble now is, that the whole country is possessed of a mania for fast trotters, and as soon as the colt is broken to halter, no matter whether he be thoroughbred, Conestoga, Norman, Clydesdale, Hambletonian or Canadian, he is put to trotting. The whole country is engaged in training trotters, from the plowboy in the field to the professional on the track, to the utter neglect of that more useful, everyday gait, the walk. Even the importers of draft stallions from Europe have caught the infection, and, instead of bringing the best walkers, we only hear of their great trotting action.

It is time to put an end to this nonsense; the gait for a draft horse is pre-eminently a walk, while nothing adds more to the ability of the roadster, to make a long journey in good time, than a walking gait that will carry him along at the rate of five miles an hour. The first aim, when a colt is broken to harness, should be to educate him to a good square fast walk, and after that has been done, if you can get him to trot fast, so much the better.

One of the most successful breeders of trotting horses in America has often remarked to us, that he would not keep a horse on his place that was not a fast walker, and that he invariably found that the fastest walkers made the fastest trotters. It is a positive luxury to ride or drive a horse that can walk off with you at the rate of five miles an hour. It is such a relief to feel, when you ease up your horse from his swinging trot, or lope, that you have not come to a standstill, but that you are yet making respectable progress. For our own private use on the road the walk is the gait which we prize above all others, and anything which promises to increase the number of fast walkers, shall receive our hearty encouragement.—Wilkes Spirit.

Prompt Payment of the Wages of Labor.—A great share of labor is done by men of families, who board themselves, and generally work by the day. This prompt pay leads to other results. It prevents speculation by a class of men who would do business on the generous business principle, and, in case that they made a lucky strike, would pay their hands, but, on the contrary, let them go unpaid.

No doubt that the adoption of the rule to pay farm-hands at the end of each month would lessen the demand for this kind of labor; and that the demand would be promptly supplied, and that too, by a better quality than is at present to be had.

There are now many farms who have adopted the plan of short payments, and these farmers always have the choice of hands; but we should go one step further, and make it a rule to pay all day-hands at the end of the week, and month-hands on the last day of the month. By so doing, no farmer would engage in cropping beyond his means, and things would be conducted on a more sound foundation, and we would have less fluctuations in business. The farmer who pays his hands at the time of selling his crop is very likely to run a bill for his implements, his dry goods and groceries, and at the blacksmith's; in short, he goes on tick, depending on his crops to meet his liabilities. Now, when all those men have to take this risk, they must charge for it, and those who pay in the end must pay for the bad debts.

Give them Cold Water.—It is very doubtful if there is a single possible disease in which the patient should not have cold water ad libitum. Oh, how babies often sniffer for cold water! A nursing baby is given, no matter how thirsty, nothing but milk. The little lips are dry and cracked, and the little tongue so parched it can scarcely nurse, and yet it has nothing but milk to assuage its craving thirst. Try it yourself, mother, when you have a fever, and we are sure that ever after, when your darling is dying with thirst, the teaspoon and tumbler will be in constant use.

Cleaning Wood-Work.—There is nothing better for cleaning painted wood-work than common India rubber. Rub the wood as if you were erasing pencil marks, and then pass a dry brush over it. No water is necessary.

Horse radish grated and mixed with pickle will prevent mould forming on the top of the jar. Leaves of horse radish laid over the top will answer the purpose. It is said that this pungent root, if grated and mixed with cider and eaten with the food, will prevent and cure paralysis.

It is said that honey can be kept by running it through a fine sieve to separate it from particles of wax, then boil it gently in an earthen vessel, skim off the foam which gathers on top, and cool it in jars. After sealing these up tightly, set them away in a cool cellar.

In hot weather it is almost impossible to prevent the sinks becoming foul, unless some chemical preparation is used. One pound of copperas dissolved in four gallons of water, poured over a sink three or four times, will completely destroy the offensive odor. As a disinfecting agent, to scatter around premises affected with any unpleasant odor, nothing is better than a mixture of four parts dry ground plaster of Paris to one part of fine charcoal, by weight. All sorts of glass vessels and other utensils may be effectually purified from offensive smells by rinsing them with charcoal powder, after the grosser impurities have been scoured off with sand and soap.

Croup can be cured in one minute, and the remedy is simply alum and sugar. The way to accomplish the deed is to take a knife or grater and shave it off in small particles, about a teaspoonful of alum; then mix it with about twice its quantity of sugar to make it palateable, and administer it as quickly as possible. Almost instantaneous relief will follow.

Freckles can be removed from the face without injury to the skin by using a lotion made of: Bichloride of mercury, six grains; pure hydrochloric acid (specific gravity), one fluid dram; water (distilled), one-fourth of a pint; mix, and add of rectified spirits and rose water, each two fluid ounces, and glycerine one ounce.

Pomeroy's Testimony.

the truthfulness of my revelations, and how a man can speak the truth and be a liar at the same time, I shall leave to Masonic science to determine. Doubtless it must be on the principle of the "oblong square."

Neither Masonic slander, nor Masonic threats, nor even the rotten eggs laid by Masonic hens can ever deter me from going on with the work I have undertaken; that is, to publicly work the Masonic degrees everywhere I can; and in doing this I know that I have the sympathy of many influential Masons in this city and even those who are not members of Keystone Lodge. Masonry has got to be discussed, and if its principles are good and its ceremonials, oaths and death-penalties based upon the constitution and laws of our country, then it will, it must stand; but on the contrary, if its ritual be a mere sham, its religion pagan, its ceremonies degrading and blasphemous, and its entire governmental economy anti-republican, in fact an absolute despotism, then the moral, Christian sense of the community and the inherent love of liberty of the American people will cause it to disappear into the dark recesses from which it came, there to hide for shame its miserable lying legend. May that time soon come, and may many more be led as I was to see the iniquity of Masonry in all its hideous deformity, and so coming boldly out from the vile system publicly work its blasphemons degrees and thus crush the foul viper to the earth.

Edmond Ronayne.

OBITUARY.

James P. Johnson was born in Walton, Delaware Co., N. Y., March 28th, 1807, and died July 22d, 1876, at College Springs, Iowa.

For half a century he had professed to be a Christian, and at his death no one could doubt but that he loved the things of Christ and hated evil. In him the reforms of his day have found a sympathizer and friend.

He was one of three, in this precinct, to cast a vote for the first Liberty candidate, Jas. G. Birney.

When the murderer, Keith, escaped hanging through the influence of his lodge (Belvidere Lodge, No. 60, F. A. M.'s), headed by the Hon. S. A. Hurlbut, he was living in Belvidere, Ill., and this fact may, in part, account for his active opposition to the lodge. Through his influence the Cynosure has been sent to England and Australia, as well as to his own home. "He has finished his course, he has kept the faith." May his sons rise up and fill his place.

Death of Mrs. Barland.—We receive the Eau Claire (Wis.) Free Press, giving an extensive obituary of Mrs. Margaret Wilson Barland, who died in Eau Claire, July 24th, ult. She was the wife of Rev. Thomas Barland, an earnest and good man, and friend of our reform, and is described as a lady of superior natural endowments and Christian graces. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints."

Most of our misfortunes are more supportable than the comments of our friends upon them.

Religious Intelligence

—Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D., Western Secretary of the Am. Home Miss. Society has not yet recovered from the accident received on a sleeping car sufficiently to return home to his duties.

—Mr. Wheeler, the nominee of the Republican party for Vice-president is said to be an active Christian and deacon in the Congregational church at Malone, N. Y.

—The tabernacle for the Moody meetings in this city is to be built on the south east corner of Monroe and Franklin streets; it will be 145 by 190, will seat 6,000 persons and is to be finished Oct 1.

—Bishop Andrews of the Methodist Episcopal church of the United States, organized an annual conference at Upsala, Sweden, August 1st, and expected to organize another at Christiania, Norway, August 16th.

—Mr. Spurgeon has set apart certain Sabbath evenings when his church is for the exclusive use of strangers. His own people are requested to stay away that others may have room. On such occasions, as at the usual evening services, the house is full.

—The London Freeman says the work for Africa, to which the death of Livingston gave the grand impulse, goes bravely on. The Scotch Established Church, which is following in the wake of the Free Church, has sent out two little vessels, one for mission service on Lake Nyassa, the other for the purpose of establishing trading stations. Mr. Cotterill, a son of the Bishop of Edinburgh, and lately an assistant master at Harrow, has set sail in company with a little band of Free Kirk missionaries. This young man goes for the purpose of developing commerce, but his motive is distinctly religious.

—The meeting of the American Board will be held this year in Hartford, Conn., beginning Oct. 3d. Dr. Wm. M. Taylor of New York is to preach the anniversary sermon.

—Mr. Moody has been preaching daily in various towns in New Hampshire, is the latest news from the evangelist.

—The progress of Christianity in the United States during the last century is almost incredible. Statistics go to show that in 1776 there were 1,943 Protestant churches and 1,443 ministers; now there are 91,760 churches and 58,060 ministers. Then our population was less than four millions, now it is nearly forty millions. Thus while the population has been multiplied by ten, churches have been multiplied by forty-seven. Then there was one church for every two thousand people, now one for every half thousand.

We offer twenty per cent. cash commission, or twenty-five per cent. in our publications for new subscriptions, and half the above rates for renewals, for we know that some cannot afford to work without compensation.

The engraving "Signing the Declaration," together with a copy of the "Declaration of Independence," gives satisfactin to those who have ordered it. We tried to do our readers a favor by selling them for fifty cents. They seem to appreciate it. See advertisement.

Postage on the Cynosure.

The postage on the Cynosure must be paid at Chicago. It is twenty cents a year.

The cost of postage now depends entirely on the size and weight, and therefore some smaller papers charge but fifteen cents; and others about the size of the Cynosure charge twenty-five cents a year for postage.

If the subscription price of the Cynosure was $2.50 or $3.00 a year, the price of many religious papers containing no more reading matter, we might afford to pay the postage ourselves, but at $2.00 a year we cannot do this with our present Subscription list.

Therefore let all send the postage, 20 cents a year, 10 cents for half a year with their renewals.

The commission on one new subscription for a year will pay the postage on your own and the new subscriber's paper. We would rather have the postage paid by commissions than in any other way.

When postage is not paid we shall have to shorten the time of subscription sufficiently to pay it.

XVI. OBLIGATION, MASTERS IN ISRAEL.

1st. Secrecy. 2nd. Obedience to the orders and decrees of the Grand Council of Princes, of Jerusalem.

PENALTY:

Body severed in two, and bowels taken out, when the candidate says, Amen.

XVII. OBLIGATION, ELECTED KNIGHTS OF NINE.

I,———, do solemnly swear, in the presence of Almighty God, that I will revenge the assassination of our worthy Master, Hiram Abiff, not only on the murderers, but also on all who may betray the secrets of this degree; and

Furthermore, that I will keep and protect this order with all my might, and the brethren in general, with all my power; and

Furthermore, that I will obey the decrees of the Grand Council of Princes of Jerusalem; and, if I violate this, my obligation, I consent to be struck with the dreadful poniard of vengeance, now presented to me, and to have my head cut off, and stuck on the highest pole or pinnacle, in the eastern part of the world, as a monument of my villainy! Amen! Amen! Amen! Amen!

XVIII. OBLIGATION, ELECTED GRAND MASTER, OR ILLUSTRIOUS ELECTED OF FIFTEEN.

The penalty is, to have the body opened perpendicularly and horizontally, and exposed to the air for eight hours, that the flies may prey on the entrails, also, to have the head cut off and placed on the highest pinnacle in the world, and to be ready to inflict the same penalty on all who disclose the secrets of this degree!!!

XIX. OBLIGATION, DEGREE OF THE NINTH ARCH.

I———, do promise and vow, in the most solemn manner, and in the presence of the most holy and puissant and most terrible, just and merciful God, that I will double my assiduity, zeal and love for my fellow brethren who have taken this degree of K. A.

I promise further, never to assist at the initiation of any brother into this degree, nor to give my consent that he be initiated, unless he shall regularly have received all the foregoing degrees in a just and regular lodge, and unless he shows a charitable disposition for Masonry, and also obtains a permission from under the hands and seals of the officers of a just and regular lodge, according to ancient laws.

I furthermore promise never to give to any number less than three, and those to be well examined, this degree, unless when authorized for that purpose by a particular patent, and with a view of constituting a lodge of K. A. Masons—which I will never consent to be holden within twenty-five leagues of one already regularly constituted.

I further promise carefully to observe and pay due obedience to all the laws, rules and regulations, established and appointed by this K. A. Chapter, as also to keep inviolable the secrets communicated in it.

I furthermore promise that I will not debauch any female related to a brother, knowing them to be such. All this I promise under the

of my former obligations, and in case of failure, that my body may be exposed to the beasts of the forest as a prey, so God maintain me in my present obligation.

To endeavor on all occasions to observe strictly, duties to God and community. The

PENALTY

is, "To have the body cut open, and the bowels torn out and given to the vultures for food!!"

XXI. OBLIGATION, KNIGHTS OF THE EAST AND WEST.

I———, do promise and solemnly swear and declare, in the awful presence of the only One Most Holy Puissant Almighty and Most Merciful Grand Architect of heaven and earth, who created the universe and myself through his infinite goodness, and conducts it with wisdom and justice—and in the presence of the Most Excellent and Upright Princes and Knights of the East and West, here present in convocation and Grand Council, on my sacred word of honor and under every tie, both moral and religious, that I never will reveal to any person whomsoever below me, or to whom the same may not belong, by being legally and lawfully initiated, the secrets of this degree which are now about to be communicated to me, under the of not only being dishonored but to consider my life as the immediate forfeiture, and that to be taken from me with all the tortures and pains to be inflicted in manner as I have consented to in my preceding degrees.

I further promise and solemnly swear, that I never will fight or combat with my brother Knights, but will, at all times, when he has justice on his side, be ready to draw my sword in his defense, or against such of his enemies who seek the destruction of his person, his honor, peace or prosperity; that I never will revile a brother, or suffer others to reflect on his character in his absence, without informing him thereof, or noticing it myself, at my option: that I will remember on all occasions, to observe my former obligations, and be just, upright, and benevolent to all my fellow creatures, as far as is in my power.

I further solemnly promise and swear, that I will pay due obedience and submission to all the degrees beyond this, but particularly to the Princes of the Royal Secret, and the Supreme Council of Grand Inspectors General of the 33d, and regulate myself by their determinations, and that I will do all in my power to support them in all justifiable measures for the good of the craft, and advantage of Masonry, agreeably to the Grand Constitutions. All this I solemnly swear and sincerely promise, upon my sacred word of honor, under the of the severe wrath of the Almighty Creator of heaven and earth, and may He have mercy on my soul, on the great and awful day of judgment, agreeably to my conformity thereto. Amen. Amen. Amen.

XXII. OBLIGATION, KNIGHT OF THE EAGLE, AND SOVEREIGN PRINCE OF ROSE CROIX DE HERODEN.

I———, do most solemnly and sincerely promise and swear, under the penalty of all my former obligations, which I have taken in the preceding degrees, never to reveal either directly or indirectly, the secrets or mysteries of Knight of the Eagle, Sovereign Prince of Rose Croix, to any brother of an inferior degree, nor to any in the world besides, who is not justly and lawfully entitled to the same, under the

of being forever deprived of the true word, to be perpetually in darkness, my blood continually running from my body, to suffer without intermission, the most cruel remorse of soul; that the bitterest gall mixed with vinegar be my constant drink; the sharpest thorns for my pillow; and that the death of the cross may complete my punishment, should I ever infringe or violate in any manner or form, the laws and rules which have been, are now, or may be hereafter made known or prescribed to me;

And I do furthermore swear, promise and engage on my sacred word of honor, to observe and obey all the decrees which may be transmitted to me by the Grand Inspectors General, in Supreme Council of the 33d degree, that I never will reveal the place where I have been received, nor by whom I was received, nor the ceremony used at my reception, to any person on earth, but to a lawful Prince of Rose Croix; that I never will initiate any person into this degree, but by a lawful patent obtained for that purpose, either from this Chapter, or from a superior Council: so help me God, and keep me steadfast in this my solemn obligation. Amen. He kisses the Bible.

XXIII. OBLIGATION, VENERABLE GRAND MASTER OF ALL SYMBOLIC LODGES, SOVEREIGN PRINCES OF MASONRY, MASTER ADVITIAM, OR GRAND PONTIFF.

I———, do most solemnly and sincerely swear and promise under the penalties of all my former obligations, to protect the craft and my brethren with all my might, and not to acknowledge any one for a true Mason, who was not made in a regularly constituted and lawful lodge.

I furthermore do swear that I will strictly observe and obey all the statutes and regulations of the lodge, and that I will never disclose or discover the secret of this degree, either directly or indirectly, except by virtue of a full power in writing, given me for that purpose by the Grand Inspector or his deputy, and then to such only as have been Masters of a regular lodge. All this I swear under the of being forever despised and dishonored by the craft in general. He then kisses the Bible.

XXIV. OBLIGATION, KNIGHTS ADEPTS OF THE EAGLE OR SUN.

I———, promise in the face of God, and between the hands of my Sovereign, and in presence of all the brethren now present, never to take arms against my king, directly or indirectly, in any conspiracy against him.

I promise never to reveal any of the degrees of the Knight of the Sun, which is now on the point of being intrusted to me, to any person or persons whatsoever, without being duly qualified to receive the same; and never to give my consent to any one to be admitted into our mysteries, only after the most scrupulous circumspection, and full knowledge of his life and conversation; and who has given at all times full proof of his zeal and fervent attachment for the order, and a submission at all times to the tribunal of the Sovereign Princes of the Royal Secret.

I promise never to confer the degree of the Knights of the Sun, without having a permission in writing from the Grand Council of Princes of the Royal Secret, or from the Grand Inspector or his deputy, known by their titles and authority.

I promise also and swear that I will not assist any, through my means, to form or raise a lodge of the Sublime Orders, in this Island, (or in America as the case may be,) "without proper authority."

The American Party,

ITS OBJECT, ORGANIZATION, PLATFORM AND CANDIDATES.

Some of the ablest men in the nation have pronounced our platform the best that has been presented to the American people for the past fifty years. Our Candidates are men of acknowledged ability and honesty, and if every voter in the United States could read this our "POLITICAL TRACT," our Candidates could undoubtedly be elected. TRACT NO. 27.

Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Freemasonry.

A 4 Page Tract, 50 cents per 100. $4 00 per 1000.

GERMAN CYNOSUCE TRACT A.

Six Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason.

By Rev. A. GROLE, Pastor, German M. E. Church, Worchester, Mass.

This is our first German Tract, and it is a good one; it ought to have a large circulation. A 4 page tract, Price 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1,000.

FREE TRACTS.

A Tract Fund for the Free Distribution of Tracts

HAS BEEN SECURED AND SHOULD NEVER BE EXHAUSTED. A friend has pledged this fund a dollar for every other dollar received, so EVERY NEW SUBSCRIPTION TO THE TRACT FUND COUNTS DOUBLE, and thus $10.00 pays for 20,000 pages of tracts.

The distribution of these tracts has already saved hundreds of young men from the lodge, but there is a great lack of funds to supply the constantly increasing demand for Free Tracts.

During the year ending July 1st, 1875 a little less than 150.000 pages of Cynosure Tracts were gratuitously sent out, mostly in very small lots. The present demand is fully 100.000 pages per month. but funds are lacking to meet it.

Many of our most earnest workers in this cause of God are poor men, who would be glad to circulate thousands of pages of Antimasonic literature if they could have them free.

SHALL WE NOT HAVE AN INEXHAUSTIBLE TRACT FUND

"THE ANTI-MASONS SCRAP BOOK."

Contains 24 Cynosure Tracts, bound together and is just the thing to select from. Price 20cents. See advertisement page 15.

Enoch Honeywell Esq., pays for an unlimited number of his tract addressed "TO THE YOUNG MEN OF AMERICA." It is an excelent tract, bearing the printed endorsement of Executive Committee of the National Christian Association. He has furnished the public over 150.000 pages of these tracts during the past year.

LOCATION.

Wheaton College, of which a cut is seen above, is located on the Iowa Division of the Chicago and Northwestern rail-road in the village of Wheaton. This town is one of the most healthful and pleasantly located in northern Illinois. It contains about two thousand inhabitants; and Congregational, Wesleyan, Baptist, Methodist, Free Methodist and German Lutheran Churches.

INSTRUCTION.

It is the intention of the Board of Trust and the Faculty to make the instruction of this Institution thorough in every respect, without caring to develop the merely showy and ornamental, they intend to furnish facilities which will enable young men and women to obtain a solid education in the Classics, Mathematics, Natural, Mental and Moral Science, Music, Painting and Drawing, with Book-keeping and Penmanship.

BUSINESS EDUCATION.—A few years since there was a great excitement regarding Business Education. Circulars were scattered broadcast over the country agreeing to take a boy from the plow and fit him for commercial life in three to six months. These representations, being false and fraudulent, Business Colleges fell into disrepute. The fact remains that a knowledge of accounts is necessary to every business man, or we may say to every man who is truly intelligent. Hence at WHEATON COLLEGE students have the opportunity to acquire a knowledge of Book-keeping and writing and at the same time to study Reading, Spelling, Grammar, and the natural sciences. Terms low. Write for a catalogue, or come at the opening Sept. 6th.

DRAWING AND PAINTING.—Mrs. Nutting, formerly of the State Normal School in Vermont, gives instruction in all branches of Drawing and Painting. She is a most successful teacher, and her charges are very low. Students desiring to pursue these studies cannot do better than under her care. For terms write for catalogue or come at the opening of the term, Sept. 6th, 1876.

EXPENSES.

Young Ladies can board, in the Building represented above, for one hundred and fifty dollars per year; payable seventy-five dollars at the opening and seventy-five dollars at the middle of the year, and assisting one hour per day in the domestic department. Daughters of ministers and missionaries can have the same privileges for one hundred dollars per year and one hour labor per day in the domestic department. For this sum of money the student has board, tuition and room during the year. Each room contains bedstead, mattress, pillows, stove, washing utensils, etc. Fuel and lights are furnished at cost. There are also a few families where young ladies dependent on their own exertions can defray a part or the whole of these expenses by assisting in the family work.

Young men board themselves in rented rooms, or rent rooms and board at the College, or have their board in families. They can get along with one hundred dollars a year by boarding themselves; one hundred and seventy-five boarding at the College, and from that sum to two hundred and fifty boarding in private families. In other words the expenses are from one-third to one-sixth part as great as at Eastern Colleges, while the facilities are, in many respects as good. The tuition is thirty dollars per year in the College classes, twenty-four in the Scientific, Preparatory and English Course. This tuition includes everything but Drawing and Painting, Music and Penmanship, which are extra. For further and definite information see Catalogue.

RELIGIOUS INFLUENCE.

It is and will be the constant endeavor of the Faculty to promote the spiritual as well as the intellectual welfare of their students. While there are no religious tests for admission students are expected to attend some church on the Sabbath and devotional exercises daily in the Chapel. It is also understood that students attending this Institution entirely abstain from Tobacco, Billiards, Cards, Secret Societies and other hindrances to good morals and good scholarship. The efforts of the Faculty in the past to this end have been, by the blessing of God, successful to a great degree and it is hoped may be still more so in the future.

REFERENCES.

There are now nearly one hundred Alumni who are doing credit to themselves and the Institution in the Ministry, at the Bar, in the Schools and Colleges of the country and in other places of responsibility. The Illinois State Association has repeatedly commended it to the confidence of the intelligent public as have Dr. J. E. Roy, Rev. James Powell, Dr. Geo. N. Boardman, Prof. F. W. Fisk, Rev. L. T. Chamberlain, Hon. Wm. H. Bradley, Philo Carpenter, Prof. James T. Hyde, Rev. N. A. Prentiss, Prof. T. W. Hopkins, Jas. W. Scoville, Rev. S. J. Humphrey, Dr. W. A. Bartlett, Hon. S. B. Gookins, Dr. E. Gain in one week,	70

This is an improvement on last week. Shall we keep on in the right direction? Mr. Hodge sends in the names of seven new subscribers from the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia. Two for six weeks, four for three months and one for a year. Mr. Larkin Scott, Denver, Ill., sends $4.95 to help remove the Cynosure debt. We used it to send the Cynosure to three persons for six months, and one for a year. They were persons whose names had been given as desirous of taking the Cynosure, but unable to do so. So this contribution helps the Cynosure and helps the cause. Others who wish, can help in this way. Of one hundred and twenty-eight persons, who received the Cynosure for six months as the gift of the President of the Connecticut State Association, thirty-three have renewed and become permanent subscribers.

We rejoice to learn from many letters that friends mean to keep at the work of getting subscribers. A large mail list will wipe out the Cynosure debt. Watch and work. PERSEVERE.

SEPTEMBER,

OCTOBER

—AND—

NOVEMBER

ARE THE THREE MONTHS OF THE CAMPAIGN OF 1876.

Commencing with our first issue in September we intend to devote a whole page or more of the Cynosure to the subject which should be near every Christian patriot's heart, THE POLITICS OF OUR COUNTRY.

The campaign is now fully opened. The next two months will be full of work for the coming election and the third, November, of tidings of the result of the great campaign. While we do not intend to ignore any political news which will interest intelligent patriots our special attention will be given to the interests of THE AMERICAN PARTY.

In 1832 the Anti-masons cast seven electoral votes for Hon. Wm. Wirt. This record will be handed down to future generations.

CAMPAIGN RATES.

We will send the Cynosure to any one for the months of September, October and November for forty cents; but the subscription must be sent in September. We say "to any one," not wishing to discourage persons who can send in one, two or three subscribers. Let every one who can immediately secure a CLUB OF TEN and forward the names together with a $4,00 postal order, registered letter or draft as soon as possible. Subscriptions at "CAMPAIGN RATES" receivable during the whole month of September.

FORTY CENTS FOR THREE MONTHS, September, October and November. Who will send the first club? Who will send the largest club?

Send for tracts, circulars and subscription papers for canvassing purposes.

ACROSTIC.

Truth, light and liberty,—pure as the stars in blue,
How precious to the eye unscaled,—the soul make free!
Earth, prize their real worth, then hold thy jubilee.

Can I, perverting truth, repelling "Light" from heaven,
Have liberty? Can I commend the truth and light?
Right reason readily replies, "Absurdity!"
In labyrinths of mystic darkness, Satan's traps,
Some sightless souls are snared: the key of knowledge, lost
To such, in their dark prison house they, blinded, grind.
Inspired with all the power of truth and light, in hope.
Aggressive CYNOSURE, drive back the bolts; set free,
Not by thy might, but by the "Spirit of the Lord."

Corruptious multiform mark this our favored day.
Yes!—with the why,—pride and self-love are god and law;
Nation and church alike, of this give mournful proof!
O fearless tongues, speak out! ye faithful pens, rebuke:
Speak for the coming age; promise would give thee hope,
Until the darkness yields, hold up the blessed light.
REFORM, thy root is fear of God; production this,
Eternal Spirit, thine,—mock substitutes, subside.

HUNTSVILLE, O., Aug. 15th, 1876.

LEIPZIG AND ITS UNIVERSITY.—II.

BY PROF. H. A. FISCHER.

The year 1409 is considered an epoch in the history of Leipzig. For some time there had been a conflict between the German and Bohemian interests at Prague University, arising mostly from the preaching of the reformer John Huss. The Germans sided with Rome, while the Bohemians took the part of their zealous and eloquent countryman. Huss was a prominent professor and in 1402 had been elected rector of the University. Through the queen, who was one of his followers, he prevailed on King Wenzel to favor the Bohemians and they gained the ascendency. The Germans left the University and a large number (variously stated at from 2,000 to 20,000) of professors and students went to Leipzig, where with the assistance of the Margraves, Frederick and William of Saxony, and the blessing of Pope Alexander V., they founded Leipzig University. The Pope seems to have looked with particular favor on Leipzig and the new plant which had just taken root there. In the bill granting his permission to found the University, he speaks in complimentary terms of the character of the citizens, the clear sky and beautiful scenery. Had he spent a winter there he would have modified the latter statements, for the country is flat and dreary, and the sky so covered with clouds that sun does not shine for weeks at a time. But the citizens were probably some of his most faithful subjects. Three or four monasteries and the University commenced under circumstances so favorable that it promised to make Leipzig a tower of strength for popery. The University received a number of grants, liberal for those times, buildings were assigned for the accommodation of professors and students, and every means taken to place the institution under obligations to the papal power. Its fidelity was soon to be brought to the test.

In 1517, Tetzel, a native of Leipzig, commenced his sale of indulgences. On the 31st of October of that year Luther nailed his immortal 95 Theses to the door of the "Schlosskirche" in Wittenberg, only forty miles from Leipzig, and offered to maintain them against all adversaries. The theses were rapidly circulated through Germany, and Luther was branded as a heretic by the defenders of the Pope. Leo X. summoned him to appear before his legate, Cardinal Cajetan, at Augsburg. He did so; the two met and parted with no very favorable opinions of each other. The Cardinal declined to have anything more to do with the "German beast, with the deep eyes and whimsical speculations," and Luther said that the Cardinal "knew no more about the Word, than a donkey knows of harp-playing." Wittenberg then belonged to the Electorate of Saxony, and Elector Frederick the Wise, early favored the Reformation. Leipzig on the other hand, was in the Duchy of Saxony under Duke George, who opposed Luther and was anxious to have his doctrines refuted in a public disputation. He called the theological professors at Leipzig "dogs that will not bark," because they endeavored to prevent the discussion of Karlstadt and Luther with Eck. Hitherto the Pope and his party had contented themselves with condemning Luther and his theses, and the Leipzig disputation was really the first public encounter in the conflict which ended with the triumph of the Reformation in northern Germany. It was held in the Pleissenburg (since rebuilt), from June 27th to July 16th, 1519. Karlstadt and Eck debated the first nine days and Luther and Eck the remaining days. None of the questions under debate were settled, but Luther and his cause had a public hearing. Duke George, though he entered complaint before the famous Diet at Worms against the sale of indulgences and the immoral lives of the priesthood, opposed the Reformation to the last. He died in 1539 and was succeeded by his brother Henry, the Pious, who immediately recalled those who had been banished by Duke George on account of their adherence to the Protestant faith. In the same year the Reformation was formally introduced in the Duchy, and after a sharp struggle, Leipzig University accepted the new faith.

This was the beginning of a new era in the history of the University. Henry and his remarkable son and successor, Maurice (Moriz), added much to the already liberal endowments of the institution. The latter gave to it the revenue from five neighboring villages which had belonged to the Thomas monastery; also the buildings which had been occupied by the Dominican monks, most of which are still used by the University.

Maurice had more ambition than love for the Protestant faith. In 1546 he made a secret alliance with the Emperor and suddenly took possession of the territory of his cousin the Elector John Frederick (successor of Frederick the Wise), who was at the time defending the Protestant States in Southern Germany against the Emperor.

John Frederick hastened home, retook his lost territory, and besieged Leipzig. But the Emperor entered Northern Germany the following year, defeated the Elector, took him prisoner, and had him sentenced to death. This sentence was not executed, but most of Saxony, with the Electoral dignity was bestowed on Maurice. Five years later the latter suddenly deserted the Catholic cause, and marched against the Emperor who only escaped because Maurice thought he "had no fitting cage for so large a bird." John Frederick was restored to liberty but not to his lost authority.

Further devastation awaited Germany before the Pope gave up his determination to rule the consciences of the people. The thirty years' war cost Saxony nearly a million of lives and reduced the population of Germany from 30,000,000 to about 12,000,000. Leipzig lost about $1,000,000 of property, and the University was for a time almost crippled. Some of the most important battles were fought near the city. The brave and pious Gustavus Adolphus, who came to the rescue when the Protestant cause seemed hopeless, defeated Tilly here in 1631. In the following year he purchase with his own life a victory over Wallenstein and Pappenheim at Lutzen, about 20 miles S. E. of Leipzig. The two generals retreated to this city, where Pappenheim died of wounds received in the battle. In 1642 the Swedish General, Torstenson, almost annihilated Piccolomini's army before the walls and took the city. The treacherous Elector John George, who had made a separate treaty with the Emperor, saved himself by flight.

The "Peace of Westphalia," Oct. 24th, 1648, put an end to this war which had turned Germany into one vast battle-field, robbed it of half its inhabitants and untold millions of property. Even after this the Pope vainly endeavored to keep up the conflict by issuing a bull declaring the treaty null and void!

Leipzig became the scene of one of the most important historical events of the present century. A number of monuments in and near the city, mark interesting spots connected with the "Battle of Nations," which decided the fate of Napoleon after his disastrous retreat from Moscow. The French, on leaving the city, prematurely blew up the bridge over the Elster, and Prince Poniatowsky, who was covering their hasty retreat, was drowned, with hundreds of others, and his remains lie buried close by the river side.

Religious Newspapers.

The average religious newspaper is better calculated to lull religious sentiment to sleep than to awaken it. But as the Rev. Mr. Murray of Boston has recently established a new one, it was thought that he might, perhaps, give a new and fresh impetus to the work of that kind of paper.

One of the articles of the Cynosure was recently sent to him for republication. It was one that any paper might have published without any discredit to its character, and which certainly was not worse than the stuff from the lodge which is everywhere so readily circulated by the press. But yet, Mr. Murry declined to publish it. The article thus refused was the address of the the late convention of the National Christian Association to the churches of the United States, in which the growth of Freemasonry with its numerous and costly temples, was alluded to as a relapse into paganism.

It appears that the Rev. Mr. Murray has been solicited to join a new Masonic lodge; that he has declined to do so; that neither himself nor his assistants belong to any secret society, and that they have invariably declined to print any of the articles offered them in favor of the lodge and its peculiar kind of charity.

As Mr. Murray has declined to publish anything in favor of the lodge, so on the other hand, he refuses to republish an article which is opposed to it; for, by so doing, he would stir up a feeling that would tend to defeat the purpose for which his paper was established, and destroy its usefulness. This is Mr. Murray's answer, as near as we can get it, given in all politeness and Christian kindness to the one who sent him the article for republication.

The case being thus stated, we would refer it to the readers of the Cynosure, which claims to be a religious paper, for solution. Is the editor of a religious newspaper right, in the United States, at the present day, in ignoring the existence of the Masonic lodge?

We are taught by the Scriptures that the church of God is the foundation of the truth; and we Antimasons know that the Masonic lodge is the foundation of falsehood, its teachings being false from beginning to end. We also know that all the mysteries and secrets necessary to salvation have been revealed to all mankind in the Bible, and that any lodge, or body of men, therefore, which pretends that they alone have the keeping of valuable moral mysteries and secrets are impostors.

This is the class of men whose feelings the Rev. Mr. Murray's course of action would not stir up and offend. Mr. Murray's paper would preach the truth in such a manner that those who are in the continual practice of the falsehoods of the lodge might conceive their lives to be in accord with the truth! And in this respect Mr. Murray's paper does not differ much from the other religious papers of New England.

Is it to be wondered at that in the single State of Vermont alone, while there are one hundred and ninety-six Congregational churches there only sixty-five settled clergymen? And that the lodge is in a flourishing condition in every considerable village? Are we to wonder if, under these circumstances, Mr. Murray's new religious newspaper should flourish?

Constant Reader.

David Marks, the Great Free Will Baptist Preacher.

Editor Cynosure:—I copy from journal of David Marks, a Free Will Baptist preacher, truly a devoted servant of God, that which may be of interest to your readers. It shows the same spirit of hatred that is still manifest by adherents to the lodge toward those who from conscientious scruples oppose or in any wise bring to light the hidings of Masonry.

Thursday, December 9th, 1830, I attended a meeting at the meeting house in Greenville which was designed to expose the iniquity of Freemasonry. Elder —— declining an invitation to make the introductory prayer, the request was addressed to me. And as the voice of inspiration says, "I will that men pray everywhere," I accepted the invitation. After this, we heard a very candid and able discourse on the subject from Mr. Moses Thatcher, a Congregational minister. There an aged and venerable Quaker, who had been a Mason, testified that the disclosures relative to Freemasonry were correct, as far as he had taken the degrees. I had said nothing on the subject in any public meeting in New England, and had intended to be silent in this meeting; but now a trembling seized me, and I felt impressed, I believed, by the Spirit of the Lord, to state some facts with which I had been acquainted, connected with the abduction of Morgan. For I found, to my surprise, that such had been the power of the deception used by the fraternity, that very many supposed that Morgan had never been taken away by Masons; or if he had that it was only done by a few, and the deed was disapproved by the institution, &c. I was acquainted with facts which were weighty on the subject; and I believed I should be condemned by God, if I now withheld these things from the people. I also knew there were serious persons in the multitude present, to whom the silence of Christians respecting this evil was a great "stumbling block." Therefore lest I should be guilty of the blood of souls, I stated some facts, gave my testimony against the institution, made an apology for those that had been taken in the snare, entreating the people to deal tenderly with them, and warned sinners to be cautious lest this subject should take their attention from their eternal interests. I spoke about fifteen minutes. Most of the assembly wept, and after meeting, some to whom this subject had been a trial, manifested seriousness for the first time and with tears asked me to pray for them. From this time, however, the countenance and conduct of those that were in heart attached to the institution were materially changed—some that had appeared to be my friends turned against me—and letters, unfriendly, cruel, and slanderous, were sent before me into Maine, apparently to hedge up my way. * * This was unexpected opposition, and such as I had never before met from * * * * * My heart was filled with mourning and I wept day and night. I little thought when I came to visit my dear brethren in the East that for the conscientious discharge of my duty I should have to endure such opposition. But this is nothing compared to what my Lord has endured for me; and he said of the world, "Me it hateth, because I testify of it, that the works thereof are evil." Therefore I have been enabled to commit these things to him who "judgeth righteously," and pray that "my misjudging friends" may consider what these Scriptures mean: "Touch not mine anointed, and do my prophets no harm." "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

I now copy from notes published in his memoirs:

* The following is a copy of one of these letters signed by the pastor of North Providence church. Another was an anonymous communication from which a few extracts are taken. These are here introduced by the advice of judicious friends who thought their insertion would exemplify the spirit of Masonry, and that the recent revival of this order demands that light on this subject should be thrown before the public mind.—[Ed.

North Providence,
Dec. 20th, 1830.

Brother Burbank (Editor of Morning Star): Elder Marks has not left this section yet. His last visit has been a cause of grief to most of us, and we have no doubt he came back on purpose to blow the coals of Anti-masonry. He for some time did it secretly, and while receiving such things as he needed from brethren, most of whom were Masons. Just before he left Greenville in the height of revival, he, in a public meeting, spoke on the subject, and poor brother ——— is now left to labor against prejudices of his creating. We fear it will stop the work, and were I the person who had done it, I should fear lest at the day of doom some should reproach me as the cause of their ruin. We believe he has done more real injury to the cause of religion in this part, than he will do good for months to come. Believe me, your affectionate, though unworthy brother. ———"

"Mr. Burbank, sir: You will pardon me for intruding on your generosity, while the feelings of my heart prompt me to make a few remarks preparatory against the fowler's snare. I have a particular regard for the people whose cause you vindicate, and their prosperity, union, happiness, and church fellowship, lead me to adopt this method as a means of exertion for continued good feelings and friendship among the Free-will Baptists. I design this letter as a caution for you to not be too hasty in making any insertions that may be sent or presented you by David Marks. I am apt to think he will dip his pen in gall against the little village of Greenville, or at least some of its worthy inhabitants. When the General Conference was held in Oct. last, he (Marks) preached on Sabbath morning, was received by the congregation with very general applause, by the brethren with cordial cheer, and their houses a receptacle, a very welcome receptacle for himself and companion and their barns and granaries for his horse. As a Christian minister he was received as a Christian minister, he was treated and considered to be laboring for the building up of Zion's cause. But soon to the surprise and sorrow of the pastor of the church, he began to weave himself into the graces of some of the church members by traducing a certain class of people called Freemasons, or the institution from which they derive their name, and which is the same thing. This circumstance gave him an introduction to certain families who have ever been opposed to Free-will Baptists, as well as Masons, and he expostulated freely in favor of the Anti-masonic cause and has borne hard upon Elder ——, he being a nominal Mason. This course he pursued wherever he thought it would do, although he ever appeared to Elder ——'s face to be a well wisher to him,—yet it appeared to be his aim to undermine him that he might slide into his shoes. * * *

A man, called by some the Hon. Moses Thatcher, of Wrentham, Mass., (and late but not successful, candidate for representative to Congress, and a most violent seceding Mason) held forth at the meeting house occupied by Elder ——, in which he (Marks) took a very active part, and as many candid persons thought who were present clothed his remarks with a hypocritical revenge. * * * He seems to have spared no pains to raise an excitement, and for what purpose I cannot conceive, unless it is to publish his real character, or, in other words to level down Elder —— and level himself up. If he proceeds in the same manner wherever he goes, you will find your churches all in an uproar.

I do not write this to injure Mr. Marks, but to let you know his management, hoping by these means, that some check may be given to his conduct, and that peace and harmony may rest on, and well among Free-will Baptists, and they not be thrown into disorder by one who acts or conducts like a wolf in sheep's clothing.

Therefore set your bounds in season lest the publication. Marks would palm upon you, might secretly, and ere you are aware, lead you and the whole denomination in trouble. * * * * From a professor, and I humbly trust a possessor of religion."

I would say this village of Greenville was in Rhode Island near to Providence. I find in his journal many telling strokes on Masonry which I do not remember to have seen elsewhere.

This is from the second edition, published by the Free-will Baptist printing establishment, Dover, N. H., 1847, pages 241, 242 and 243.

Respectfully, JNO. BALL.

SKETCHES OF SUMMER TRAVEL.

PENOBSCOT INDIANS—THE INDIAN PROBLEM—A CLASSIC RETREAT—THE WONDERS AND BEAUTIES OF THE DEEP—AND ONE OF ITS PRACTICAL SIDES ALSO.

The Indians of whom I wrote in my last, are a remnant of the Penobscot tribe, whose home is in Old Town, near Bangor. They scatter about to the different watering-places in the summer, where they make and sell baskets. They are said to be inoffensive, honest and temperate. All their work is laid aside on Saturday night and quietness pervades their tents on the Sabbath. In the accomplishment (?) of smoking, however, they equal their white brethren, for even the women are seen with pipes in their mouths. One Indian has quite a good looking white woman for wife, who says they live in a nice frame house at home, and she does not like living in tents. She seems quite ambitious about selling her baskets. On the grounds various sports are engaged in such as swinging, riding round a circle on artificial horses, and shooting at marks. Refreshment houses and fruit stands are plenty, but nothing stronger than root beer and lemonade is served in the way of drink, which reminds us of the prohibitory law of the State. "Come and refresh ourselves," is the amusing cry of a young man behind one of the lemonade stands. We suppose that the money he receives must be the refreshing part to him. Query: Might not the great Indian problem find a solution in dividing up the tribes into small numbers and distributing them around in the States, where they would come under direct Christian influence? This may be impracticable, but it does not seem to us more absurd than the present practice of putting fire-arms in their hands, and then sending troops to be shot down by them.

"Fern Park" is the name given to quite a large pine woods a short distance back of the Orchard House. Here one may wander for hours through wide, circuitous paths cut through the trees, and covered with the dry needles of the pine; resting when wearied on rustic seats and in artistic bowers, from some of which, through the opening, fine views may be obtained of the ocean and surrounding country. One would think this to be a favorite haunt of the muses from the number of poetical effusions suspended from the trees, and hung wherever there is a resting place. Next to a "tent on the beach," we think it furnishes the most delightful place imaginable, for reading and retirement. Not far from the entrance of the park is the Methodist camp-meeting ground, in a fine grove under a bluff. Here the great National Temperance Camp-meeting is to be held on the 8th of August. About three miles from here there is an iron and sulphur mineral spring, also a cascade, and gold mines (not yet very celebrated.)

Attracted by an unusual noise to our windows, we see that a party of thirty, who started in the morning on an excursion to this place, in a hayrack with two large wheels, drawn by four oxen (horses were considered quite too common), have returned with flying colors, having adorned, during their absence, the cart, the oxen and driver, and their own heads with long streamers of tissue paper in red, white and blue, which, fluttering in a strong breeze, make quite a gay appearance. The oxen betray no symptoms of vanity at the honor conferred, but wear the same meek, honest faces as if to say, promotion would not spoil them. The party profess themselves highly pleased with their trip. Others have been well paid by an excursion to the rocks, where about a hundred seal may be seen.

But the deep blue ocean, type of everything vast and inexhaustible, keeping itself pure by constant agitation, and continually sending forth life-giving influences, is the great and unfailing object of interest at the beach. To mortal spirits that "tire and faint," the incessant dashing of the surf produces at times a sense of weariness, and the desire that it would stop and take a little rest—but never for a moment has it ceased its motion since the bounds of its habitation were fixed. It seems to find rest in healthful action. The vast extent of its waters, imagination can hardly conceive, as it wanders over the thousands of miles of its surface, or tries to penetrate its miles of depth. Yet on this vast deep man fearlessly launches his bark, contends with its storms, and exercises over it and its inhabitants the dominion given him by his Creator. As we watch the white sails on the water, how appropriate the language of inspiration seems, "There go the ships, there is that leviathan whom thou hast made to play therein." And what could give us a better idea of the greatness of God than the passage, "Who hath measured the waters in the hollow of his hand." Next to the feelings of sublimity that these thoughts inspire are those of beauty. Who, but the Infinite could have devised and executed the wonderful effect produced by the combined action of light and water? At times the sun pours the full force of his rays in one direction upon the deep, making a sheet of glory too bright for human eyes to gaze upon. Again, the light is more diffusive, and every wave sparkles and glows, making a scene of universal brightness. Then the wonderful, moving panorama of the clouds comes between, and the deep blue, better adapted to our weak vision, appears. At times, as we lately witnessed, the clouds gather blackness, and hang like a fearful pall over the whole surface of the deep, and on this dark ground the sheet lightning plays, making a scene grand and terrific, and then after a shower perhaps, the bow of promise spans the heavens. To these effects may be added the reflections at sun-et, and the soft radiance of moonlight.

But as it would not be well to always dwell in the mount of exalted feelings and emotions, we may at any time descend and gather shells on the beach, or listen to the merry shouts of the bathers, who, in their grotesque habiliments, are performing various exploits in the water. Some timid ones sit down on the sand and let the small waves go over them—others strike boldly out into the deep waters and let the large waves flow over them. Some form a ring and jump and pull each other round. Others float upon the waves or swim. The most usual hours for bathing are from 11 to 12 a. m., and from 3 to 4 p. m. The time comes all too soon for us to leave these pleasant scenes and to part with new made friends. Newburyport, Mass., is to be the next point in our travels, and if Providence favors, you may hear from us again.

. . W. P.

O Christian, cease your complainings of outward things—of God and the church, and your circumstances. The evil that torments you is not in them. Cease your resolvings to quit your place and your circumstances for others that you are hoping and dreaming to find more congenial. No change like that you are meditating will bring you relief. Cease your strivings for rest in the creature. The end of them all will be to multiply your trouble and enhance your unrest. Your soul, in all this, its great distress, is crying out for rest. And you, by these offers of creature blessings, are mocking its cries. Jesus is waiting to give you true rest, his rest. Find it in him, by leaving all with him, and trusting Him. Reader, there is a precious, holy rest for God's trusting children. There is—glory to the Savior—

"A rest where all the soul's desire
Is fixed on things above;
Where sin, and grief, and fear expire
Cast out by perfect love."

Legal Attestation of Ronayne's Exposition.

To clinch the nail so thoroughly driven home by his public expositions of the lodge, Past Master E. Ronayne last week went before a notary, and took the following affidavit. M. M. Pomeroy, publisher of the Democrat of Chicago, after once denying that Mr. Ronayne had been Master of Keystone Lodge, was after examination, obliged to publish that "Edmond Ronayne was at one time Master of a lodge in this city, as we learn from the records."—Pomeroy's Democrat, Aug. 12, 1876. The same examination can be made by any other person. There is no doubt of his ability to tell the truth about Masonry, and to assure the credulous he gives his affidavit to the world, and in fact presents a challenge to the so-called fraternity. Not exactly like Paddy at Donnybrook fair, trailing his coat on the ground for some one to tread on and get up a fight, yet it is expected that if the attestation is untrue the lodge will cause his arrest and trial for perjury—genuine perjury, not the sham charge so ready at the end of every Masonic tongue. Let every Anti-mason who takes the Cynosure get this affidavit published in his local paper. If an editor refuses it, let him furnish a counter affidavit if he dare. Publish it through every county in the land.

STATE OF ILLINOIS, } SS

Edmond Ronayne, of No. 104 Bremer street, Chicago, being duly sworn, deposes and says, that he has been a member of the society of Freemasons and was Worshipful Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639 in this city, during the Masonic year ending December, 1873, and that the following is the mode of preparation for and receiving the degrees of "Ancient Craft Masonry:"

In each of the three degrees the candidate is deprived of all his clothing except his shirt. He then puts on a pair of drawers the left leg of which is rolled above the knee in the First or Entered Apprentice degree; the right leg is rolled up in the Fellow Craft degrees and both legs are rolled above the knees in the Master Mason's degree. His left arm and left breast are made bare in the first, his right arm and right breast in the second and both arms and both breasts are bare in the third degree. A blue rope called a cable-tow is put once around his neck in the first degree, twice around his naked right arm in the second, and three times around his body in the third degree. He wears a slipper with the heel slipshod on the right foot in the first, on his left foot in the second and in the third degree both feet are bare.

In each of the degrees a hoodwink is securely fastened over both his eyes and in that condition he is led to the door of the lodge. In the first degree he is conducted once around the lodge room, in the second degree twice, and in the Master Mason's degree three times.

In each degree he takes an oath or obligation administered to him by the Worshipful Master and binds himself under a death penalty of having his throat cut across and his tongue torn out, in the first degree his left breast torn open and his heart plucked out in the second, and his body severed in twain and his bowels taken from thence in the third degree.

And the said Edmond Ronayne further deposes and says, that the book written by him and known as the "Hand-Book of Freemasonry," contains all the secrets and mysteries of "Ancient Craft Masonry" as they are universally practiced in all the Grand Institutions of the United States and he has been taught them by Ed. Cook, John O'Neil, H.F. Holcomb and D.H. Kilmore, all prominent Freemasons, District Deputy Grand Masters in Chicago and members of the Grand Lodge of Illinois; and also by Joseph H. Dixon, the present Worshipful Master of said Keystone Lodge, No. 639, and that the said "Hand-Book" is a true and literal exposition of "Ancient Craft Masonry" and gives the correct method of conferring the degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow Craft and Master Mason.

And he further deposes and says, that in the second section of the Third or Master Mason's degree the candidate in representing one Hiram Abiff is again blind-folded and then knocked down or forcibly thrown nto a large canvass held for the purpose; that a mock burial takes place and that after the lapse of some considerable time the candidate is raised again to his feet and Mah-hah-bone whispered into his ear by the Worshipful Master; and further that the passwords of the three degrees are Boaz in the first, Shibboleth and Jachin in the second, and Tubal Cain and Mah-hah-bone in the third degree.

And the said Edmond Ronayne further deposes and says that every candidate for Freemasonry whether clergymen or layman, Jew or Gentile must be prepared as above described and go through the same ceremonies of receiving the degrees, assuming the same obligations and binding themselves by the same death penalties as above described and as these ceremonies, oaths and penalties are given in the said "Hand-Book."

TME AMERICAN PLATFORM AND NOMINATIONS FOR 1876.

FOR PRESIDENT:
James B. Walker,
of Illinois.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT
Donald Kirkpatrick,
of New York.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage, is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. The charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discountenanced.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency, and a return to specie payment as soon as practicable.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And finally we demand for the Americanpeople the abolition of the Electoral Colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

To Friends of the American Party in Iowa.

SHILOH, Iowa, Aug. 21, 1876.

As yet there is no electoral ticket made for this State. One of the committee appointed at the State meeting declines to serve, for reasons not necessary to mention here, the other two are over one hundred miles apart. There was an effort made to hold a meeting. Brother Bradley failed in his attempt to get to the place, and I was at Philadelphia, so there was but one at the meeting of the committee, since which he wrote me that he could not take any action in the matter, not from a want of interest, but from other causes.

Now, as the matter stands as it does, I move that there be a committee of the whole, and that names of suitable men, that are known to be right on this reform politically, and who will act as electors, be sent to the Corresponding Secretary, Louis Bookwalter of Western College, Linn county, and he, with M. S. Drury of the same place constitute a committee to select electors from the names thus sent; and further, that they see that a suitable number of tickets be struck off and sent to the electors chosen whose duty it shall be to supply some one in the different counties of his district respectively whose duty it shall be to see that the several townships are supplied with tickets. Let the No. of the district be given from which names are sent so that there may be one for each, as is required by law, and two at large—in all eleven.

It might be necessary to send a small sum to pay for printing tickets. I hope my motion will prevail, and be indicated by friends in the different districts forwarding names as indicated. JOHN DORCAS.

To the Friends of the American Party in Michigan.—II.

It will be said to you who are Republicans, "If you draw off at this time and cast your votes for a third party, you will throw the power into the hands of the Democratic party, and then!—ah then!!" Well, suppose it should be so; where would rest the blame? On us, who are striving to save the nation from its sins—its great national sins of drunkenness, secret idolatries, profaning the Sabbath, etc., or upon that party, which having been dowered by the people for sixteen years with power almost absolute, has so mismanaged as in great measure to lose the confidence of the people, so as to make a return to the sway of a cast-off Democracy less to be dreaded than their prolonged lease of power? The people are restive under the rule of the Republican party, and with abundant reason. As between the two great parties it has become a question of choice between two evils. It is the sin and the shame of the Republican party, that it is so. But we are not shut up to such a choice. There is no deliverance from our national and social and religious dangers in either of the dominant parties. The perpetuity of either in office is the strengthening of the evils which menace our civil and religious institutions. The liquor traffic has nothing to fear from either. They dare not aim a blow at its life or prosperity. The people have appealed to them in vain and repeatedly. They have promised and when promise was fulfilled in legislation it has been to sink us, if anything, deeper than ever under the grasp of the rum power. This prolific vine of all evil by party legislation has only been trimmed so as to become more fruitful in all that destroys. The American party proposes to cut it up by the roots.

OATH-BOUND SECRECY

with its hellish brood, no other party save ours dares to offend by even a hint at a restriction of its powers. We propose its outlawry and overthrow. It has entered the domain of politics and sits in the high places of the land, clad in borrowed robes and with lying and specious pretenses is deceiving the people to their ruin. It is ours to unmask its character and drive it from the places of power it has usurped. This can never be done by any existing party, save ours. Every year's delay of political action on our part gives strength to our adversary and prolongs the labor and adds to the cost of its overthrow.

Masonry as the parent and guide of the secret brood holds the two great parties, as the huntsman holds his hounds in leash; and neither dog dares turn on its master, but meekly waits his bidding to rush upon the game.

I repeat it, the Republican party cannot if it would, assail the great evils of which we complain. The Democratic party would not save us if it could. Then in the names of God and a suffering humanity, what have we to do in longer supporting these parties which have outlived their usefulness and are powerless for any advancing good. Another and better party must, and will, supplant them. We have put our hands to the plow of safety and reform. We did it because we believed God in his providence called us to it. If this be so let us on and fear nothing but dereliction from duty and the displeasure of God. If, in calling this party into being, we as Christian men did not feel that God's finger pointed the way, then we have been guilty of an act of presumption, for which we ought to ask forgiveness of God and man; and especially of those men we have called as standard bearers, and have thus made targets for the shots of our embittered foes. The American party is born to live. Its founders believe in it. They love its principles. They fellowship its aims. They recognize for it a grand work—a fair history, sublime victories, and a glorious destiny. We ask every friend of Christ and his church, every lover of his country and its glorious institutions, every foe to despotism, secret or open, every lover of justice and foe of lawlessness, to enlist under its banners and make a valiant and unceasing fight for its principles, until victory shall crown our efforts.

AN ELECTORAL TICKET

must and will be formed in this

State, as well as in others. Many are calling for it in different parts of the State. Those who ask it are men who will not vote for either of the dominant parties, and who seek an opportunity to exercise their rights and perform their duties in such manner as will not cause a sacrifice of conscience at the shrine of any supposed expediency.

In conclusion at this time I wish the fri nds of the American party, those who are in accord with the sentiments of these articles, to write to me, or to C. B. Remington at Fentonville, Genesee Co., giving their views as to such ticket, and as to whether we shall also put a State ticket before the people, as Indiana has done, as to time and place where we shall meet to perform the work, and such other matters as you may deem important. An early attention to this will greatly facilitate the labors of your agent, lecturer, and other friends, who are anxious for immediate action in this direction.

Reform News.

FROM THE MISSOURI CAMPAIGN.

BETHANY, Mo., Aug. 18th, '76.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—Bro. Stoddard is with us. He put in appearance on the night of the 15th at Princeton, the point announced for the beginning of a series of meetings to be held in different counties, preparatory to holding a State Convention, Aug. 30th, 31st, at Chillicothe, Mo.

Bro. Stoddard is a master workman, his enunciations and denunciations are vivid, truthful and irrefutable. Immediately after the lecture of the first evening, some who are affiliated with pagan grange, and pagan Odd-fellowship, were heard to say, "they were done with it." The work deepens all along the line, and we believe the visit of the General Agent will be rich in results. The initiatory steps were taken to put in nomination county officers for the coming fall elections.

Yesterday, Aug. 17th, we left Princeton in company with Bros. Needles, Stoddard and Stewart for Bethany, seat of Harrison county, where Bro. Stoddard treated us to a lecture on the general features and general fruits of Masonry. There is a manifest restlessness among the crafty crafts, but we do not think this the field upon which to reap such undying honors as were bestowed upon Ronayne at Streator, Ill. We will say further, our most sanguine hopes are being realized in the steady formation and growth of public sentiment in reference to moral and political reform.

Notice will be given from time to time as the progress of the work offers matter of interest.

Yours truly, E. G. COOPER.

THE GENERAL AGENT'S LETTER.

BETHANY, Harrison Co., Mo., Aug. 17th, 1876.

The crops in this region will average the best of any section I have visited the present season. This is especially true of the corn crop. I came thirty miles from Princeton, Mercer Co., to this place, yesterday, by wagon, and had a good opportunity to observe and make enquiries. The country is comparatively new and much of the land still in its primitive state, but scattered all along the line of our route were extensive farms, with an occasional fine house of brick or wood with ample barns and surroundings, showing that there is wealth in the soil awaiting industry and enterprise to develop its native resources, and make this one of the most beautiful, as well as one of the most productive portions of our fertile country. Wheat is selling from 80 cents to $1.00 per bushel, corn from 25 to 30 cents; apples are plenty for home use, though not as abundant as last season. The peach crop is substantially a failure, although I have eaten some that were very delicious and the trees are flourishing. Pears, plums and grapes are abundant and will be ripe and ready for use soon. Uncultivated lands are offered with an occasional sale at from $3.00 to $10.00 per acre and money is loaned on real security at one-third its value from ten to fifteen per cent. The staple of this country is stock. Horses and mules may be seen in vast droves running loose on the wild lands and will compare favorably in quality and price with those of other newly settled regions. Horses are selling from 75 to 150 dollars for shipping purposes, and mules about the same. Among the cattle I have noticed no "thoroughbreds," but I have been told that the "stock men" are beginning to appreciate the importance of improvement in grades of stock of all kinds and are taking measures to inaugurate a reform in this important department. The inevitable hog is of course wallowing alongside the huge corn pile, and northern Missouri furnishes some of the finest and fattest specimens in this line anywhere to be found. There is always a cash demand for them and the price ranges from 4 to 5 cts. per pound, gross weight. Some sections of this and adjoining counties are well adapted to sheep, and I noticed on the hilly lands along the streams several large flocks of sheep, apparently in good condition. My friend G. W. Needles, of Albany, Gentry Co., sold his clip of 2000 pounds last week at 18½ cts., unwashed, which I suppose is a fair average for price.

I have visited and spoken in several localities, and although I have not shunned to present the issues of our reform and the facts of Masonry, Odd-fellowship, the grange and kindred orders with great boldness and particularity, yet I have been treated with the utmost courtesy in every instance, and find that here as elsewhere, "they that be with us are more than they that be with them." Bro. Needles is and has beeninde-fatigable in his efforts, and the American Freeman has already done a great work in this part of the State. This paper is deserving of a better support from the friends than it has received hitherto, and is, I believe, destined to make its mark upon the political and religious movements of this whole State.

I have purposely omitted to mention particulars in reference to the meetings and conventions in which I have taken part since coming to this State, preferring that others should report. I may, should there be a need of so doing, review the work in detail at some future time. I would simply say that I have spoken seven times since coming into the State. Have met some of the most fearless, earnest workers I have ever fallen in with. The attendance has been good and the attention marked and respectful, while the most perfect order has been observed at every meeting. Our principal gatherings have been in "court houses," and but few ladies have attended. We hope to correct this omission and enlist the women more fully before leaving the field.

J. P. STODDARD.

LATER—BRO. NEEDLES AS JEHU—POLITICAL ENTHUSIASM AND COMPROMISES—A WALKER AND KIRKPATRICK FLAG.

GRANT CITY, Worth Co., Mo., Aug. 22d, 1876.

DEAR K.—The meetings at Bethany, where I spoke three times in the Court House, were well attended and enthusiastic. As in Mercer, so also in Harrison Co., a full county ticket was put in nomination. The Sabbath was profitably spent with the friends near the home of Bro. Needles, where I preached twice to good congregations. Yesterday the "Bishop," as he is called by the "craft," by way of reproach, brought me, in company with Bro. Cooper, to this place. Of our journey of over eighteen miles of awful muddy roads, and some part of the way through a fearful rain, I might write a sensational article, but suffice it to say that our faithful donkeys, guided by their invincible driver, held on in the even tenor of their way, until we reached our destination on time, as every reformer may depend on being who commits himself to the care of Bro. Needles.

Matters for the evening appointment were a little mixed, but Bros. N. and C. set to work and soon had arrangements perfected for a meeting in the U. B. church, where I met a very respectable and intelligent audience of some 150, to whom I spoke for an hour and a half on the general subject of secretism, but more especially of its religious character. My remarks were apparently well received and arrangements made for farther meetings to-day of a more political cast. It is proposed putting in nomination a county ticket to-day and appointing delegates to the State meeting at Chillicothe.

There is considerable feeling on political question, and the effect of a nomination is greatly feared by some of the politicians. A proposition has been submitted by leading workers to give the American Party one-half the offices in the county, and put on for the remainder of the ticket men who are not connected with any secret society, if they will desist and not make nominations. Friends are now in consultation and results will appear in due time. Bro. Needles' Freeman has done a good work all through this section, and I am glad to find that he is meeting with success in securing subscribers at our meetings. The Cynosure is taken more largely in this than in any other county in the State, and although I have not pressed its claims, I shall be able to swell the list on my return.

One matter I must not omit. Calling this morning at the house of brother Sheridan, whose wife is a niece of Dr. J. A. Bingham, I was shown a "Walker and Kirkpatrick" flag, which the friends had intended to unfurl to-day. The unpassable roads and the drenching rains of yesterday, however, prevented the arrival of the pole which it was intended should be raised to-day, and so the friends are compelled to postpone that part until a more favorable time. The people here mean business and are not to be suppressed or "dough-faced" by compromise or unholy concession to the "ring-power." We return to Albany to-morrow and then to Chillicothe, where, God willing, we shall carry out the programme already announced in our papers.

J. P. STODDARD.

ELDER BAIRD IN GEAUGA COUNTY, O.

ROYALTON, Pa., Aug. 21, 1876.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I send you an account of a course of lectures I delivered in Thompson, Geauga Co., Ohio, on the 9th, 10th, and 11th inst. It is a rough place, and we had a rough time. It was not the common rowdies such as make fools of themselves, but men professing to be the lights of the place. Some of them are Roman Catholics, Freemasons, Odd-fellows, grangers, of the "Brick" Pomeroy stamp of loyalty. The Bible is shut out of the schools there; the class-leader attends lodge in preference to prayer-meeting; the Sabbath-school and all other religious meetings are but meagerly attended, while three secret orders sit every week. These are their gods. If you touch them profanity and devilism abound. The second night of the lectures was of that stamp of behaviour; but the third night was more orderly, thank the Lord for restraining power where restraining grace is lacking. Such characters are ripening for a fearful judgment, deceiving their fellow men, defying their Maker, denying Christ, bringing upon themselves swift destruction; and many are following their pernicious ways, by reason of whom the way of truth is evil spoken of. (2nd Peter, ii.) See the prophecy there. They have darkness there that can be felt. The Lord send them light.

Our Centennial Letter.

Philadelphia, Aug. 16, 1876.

Dear Cynosure.—The Exposition is full of interest to the eye, and the ear hears wondrous additions from those who have seen what one's self has missed. But it is not at all remarkable to miss remarkable sights, they are so numerous. Splendor clogs, and each of the sovereigns of America who visit this palace may now and hereafter easily conceive how the sovereigns of other countries feel when they are in their palaces, amid their luxurious trappings. After all they are but human like themselves, and who among them all have such a great and glorious country as we have? If we have in our first centennial come to the very front among the nations, and are already the peer of any, who shall say what our next Centennial shall have to record? And this word "record" reminds me that there is a record book for visitors names, so that our great big grand children may be able to point to their distinguished progenitors! True, we have only one Indian war on hand, but by that time the Sitting Bulls and progeny will probably be among the curiosities of history. Oh "the poor Indian!" I have only to-day, read t[illegible]ry excellent letter of Bishop W[illegible]ple of Minnesota regarding the [illegible] He is right. They should, like those in Canada be included as amenable to the laws of the land, and have the protection of the regular courts of justice, &c. &c. It is terrible and sad—very sad—to have this precious and glorious era stained by the wrongs perpetrated upon such wretched creatures; as if they were, and because we choose to regard them as "foreign powers," we ostracize and kill them instead of incorporating and taxing them. Let us give them schools, courts, and churches, and the loving hand of brotherhood, then bloodshed would forever be past. As Bishop Whipple says; we may here learn a lesson from our Canadian friends who have no war record with the tribes.

The variety of material things on exhibition, the magical tricks, awful power of machinery &c., and all the charms of the beautiful in art may be regarded as but the type of the equally varied phenomena of mental manifestation which may be met. From our standpoint they would often be amusing were they not at the same time lamentable, and be entitled to respect if they did not demand hostility and protest. The overwhelming evidence proclaims that our country has its human spiders and human flies, in the fearfully delusive enticements which ensnare young men, and keep them enthralled. The wily angler for souls baits his hooks well—lures to the bait and the poor lodge fish is caught! and the other fish are persuaded that the caught one has done well for himself because hooked and in the power of his captor! A thousand phazes of thought are revealed, a thousand ways conjured up for the plausible improvement of mankind, and especially of us the lords of creation, but alas, they but tell of the Spirit of Anti-Christ, they tell of the absence of the spirit of children toward their Heavenly Father, and of the self-sufficiency of human pride. The words are true to-day in an especial manner, "Ye will not come to me that ye may have life." They need no better religion than the lodge. It is, and it is not a religion. The answers vary.

Private Christians who permit themselves to be absorbed by the battle in their own city of Mansoul, have little idea of the wide-spread organizations which are sapping and ruining the foundations of every pillar of our visible civil and religious defenses. It may be necessary, it may be written in our future destiny, that these fortresses shall fall, and that a wide-spread ruin shall be revealed, as terrific morally as our great fire at Chicago. It may be the renewed future shall far excel the present in adaptability to the progress and triumph of our glorious Christianity; but what is our duty, and the duty of every soldier of the cross now? Shall we sleep at our post? Shall we build of wood, hay, and stubble and hope to dwell in safety? Oh children of our Heavenly King, arise, sound the trumpet of warning, and "work for the night is coming."

What is the great want? I would say, it is that the professed believers in Christ let him rule in them, that they verily believe in him as the risen Lord, with all power in heaven and earth, who died for their sins, and was raised for their justification, and whose they now are in every power of soul, and spirit. The supremacy of Christ over them and the exclusion of Christ from the lodge seem to be the most sensitive points, and like some celebrated ones of old, the cry we hear is, "Let us alone." It is, however, now as then. We have some who are "restored to their right mind." One pleasing case came up to-day. A gentleman in a somewhat abrupt way began, like a Mason as he was, asking questions, and I gave the reason why, when I was delighted to hear him say, "Well, I was a Mason, enthusiastic, and second in charge of the lodge, but since I found Jesus I have never been inside of it." We shook hands heartily, and in reply to my question he said he was a Presbyterian. A young man (Baptist) didn't know anything against Masonry, and was intending to join it in the State of Maine. As we were talking another young man came up, an Episcopalian and Mason, who plainly declared the Masonic gospel, that if a man is a good Mason he needs no other religion, and he confessed that in the lodge there was no Christ. I turned to the Baptist as I spoke to the deluded one, who faintly avowed that he did believe in Christ; but too much had been revealed to deny that Christ was not the Masonic Saviour! Could not be, for Jews are members of the lodge, and they crucify him to-day, as they did 1800 years ago, and we have the bewitched modern Galatians helping them to destroy his power. No wonder Paul's terrific denunciation of such delusive teachers was uttered!

This place gives a splendid opportunity for distribution. To-day the first of the tract No. 25 has appeared, and their wings are excellent. So with 24 and 26. I had Honeywell's etc., before. Ronayne's book is a sad pill for some to swallow. They are sadly put to it to make him unworthy of belief. The fellow I heard muttering oaths against Ronayne on one of his lecture nights in Farwell Hall, has been referred to occasionally in proof of Ronayne's being a real person and the 2,000 seeing the exhibition of the degrees is a sad pother to them!

Aug 17th.—I shall need to go to the trunk for more tracts to-morrow. As usual I have had a mixed crowd of visitors to-day. One was a Methodist and a Mason, but a cool one; another a zealous Baptist and a hot defender of the lodge. To one gentleman who said he intended joining the Masons by and by, I gave a tract No. 24 as an antidote. This excellent tract might well be headed, "The two Gospels," as it gives the religion of Masonry and that of the Bible in contrast. A young man who knows Rev. James Williams, and intended joining the lodge, had been recommended to read Williams' sermon first. He took two copies. I have not yet seen the Centennial outside of this the Main Building, and but little of this, but visitors are continually talking of the wonderful sights.

Yours truly, Thomas Hodge.

"R. D. N." Answered.

With much respect and kindness Bro. Post would say he believes it far from being right to be a Freemason, so much so, that there is not gold enough in the U. S. to make him one. He believes also that a man cannot be a true Christian, and be heart and soul intelligently allied to Freemasonry at the same time. Yet he does not believe it sinful to belong to a church whose members and preachers are Masons, even to an alarming extent. There was a wide difference between the Apostolic churches, and the many in them who practiced gross sins. So there is a vast distance between the church proper, of which the M. E. church is a branch, and the thousands who have crept in and love and belong to Masonry. They are not of the church, logically, they are of their father, the devil, and his works they will do. Multitudes in Christian church organizations dance, attend theatres, operas, old folks' concerts, circuses, play billiards, cards, drink wine and beer, visit horse races and other places worse, and this is not confined to one body alone. But when the time comes that the M. E. church shall institute a rule approving of Freemasonry, or that Freemasonry shall never be a bar to membership therein, then we will consider it "inconsistent" to be allied to such a corrupt body. As it is, "let us lawfully contend and fight our passage through."

We are heartily sorry that any church caters to the corruption of rings, and secret societies, and some do this who have a standing rule against them. If I belonged to such a policy church even, it might not be best to separate from it. We belong to a church not to be cradled or lullaby'd but to do hard service, to endure for Christ's sake, to save sinners and build up each other in faith. Point us out a church where there is less objectionable in it, everything considered, than there was in the churches at the time of the apostles, and we will cede everything that is called for in the way of separation. We are not in this world called to build up a church, denominationally, but to grapple with the powers of darkness and gloriously triumph in the order where Providence seems to have placed us. Let them thrust us out, if God permits, for our hatred of iniquity and opposition to all evil, but we can't afford to please Diabolus by a hasty retreat. While we have so many noble brethren standing by resolution after resolution against vile secrecy, we do not propose, nor do we conceive it duty to forsake them, and we have yet to learn that the M. E. church practices Masonry and believes it right to admit Masons as such, as members. Dear R. D. N., "W. Post" would be "consistent."

W. Post.

From a Baptist Brother in Minn.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 2, 1876.

Dear Bro. K:—I am at present preaching in St. Paul. This city is as full of iniquity as cities usually are, but I think iniquity is rebuked less here than in most places, hence it wears an air of great respectability and assurance.

There is one very powerful institution here, and it seems to be the pet institution of the city, sacred, secret! On entering it, they profess to experience the new birth into divine light, they have priests, chaplains, altars, burial service, hymns of praise to a god, and a ritual, and they profess to save the soul. They require all whom they receive to believe in a god whom they invoke to come and preside over their meetings as he presides over similar meetings above (?) to which meetings they say their members go when they die. No mention is made of Jesus Christ in the prayers printed in their rituals; and in reprinting a portion of the Bible in their ritual they leave out parts of sentences where the name Jesus Christ occurs (See 2 Thess. 3: 6, 12). They say that St. John, the beloved disciple who leaned upon the bosom of our Lord Jesus Christ, is one of them. And Enoch, who walked with God, they say, was a very eminent one. They receive none into this institution but able-bodied men, in the prime of life, and well to do in the world, for it costs quite a little sum of money not only to get in but to keep up their standing when in. They say that they have the only true name of God which name they strive to keep a very profound secret, only giving it to those who make great advancement in their society. They hold their secrets very sacred, the penalty for revealing them being death. One of their number, a man who has held high office in the city, told me that if any one belonging to that institution should reveal their secrets he ought to have his throat cut. And there are some persons outside who regard it very sacredly. An editor of one of the city papers, who does not belong to them now, but hopes to join them at some time, says, that if one of their number should divulge their secrets, he ought to have his throat cut. Many preachers belong to it and seem horror-struck to hear me speak against it, and warn me to beware of the judgment for speaking against it.

The pastor of one of the Methodist churches in this city is considered of the highest authority among them. He has been offered the highest office they have in the State, the acceptance of which office he is said to have declined lest it might conflict with his duties to the Methodist church. Some of the business men, professing Christians, very much dislike me to talk to them about this pet institution. Sometimes I think they would rather be in ignorance about it lest their business might be interfered with. Sometimes we cannot keep a clear conscience before God without rebuking iniquity. Sometimes I feel the applicability of that passage of Scripture found in Jno. iii. 6, 12. For I cannot suppose that the institution I have partly described can be any other than a work of darkness. O that God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost, will so breathe upon us that we shall be filled with his Spirit and have clean hearts and clean hands to move against this blasphemous institution. O that the holy fire of righteous indignation may burn against these preachers of unrighteousness, and church members who sustain this awfully black and soul-damning iniquity. We can do nothing without Jesus, but with Jesus we can do greater works than he did. Such men as Antipas of the church of Pergamos are needed.

Yours truly, WM. FENTON.

A Good Letter from the Widow of Elder Stearns.

CLINTON, N. Y., July 27th, 1876.

Dear Editors of the Cynosure:—I noticed in the last Cynosure, in the article concerning Eld. Bernard, something that my husband if living would feel very indignant and probably would answer. I cannot answer it as he could, but it seems as though it ought to be corrected. It is this: "Though thousands have succumbed and gone under the returning wave, though the good Elder Stearns and Pease and Colver, were awed or amazed into silence for years," etc. I speak for my husband at least, that is a great mistake. Mr. Stearns was never awed into silence until he drew his last breath. He was ever bold and fearless after he wrote his first book. When he published his first book Elder Bernard was a lodge-going Mason. Mr. Stearns gave him one of his books. Elder B. said to Mr. S., "Bro. Stearns, I am going home and am going to sit down and answer this book." But when he read it through he said it was God's truth So instead of answering it he wrote and published his "Light on Masonry." Morgan's murder caused such an excitement all over the country that the lodges were all disbanded and Masonry was not fellowshiped in the churches. So after a few years the excitement died away and but little said about it, but as soon as it began to lift its hydra head then Mr. Stearns published other books on the subject, and in all the time since the first he has had those books to sell. He just began to circulate his first books when Morgan was taken. Then the excitement was so great that he (Mr. Stearns) could sell his books as fast as he could hand them out. He was as firm as a rock against Masonry to the last, and would not fellowship it in the church; and now to have such a false statement go out to the world that Elder Stearns was "awed or amazed into silence for years" is very grievous for me to bear; for a more unflinching opposition to Masonry I never saw, and said it made no difference to him if all the world were against him and he had to stand alone. He knew that Masonry was an institution that God hated, and it was enough for him to have His approbation.

Your sister in Christ,

LAVINA STEARNS.

Mrs. Stearns takes our allusion to the silent amazement in which good and fearless Anti-masons looked on while the lodge-serpent was crawling back into power, for much more than we meant by it. We are glad however, that our remark has brought out such a letter. A man could scarcely be less than a fearless Anti-mason with such a wife.—ED. CYN.

Our Mail.

J. L. Barlow, Swartz Creek, Mich., writes:

"I am on the war path again. Spoke here last night for the first time since leaving Chicago. You may expect some 'Footfalls' soon."

Theo. Graefe, Beck's Mills, Holmes Co., O., writes:

"I have received that nice picture, Signing the Declaration of Independence. Every one who has seen it pronounces it a success. I want to vote next Presidential election for Walker and Kirkpatrick, and and must have some tickets."

R. E. Bird, Clayton, Lenawee Co., Mich., writes:

"I believe the N. C. A. is a God-send to this nation, and also to myself. It is lifting a burden from my heart to feel that I have not of necessity to die while my country is sleeping over so many murders and wrongs unpunished and unheeded. My prayer is for the success of this society, especially for the officers, who have so nobly performed their duties, and the editor of the Cynosure who needs, and perhaps has, the grace and courage of a martyr. Who can withhold the expression, God bless Mr. Carpenter for his noble gift and gifts, and all those other noble men and women through whose efforts, under God, the society has so far succeeded?"

E. G. Paine, Prin. Wes. Meth. Seminary, Wasioja, Dodge Co., Minn., writes:

"I like the Declaration of Independence pictures very much. Am going to frame and hang them in the Seminary chapel."

Jane Liggett, Monmouth, Ill., writes:

"This place is famed for learning, morality, and religion, but I am sorry to say it is very much under the power of darkness May God speed the time when light shall shine into these dark places so that men will see their deformity."

W. S. Spooner, Harvey Junction, Neb., writes:

"We contemplate having a State Association formed soon. I could get more subscribers for you but we are in the midst of a terrible grasshopper raid. Corn almost all gone."

Dr. S. L. Cook of Albion, Ind., writes:

"I am well and have been speaking to unusually large audiences in Whitley Co., Ind. This is comparatively a new field and in some neighborhoods had four panthers been let loose they would not have produced more excitement. Why has the State Executive Committee said nothing about our annual State Association. I suggest it be held about the 12th of Oct. Plainfield is the place appointed by Association last fall at Marion. Let every friend be thinking about it."

Geo. Douglas, Holidaysburg, Blair Co., Pa., sends for back Cynosures and tracts, and writes:

"I wish to distribute them and help to root out the cancer worm of Masonry and advocate justice to all mankind."

The value of a careful, persistent distribution of tracts cannot be over-estimated.

John Cassidy, Charleston, Lee Co., Ia., writes:

"I think the cause of Anti-masonry is looking up a little in these parts. Bro. Hinman's lectures have set folks to talking, and thinking, and reading. They have done good."

Thos. Relyea, Watertown, Jefferson Co., N. Y., writes:

"I shall vote for Walker and Kirkpatrick. This city is full of secret societies."

Dennis Baker, Remington, Ind., writes:

"The crops here are poor. Corn about one-third crop. Money very scarce."

Lesson for Sept. 10.—The Excellent Woman.

SCRIPTURE.—Prov. xxxi. 10-31. Commit 25 31; Primary verse, 28.

10 Who can find a virtuous woman, for her price is far above rubies.

11 The heart of her husband doth safely trust in her, so that he shall have no need of spoil.

12 She will do him good and not evil all the days of her life.

13 She seeketh wool and flax and worketh willingly with her hands.

14 She is like the merchants' ships; she bringeth her food from afar.

15 She riseth also while it is yet night, and giveth meat to her household, and a portion to her maidens.

16 She considereth a field, and buyeth it: with the fruit of her hands she planteth a vineyard.

17 She girdeth her loins with strength, and strengtheneth her arms.

18 She perceiveth that her merchandise is good; her candle goeth not out by night.

19 She layeth her hands to the spindle, and her hands hold the distaff.

20 She stretcheth out her hand to the poor; yea, she reacheth forth her hands to the needy.

21 She is not afraid of the snow for her household; for all her household are clothed with scarlet.

22 She maketh herself coverings of tapestry; her clothing is silk and purple.

23 Her husband is known in the gates, when he sitteth among the elders of the land.

24 She maketh fine linen and selleth it; and delivereth girdles unto the merchant.

25 Strength and honor are her clothing; and she shall rejoice in time to come.

26 She openeth her mouth with wisdom; and in her tongue is the law of kindness.

27 She looketh well to the ways of her household, and eateth not the bread of idleness.

28 Her children arise up, and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her.

29 Many daughters have done virtuously, but thou excellest them all.

30 Favor is deceitful, and beauty is vain: but a woman that feareth the Lord, she shall be praised.

31 Give her of the fruit of her hands; and let her own works praise her in the gates.

—Diligence is an ornament, whether in man or woman. It is one of the evidences of life in Christ, for his is an invitation to labor and not to idleness. Slothfulness and Christianity are as wide apart as the poles. Prov. xii. 24; xxii. 29; Eccl. ix. 10; Matt. xxv. 21-30; Rom. xi. 8; xii. 11; Col. iii. 23, 24; Heb. vi. 11, 12.

—Labor ennobles, and never degrades. It was Paul's special boast that, apostle as he was, he ate no man's bread for naught, "but wrought with labor and travail night and day that we might not be chargeable to any of you." Acts xx. 34, 35; Eph. iv. 18; 1 Thess. iv. 11; 2 Thess. iii. 8-12.

—If it be wisdom to provide against the sufferings of winter, and to lay up a store against poverty, is it not greater wisdom to provide for eternity? Matt. vi. 19,20; Luke xii. 33; 1 Tim. vi. 19; Heb. x. 34; xi. 26; 1 Pet. i. 4.

—"She openeth her mouth with wisdom." "Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth, but that which is good to the use of edifying, that it may minister grace unto the hearers." —The final and completing touch to a perfect character is "the fear of the Lord." It is not possible to conceive of one so faultless as the one set forth in our lesson, without that. The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, AUGUST 31, 1876.

MASONRY AND INTEMPERANCE.

Intemperance is a leak which will sink the ship, Society, unless stopped. Freemasonry takes away her compass. Intemperance deprives men of reason: Freemasonry cuts them loose from God. The one is blindness, the other a portion of eternal night. Freemasonry is a false religion, and in substance, the false religion of the earth, viz., Religion with Christ left out. Intemperance is a particular vice under it.

One says, Can a civil, gentlemanly Freemason be worse than a babbling, maniac drunkard?

This argument is a fallacy. It compares opposite extremes. It is like comparing the bloody-handed Mason, with his grip on Morgan's throat, with Silas Wright whom no amount of brandy could make uncivil. The system is complete in one; but the vice incomplete in the other.

But in the word of God, the sin of all sins, the crime of all crimes, is spurious, false, got-up worships, like those of the lodge. Why is this? The old idolatries were often comely and imposing: but there was no Christ in them, as there is not in the lodge. They were therefore, and are the charnel-house of mind. Put Christ out of religion, as Masonry puts him out, and it is a system without a sun: a religion without God, for God is only accessible through Christ.

And as "American slavery was the vilest that ever saw the sun," because it existed in our Christian Republic, for the same reason, Freemasonry is the vilest idolatry on earth.

Paul, in Mars Hill, could have done nothing with those idolators, without first setting up, in their understanding, the idea of God. Had he condemned any particular wrongs, they would have puzzled, "Which God is that against?" But when he marched into their minds the great idea of one rewarding and avenging Deity manifested in Christ, they could then understand and repent of sin, and Dionysius, the Areopagite, and a woman named Damaris, and certain others believed. So, minds muddled by the lies and idolatries of the lodge. are incapacitated for virtue or truth.

As, in total darkness, there is no difference in colors, so in the lodge, there is no moral right and wrong, good and evil. The only wrong taught is disobedience to Masonry, and the only right, conformity to its precepts. But the lodge itself is usurpation and a lie, so that it is not wrong to disregard its dicta. And putting all other religions and laws, true and false, on a level with with each other, it declares them all untrue. For putting lies on an equality with truth, is to put truth on a level with lies, that is, to deny it! Thus moral right and wrong are impossible in Masonry, and that Freemason whose mind is not sunk to that level, is an incomplete Mason. Putting Christ, the light of the world, out of his own moral system, the lodge thus "—— supports its cruel throne

By mischief and deceit,
And drags the sons of Adam down
To darkness and the pit."

THE IMPUDENCE OF FALSE RELIGIONS.

A writer in an Odd-fellow organ thus discourses on the "curse of sectarianism:"

"By the term Sectarianism we do not limit ourselves to its signification in common parlance, but give to it its broader and more comprehensive sense in its application to every subject, whether sacred or profane, ever distilling poison among men, leading to feuds, proscription, bigotry and intolerance."

Only think of a little vile swindle started in a plug-ugly tavern by old Mr. Wildey discoursing thus to the Christian churches of the United States!

"We cannot close our eyes to the sublime beauties and practical utility of that mystic brotherhood, whose high and holy aim is to bring back the relations of man to that close and endearing tie which bound and knitted them together in the present and primitive ages of the world —whose teachings inculcate love for one another, friendship, peace, concord, and good-will toward all men as cardinal virtues, and as essential elements in any worthy offering to the Great Creator—among the benefits of such institutions as Odd-fellowship, its certain tendency to awaken man to the wickedness and absurdity of Sectarianism whether in those sacred or profane, is by no means the least inconsiderable."—Heart and Hand.

A secret clan of men pledge-bound to recognize each other by secret tokens is no sect! No, no. It recognizes Christianity if Christianity will recognize it. But what is the recognition it demands? Why precisely that which Satan demanded of Christ, viz., superiority, pre-eminence. The Odd-fellows religion, though like Masonry, excluding women from equal membership, is a universal religion, ignores all distinction between the children of God and the children of the devil, and so is the religion of man while Christ is a sectary and Christianity a sect!

ARREARS OF BLOOD.

"Every despotic system," said Sheridan in his speech on the impeachment of Warren Hastings, "is twice cursed. While it exists it is responsible for the misery it engenders, and when broken up, as it surely will be, it must answer for the blood and suffering which must follow."

This declaration of Sheridan is strikingly illustrated in Pres. Grant's statement that: "Mississippi is governed by officers chosen through fraud and violence such as would scarcely be accredited to savages."

We give below some facts from Lowndes county and vicinity on which Grant's statement was predicated. They are surely lights "shining in a dark place:"

"It was proven that the town of Columbus appropriated $350 to defray the expenses of armed horsemen from Alabama, who came over on election day, voted the Democratic ticket, and prevented negroes from voting by the display of bowie-knives and pistols. At Crawfordsville, two white men obstructed the window of the voting-place for hours, passing in Democratic tickets and taking Republican tickets from the negroes and substituting Democratic tickets for them. At Dearing, the United States Inspector of Elections was driven out of town. At Trinity, the United States Inspector was kidnapped and held until after election day. Numerous witnesses swore that they were intimidated from voting by threats of violence. R. R. Spears, a Republican candidate, testified as to the killing of negroes on the night before the election, and said: "I knew of nothing the colored people did that would create a riot or disturbance. The City Council paid for the coffins, and paid all the bills for horse-feed, livery, and restaurants for the Alabamians. I believed that if I said anything in favor of my election on the day of election that I would have been killed, from the action of the Democrats. They were all armed with bowie-knives and pistols."

Will some one please send us the addresses of S. Austin of Nebraska and of N. F. Cune of Tennessee who were appointed by the Chicago Convention, members of Central Committee American Party?

—Mrs. Annie Wittenmyer of Philadelphia says in a late temperance journal that "Freemasonry ignores the Divine King and head of the church." And so, Christ being ignored, all influences that flow from him for the blessing of the world in every relation are destroyed or curtailed so far as the lodge has power. Let our noted women speak out against this system that is in every way against their sex.

—The Standard (Baptist), of this city, says of Archbishop Purcell's late proclamation on the school question that "the tenor of his article is to the effect that the Catholics are a distinct people from the American people, and that their allegiance is elsewhere than to our government."

—Rev. N. Wardner, of New York, now on an evangelistic tour through several Western States, does not forget that the Gospel of Christ is a Gospel of true reform, and every real Christian is a reformer, pledged to stand against every system of anti-Christ. So while he labors for holiness and redemption from sin, he does not omit special sins. He lately spoke against the lodge in the Free Methodist church of Coopersville, Mich., and writes to the Wesleyan as follows about it: "Either the truth or the excessively warm evening seemed to render it too hot for some Freemasons present who took their hats and beat a retreat. A handful of gravel was fired in at the door and came rattling up the centre aisle; but aside from this and some derisive howling in front of the church, the evening passed satisfactorily."

—Though myriads of grasshoppers have appeared in western Iowa, Nevada and southwestern Minnesota, the damage done by them is insignificant as compared with former seasons. The Providence that guides all things has directed the flight of these armies of the air so that the burden of their devastation has been little felt. Near Avoca, Iowa, last week these grasshoppers settled so thickly on the track of the Chicago and Rock Island road as to actually stop the trains. A delay of eight hours was made until the hands procured shovels and cleared the track.

—Since writing the above we see from a letter of Theron Palmeter in the Iowa Freeman, that five counties in Iowa and several adjoining in Minnesota, in the extreme western part of those States are sadly devastated, the crops being almost wholly destroyed and hundreds of eggs to the square inch left for another season's ravages. The sufferings sure to be borne by many in this region should be divided among as many as possible. "Bear ye one another's burdens." Let the blessing received by all who gave to Kansas and Nebraska two years ago be again sought.

—It seems that the imprisonment of the whiskey ring thieves in this city is even more of a sham than we have reported. They are not confined in jail proper, but in rooms over the county offices adjoining the jail. In the evening they are said to be free from troublesome jailors or bailiffs. Rehm, the king of the ring, has been seen repeatedly on the streets at night, and spends two or three nights per week at home, returning to jail at an early hour in the morning. Such are the reports of the press, and making due allowance for exaggeration there is no doubt that the imprisonment of these men is a Masonic sham.

—The Kansas State Convention report has just reached us, too late for this number. The meeting was held in Winchester, Aug. 16th, and continued two days. New officers were elected, good resolutions adopted and able addresses made by Rev's. Richards, Loggan, Shepardson, Milligan and others. A political mass meeting after the convention nominated electors, but deemed it unwise to put forward a State ticket at present. The secretary's report next week.

—The letters from Missouri will be read with interest. The campaign preceding the State meeting at Chillicothe, which convened yesterday, was a most successful and cheering one. Nominations were made in several counties and Bro. Needles is full of glory and victory. A full report of the State Convention will appear duly.

—While engaged in these arduous labors, Bro. Stoddard has met with another loss. A brother living at Meadville, near Chillicothe, who has been long the victim of disease, was buried on the 23d inst. May the Lord sustain our secretary and agent in these repeated strokes of his providence.

—Past Master Ronayne started for Missouri on Monday evening to attend the State Convention. He will return to Jacksonville to open the lodge in Strawn's Hall on Monday evening September 4th, before the meeting of the Illinois State Association. He will probably work the three degrees during the Convention.

A NEW PAMPHLET, by J. H. H. Woodward, Seceding Mason. "How to Defeat Masonic Scoundrelism in the Court House," is the title of a 24-page pamplet, written in Mr. Woodward's vigorous style, and showing the extensive research among Masonic records for which his published articles are remarkable. It contains the obligations of the first seven degrees; a list of seded Masons, re-printed from the Cynosure, though that fact is not mentioned; the due-guards and signs of Blue-lodge Masonry. The title may strike some as unduly offensive, but it is true that Masonic arts practiced in the court-house is scoundrelism and villainy. If any asperity is chargeable to this, it cannot be to the book itself, which is a valuable addition to our reform literature. For sale at the Cynosure office, 10 cts. per copy, 75 cts. per dozen, by mail.

A NEW REFORM PAPER.—We give below the official card of the The Olive Branch, which explains itself. No. 5 which has been sent us is an agreeable paper of the tranquil, quiet order. Besides some articles in favor of peace sentiment and advocates, it contains a pleasant home miscellany which must render it acceptable to citizens of Indiana in the vicinity of Richmond. We wish the publisher success.

THE OLIVE BRANCH is devoted to morality, literary and scientific subjects,and all needed reforms. Monthly, one dollar a year in advance.

All ministers addressed, if approved and recommended to their congregations, a copy free.

Address all letters and communications to THE OLIVE BRANCH, Lock Box 1103, Richmond, Ind.

The Sanitarian, for September, is conducted in the best style of the medical art. Its leading articles are written by the ablest physicians of the country. In this number we have Deformities and their Relation to Hygiene, Vital Statistics, Public Hygiene in New York, The Brooklyn Sea-side Home, Shade Trees in City, Sanitary Appliances at the Centennial, Campbell & Co., publishers, New York.

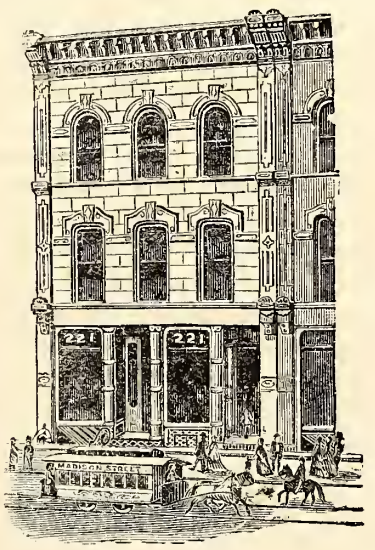
The National Sunday School Teacher for September gives especial attention in its contributed articles to the wine question which comes up in the first lesson of the month. Prof. S. C. Bartlett and Rev. Wm. M. Thayer have written on the question. The first takes the ground that sometimes the Bible commended the use of fermented wines, and the second that it only commended unfermented wine and always condemned alcoholic wines. Both men are total abstinence men, but on this question represent the conflicting opinion of the scholars of the present day. Those who wish to know the pro and con of the matter should read those two articles. Adams, Blackmer & Lyon Pub. Co., Chicago.

Vick's Floral Guide has issued the fourth and last number for the year, with its useful hints about autumn garden work and winter floral decorations. The Guide is published quarterly for 25 cents a year by James Vick, Rochester, N. Y.

READY FOR POLITICAL ACTION.

GLASGOW, Jeff. Co., Iowa.

MR. E. A. COOK, DEAR SIR:—I notice in the last Cynosure, that you wish those who desire to act with the American Party should write to you. In compliance with your request I will say that I am fully ready for political action in favor of freedom. I regard the bondage of the lodge as standing directly in the way of the enjoyment of that liberty consonant with American ideas, and also in the way of all true reform. I believe in standing up for our principles and being counted, when we are wanted as straight-outs in a political party without distinction to creed, or color, or nationality. When as citizens, animated with the spirit of humanity, we are willing to set aside all selfish aspirations and act as voters who believe that a great principle is involved in this movement for reform against all oath-bound secrecy, then will we become a power for good, respected by others, and be able to offer a secure refuge for all who wish and long to be free from the slavery of the lodge. We will then be able to draw all good men and women to our principles and party, and victory will be ours or our children's.



There is in our county quite a large number of most excellent, intelligent and earnest men, understanding and appreciating the importance of the question involved in this reform, who will be "straight-out" if they can have a ticket to vote, who are not spasmodic in this reform, but who will now and always be willing to stand up and be on the side of liberty, who are determined to stand on their rights as citizens and are not afraid of the lodge. But we are mainly farmers living in different parts of the country; we need to have the party machinery got ready for us. I am sure that a State convention, if called at Des Moines or any rail road center, would be hailed with delight. I am ready to attend such a convention and have an electoral ticket.

Yours truly, GEO. HEATON.

THE ATROCITIES IN BULGARIA.—A correspondent of the London News who accompanied a party of English gentlemen in their investigations of the outrages of the Turks, writes thus of the town of Batek which they visited:

On approaching the town, on a hill there were some dogs. They ran away, and we found on this spot a number of skulls scattered about and one ghastly heap of skeletons with clothing. I counted from the saddle 100 skulls, picked and licked clean, all of women and children. We entered the town. On every side were skulls and skeletons charred, among the ruins, or lying entire where they fell in their clothing. There were skeletons of girls and women with long brown hair hanging to the skulls. We approached the church. There these remains were more frequent, until the ground was literally covered with skeletons, skulls, and putrefying bodies in clothing. Between the church and the school there were heaps. The stench was fearful. We entered the churchyard. The sight was more dreadful. The whole churchyard for 3 feet deep was festering with dead bodies partly covered,—hands, legs, arms and heads projected in ghastly confusion. I saw many little hands, heads, and feet of children 3 years of age, and girls, with heads covered with beautiful hair. The church was still worse. The floor was covered with rotting bodies quite uncovered. I never imagined anything so fearful. There were 3,000 bodies in the churchyard and church. We were obliged to hold tobacco to our noses. In the school, a fine building, 300 women and children had been burnt alive. All over the town there were the same scenes. In some places heaps of bodies buried in shallow holes had been uncovered by the dogs. The banks of the little stream were covered with bodies. Many bodies had been carried to Tatar Bazardjik, a distance of thirty miles. The town had 9,000 inhabitants. There now remain 1,200. Many who escaped had returned recently weeping and moaning over their ruined homes. Their sorrowful wailing could be heard half a mile off. Some were digging out the skeletons of loved ones. A woman was sitting moaning over three small skulls with hairs clinging to them, which she had in her lap.

The man who did all this Achmed Aga, has been promoted, and is still Governor of the district. The newspaper accounts were not exaggerated. They could not be. No crime invented by Turkish ferocity was left uncommitted.

Harvest Hymn.

Once more the liberal year laughs out
O'er richer stores than gems of gold;
Once more with harvest song and shout
Is nature's bloodless triumph told.

Our common mother rests and sings
Like Ruth among her garnered sheaves;
Her lap is full of goodly things,
Her brow is bright with autumn leaves.

Oh, favors old, yet ever new!
Oh, blessings with the sunshine sent!
The bounty overruns our due,
The fullness shames our discontent.

We shut our eyes, the flowers bloom on;
We murmur, but the corn ears fill:
We chose the shadow, but the sun
That casts it shines behind us still.

God gives us with our rugged soil
The power to make it Eden fair,
And richer fruits to crown our toil,
Than summer-wedded islands bear.

Who murmurs at his lot to-day?
Who scorns his native fruit and bloom,
Or sighs for dainties far away,
Beside the bounteous board of home?

Thank Heaven, instead, that Freedom's arm
Can change a rocky soil to gold;
That brave and generous lives can warm
A clime with northern ices cold.

And by these altars wreathed with flowers,
And fields, with fruits awake again
Thanksgiving for the golden hours,
The early and the later rain.

Whittier.

Healed by the Prayer of Faith.

Herewith is given a remarkable case of healing of disease by faith in Him who "took our infirmities and bore our sicknesses." The particulars are gleaned from authentic sources:

Mrs. M. A. Burress, a resident of Mansfield, Ohio, was an invalid, bedridden, and for more than nine years unable to even sit up in her bed. Retaining one position so long, her lungs, it seemed, had become strangely affected; and for a space of five years she had not spoken above a whisper. She had tried many physicians, but obtained no permanent relief. The last physician she employed, treated her many months, but gave her no hopes of getting well. He administered but little medicine, except a preparation to induce rest. She became convinced at length that no human power could cure her; and such a conclusion seemed reasonable, for she had tested the skill of thirty-eight physicians.

Prayer-meetings had been held at the house of Mrs. Burress, she being a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, but no special supplications had been made for the restoration of her bodily powers. There seemed to be no hope respecting renewed physical health, and, therefore, the body was passed by. But about four weeks before she was so wonderously restored to soundness, a prayer-meeting was proposed to her to ask the Lord to heal the body as well as the soul. She then laid aside her quieting medicine, and, excepting two occasions, did not take it or any other. Previous to this, she did not rest one night without her usual "rest medicine."

At one of these prayer-meetings, held Sabbath afternoon, October 18th, the prayer of faith prevailed, and the Lord Jesus manifested his power to heal the body instantaneously. I will here quote from a statement of facts, publishd withe Mrs. Burress' consent, and given to the public in two of the papers of her town: "In view of the meeting, and impressed that something was about to be done to her, she had requested her husband in the morning to attach a suitable board to a rocking-chair in such a way that she could recline in it as in her bed. He did so, and lifted her in it; but finding she could remain there but a few minutes was compelled to put her in bed again. Near three o'clock in the afternoon she requested him to dress her and again put her in the chair. He did so; but thought it impossible for her to remain there during the meeting. In twenty minutes from that time, while united prayer was being offered, and united faith claiming an immediate answer, she suddenly leaped from her chair and shouted praises to God for so great a deliverance; nor has she gone back to her bed of suffering and helplessness since, being free from former ailments, and having a good appetite to sustain the physical strength so miraculously given. None who knew her can doubt that it was God, and none other, who raised her up; and she is willing it should be published abroad to his glory, and for the encouragement of his people."

One, who afterward visited Mrs. Burress, states that her step is active, and her voice clear and distinct, although she appears somewhat thin and pale.

Here is a stubborn fact to place against the pliable, convenient theory, or tacit belief, now seeming to prevail, that the prayer of faith, in regard to the sick, was meant for other times and different conditions. This "belief" is a withering hindering, palsying form of unbelief. The broad promises of the Lord to "him that believeth" have not been revoked. The power of Jesus is not decayed, or his willingness lessened. The amazing charters given by Christ to vital faith, have not been annulled. May the Lord help our unbelief! As professed disciples of his, does it become us to disregard these promises; or explain them away; or treat them as practically obsolete? We dishonor Christ by so commonly ignoring the plain direction of his inspired apostle, who says: "Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil, in the name of the Lord; and the prayer of faith shall save the sick; and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed sins they shall be forgiven him."—(James v. 14, 15.)

Christ Jesus is creator of both soul and body. We believe that he is able to cure sin-sick souls in a moment. But why are we so slow of heart to believe that he has power on earth to heal diseased bodies? The land is plentifully supplied with human physicians; and patent nostrums abound; yet there are, apparently, more sick and ill-conditioned people than ever. Does it not seem that the churches of Christ must do again as Christ did—both preach the Gospel and heal the sick? The world would be less a hospital were there less faithless timidity about this Christ-like work of ministering to men's sick bodies as well as their souls. Both are sin-smitten. Ignorance and sin cause most of our sickness. But if we obey God, and follow the teachings of his Spirit that is able to lead into all truth, we shall escape much bodily trouble and overcome physical infirmities to an extent little dreamed of in this age of invalidism drug-taking, and unbelief.

Faith in Christ Jesus will make men well within and without. He has all POWER in heaven and earth. One of the last clauses in Christ's great commission reads: "They shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover."—Western Christian Advocate.

Signs of Spiritual Decline.

1. When we are averse to religious conversation or the company of heavenly-minded Christians.

2. When, from preference and without necessity, you absent yourself from religious services.

3. When you are more concerned about pacifying conscience than honoring Christ, in performing duty.

4. When you are more afraid of being counted over-strict than of dishonoring Christ.

5. When you trifle with temptation, or think lightly of sin.

6. When the faults of others are more a matter of censorious conversation than secret grief and prayer.

7. When you are impatient and unforgiving toward the faults of others.

8. When you confess, but do not forsake sin; and when you acknowledge, but still neglect, duty.

9. When your cheerfulness has more of the levity of the unregenerate than the holy joy of the children of God.

10. When you shrink from self-examination.

11. When the sorrows and cares of the world follow you farther into the Sabbath than the savor and sanctity of the Sabbath follow you into the week.

12. When you are easily prevailed upon to let your duty as a Christian yield to your worldly interest or the opinions of your neighbors.

13. When you associate with men of the world without solicitude about doing good or having your own spiritual life injured.

Dr. Adam Clarke said pithily, "Strong drink is not only the devil's way into man but man's way to the devil."

Household Conveniences Then and Now.

The home life of our forefathers is an exceedingly interesting matter for consideration. It is made so from a knowledge of the wonderful changes which have occurred during the past century; changes which have produced a complete revolution in all the domestic affairs and household arrangements. Those of us whose memory extends over a period of half a century probably have a very correct idea of the character of the homes, and the extent of household convenience, at the time the guns of Lexington startled the colonies as by an electric shock. There are a few of the old houses still standing, some in the country and some in large towns and cities, which have battled with the storms of a hundred years, and now, like the old "one horse shay" of Dr. Holmes, have about them

"A general flavor of mild decay."

These houses in the country were built upon one model almost entirely, the old "lean-to" style. It is not difficult to understand why this plan was a favorite one. It really economized room, and by the low roof gave increased warmth and greater convenience. Our forefathers thought it necessary to construct the frames of their dwellings of white oak, and to this circumstance are we endebted for the continuance of a few of those houses to the present time. It is safe to say that no country dwelling constructed of soft second growth spruce and pine can remain habitable for fifty years, and most of those built at the present time will fall into decay in a third of a century. Nothing can be more perishable and unsubstantial than the cheap modern dwelling-houses which farmers and mechanics are constructing in all parts of the country. Not a fragment of them will remain when the second centennial anniversary comes round.

But we desire to consider some of the immense changes which have occurred in the interior plans and arrangements of dwellings during the past century. In 1775 the science of chemistry had no existence, no special attention had been given to geology, and what was known of botany, astronomy, etc., seems as nothing when compared with the extent and accuracy of our present knowledge. Our fathers were groping in almost utter darkness, so far as a knowledge of the sciences was concerned, and but little progress had been made in invention and the arts; scarcely one of the modern contrivances for cooking, and for warming and lighting dwellings, was known. Not a pound of coal or a cubic foot of illuminating gas had been burned in the country. No iron stoves were used, and no contrivances for economizing heat were employed until Dr. Franklin invented the iron frame fire-place, which still bears his name. All the cooking and warming in town or country was done by the aid of fire kindled upon the brick hearth, or in the brick oven. Pine knots or tallow candles furnished the light for the long winter evenings, and sanded floors supplied the place of rugs and carpets. The water used for household purposes was drawn from deep wells by the creaking "sweep," and it is a curious circumstance that both the well and the building meeting the necessities of a water-closet were often at long distances from the house. In a cold windy night in winter, to be called towards either of them was something dreadful to think of. No form of pump was used in this country, so far as we can learn, until after the commencement of the present century. There were no friction matches in those early days, by the aid of which fire could be speedily kindled; and if the fire "went out" upon the hearth over-night, and the tinder was damp so that the spark would not "catch," the alternative remained of wading through the snow a mile or so, to borrow a brand of a neighbor. Only one room in any house was warmed (unless some of the family were ill); in all the rest the temperature was at zero during many nights in winter. The men and women of a hundred years ago undressed and retired to their bed at night in an atmosphere colder than our modern barns and woodsheds, and they never complained. No hot-air furnaces tempered the wintry air in their dwellings, and they slept soundly in the cold, even after eating heartily of shag-barks or butternuts, and then washing them down with a quart or two of hard cider. The cooking was very simple, and the nature of the food plain and substantial. But few dishes were seen upon the table; pork and cabbage, corn bread and milk, with "bean porridge," were the every-day forms of food consumed. Now this brief glance at the manner of the life of the founders of our Republic suggests thoughts regarding the changes which have occurred during the century, and the question arises, Is life now easier, happier, or more desirable? Judged from one standpoint, it is; from another, it is not. Life, that is, animal existence, it seems to us, was as satisfactory and happy then as now; that is, as satisfactory to those who then lived.—Growing World.

I cannot tell you how happy this service in which I am engaged makes me. Instead of my being the anxious, careworn man as many persons think me to be, I have no anxieties and no cares at all. Faith in God leads me to roll all my burdens upon God. Not only concerning money, but concerning everything; for hundreds are my necessities, besides those connected with money. And in every way I find God to be my helper, even as I trust in him for everything, and pray to him in child-like simplicity about everything. Be encouraged, dear fellow believer, to go this blessed way yourself, and you will see what peace and joy it affords. Muller.

Ballooning at the Centennial.

A friend of the children who read the Cynosure sends them a letter describing the ascension of Prof. King's great balloon at the Centennial:—

Well, I have seen the sight. A veritable buffalo, at least that is what they called it and as usual said to be the largest on the continent. Tied down with many more new cords than was Sampson, the monster vainly plunged and struggled to be free. Then a "dove" and afterward a "vulture" were sent forth into the upper regions, the latter looking like a winged mud turtle as it sped through the sky to spy out the way and see that no ærolite, planet, stray cloud, or evil current of air was to be found.

After struggling to be free for some four hours, puffing, filling and enlarging till not a rib or dent or wrinkle was to be seen in his massive sides, and after bowing east, west, north and south as if he would forget none in his last complimentary adieu, the cords were loosened and the monster ascended heavenward, bearing the celebrated æronaut Prof. King and four or five others in his huge car amidst music and shouts—O such shouts!—from the mighty crowd, waving of flags, handkerchiefs, hats, etc., while the air was filled with a shower of leaflets which the crowd struggled to get as mementoes of his flight.

He was soon out of sight in the clouds and we are told the party propose to continue their buffalo hunt in that rare region of travel and research for several days.

May their curiosity be as fully gratified as was mine by their ascent and much more as their sphere of vision and observation is greater.

Yours truly,

E. S. Cook.

The Century—Development without Parallel. The first century of the United States has been without a parallel in history. The population has increased from 2,750,000 to 44,675,000. The area has been extended from 800,000 to 3,603,844 square miles. The development of agriculture under the pressure of immigration and the stimulus of mechanical invention has been utterly without precedent. The value of manufactures has advanced from $20,000,000 to $4,200,000,000. Foreign and domestic commerce have taken gigantic strides. The marvelous development of mineral resources has not been the work of a century, but of fifty years. There was not a single bank in the colonies in 1776; there are more than 6,000 now. Internal improvements and the common school system have kept pace with immigration. On the threshold of the new century, a review of the national progress is worthy of careful study.—New York Tribune.

Canine Conscience.

"Hath a dog conscience?" quoth the corporal. "I had had this dog for several years, and had never, even in his puppyhood, known him to steal. Nevertheless, on one occasion he was very hungry, and in the room where I was reading, and he was sitting there was within easy reach a savoury mutton chop. I was greatly surprised to see him stealthily remove this chop and take it under the sofa. However, I pretended not to observe what had occurred, and waited to see what would happen next. For fully a quarter of an hour this terrier remained under the sofa without making a sound, but doubtless enduring an agony of contending feelings. Eventually, however, conscience came off victorious, for emerging from his place of concealment, and carrying in his mouth the stolen chop, he came across the room and laid the tempting morsel at my feet. The moment he dropped the stolen property he bolted again under the sofa, and from this retreat no coaxing could charm him for several hours afterwards. Moreover, when during that time he was spoken to or patted, he always turned away his head, in a ludicrously conscience-stricken manner. Altogether I do not think it would be possible to imagine a more satisfactory exhibition of conscience by an animal than this; for it must be remembered, as already stated, that the particular animal in question was never beaten in his life."—Quarterly Journal of Science.

Home and Farm

Darkness or Light.

In the rooms more commonly used, the blinds are kept closed, the slats being turned barely enough to permit the entrance of sufficient light to see to work by. The sunlight is not permitted to enter on any account. Frequently the upper part of the window is covered by an opaque and closely-fitting shade. At the very best, the window is shaded above and the light is thrown in under the eyes or on a level with them.

Now this is not the best for health nor for pleasure. Nature's method is to give light from above and plenty of it. Our windows are usually placed not far from right. If we have them all exposed, the light will all come in mostly at the top, and fall on our work and our eyes from above, as it should. This saves our eyes from many a strain and from premature weakness. Besides this, to work in the light and even in the sunlight, is far more invigorating to the general health than to work in the shade. People hear this frequently. It is iterated and reiterated in the papers continually, and yet we see intelligent women sitting day after day in rooms where it is barely light enough to see to work, and never once letting the direct sunlight into them. The very flies are too sensible to live in such an atmosphere.

The exposed window is far pleasanter also. It gives us in many cases a landscape view like a picture every time we raise our eyes from our work, and that, too, without the trouble of going to the window to look out. It gives us a view of the sky, which we do not get at all, by the ordinary method of draping, and this is one of the brightest and most changing views we have. It gives us an abundance of light for our work. This strengthens the eye. We can hardly get too much of it, unless the sunshine falls directly on our work or on our eyes.

"But these bare windows look staring."

Do they? Well, that depends very much on how you have been accustomed to look at them. Still, if you wish some ornament for the parlor windows, drape them with lace of Swiss.

For the other rooms, let this drapery be only a light frill across the top of the windows. This is very pretty and inexpensive and you will come to like it in time better than the other. From Science of Health.

Diverting Children.

When a child is hurt, never hush its cries. It is inexcusable barbarity; it is repressing its instincts; and for this reason, if physical punishment is inflicted upon a child, it is perfectly brutal. A thousand times better is it to soothe by kindly words and acts, divert the mind by telling stories, by explaining pictures, or by providing it with new toys. We have many a time, says a famous doctor, in our professional experience as to children, found more benefit to be derived from the beautiful or interesting toy than from a dose of physic. The greatest humanity a mother can exhibit to her sick child is to divert it, in all pleasing ways possible. We ourselves, who are larger children, feel sometimes really sick, when a cheerful face and much-loved friend has come in, and before we know it we have forgotten what was the matter with us.

Raising Tomatoes.

Burr tells us that the French mode of raising tomatoes is as follows: As soon as a cluster of flowers is visible, they top the stem down to the cluster, so that the flowers terminate the stem. The effect is that the sap is immediately impelled into the two buds next below the cluster, which soon push strongly and produce another cluster of flowers each. When these are visible, the branch to which they belong is also topped down to their level; and this is done five times successfully. By this means the plants become stout dwarf bushes, not above eighteen inches high. In order to prevent their falling over, sticks or strings are stretched horizontally along the rows, so as to keep the plants erect. In addition to this, all laterals that have no flowers, and after the fifth topping, all laterals whatever, are nipped off. In this way the ripe sap is directed into the fruit, which acquires a beauty, size and excellence, unattainable by other means.—Boston Globe.

This life is full of unsatisfied cravings, and will ever be. But the strong desire for more spirituality can be satisfied, but only by daily persistent effort. We desire a crown of righteousness, which can have but by pointing others to the cross and helping them tread the thorny path. What joy, when we shall have earned the "Well done, faithful servant."

Religious Intelligence

—Rev. N. Wardner, General Evangelist of the Wesleyan Methodist church, reports a great revival work in the American Wesleyan at the camp meeting at Cooperville, Mich. Scores of converts from the world's darkness and as many more blessed with sanctifying grace are the results of this Gospel harvest. Three thousand attended the meeting one day.

—The oldest church building in America erected by English settlers is St. Luke's Protestant Episcopal Church, Isle of Wight county, Va. It was built in 1632. Funds are being raised for its restoration.

—The Baptists first entered Texas in 1835 as missionaries. Their first church was organized in 1837, and the first association in 1840. They have now increased to 65,000 or 70,000, of whom 15,000 to 20,000 are colored.

—The town of Waco, in Texas, has been visited by an extraordinary revival. Among the white Baptists there have been 370 conversions, and among the colored Baptists 200. Other denominations are sharing in the work and fruits of the awakening.

—There are now reported to be 114 Protestant missionaries in Japan. In Kobe a Japanese Christian is chaplain of the city prison. The head of the Normal School for Women in Tokio is a Wesleyan; a Japanese gentleman of high rank is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. A large store has been opened in Tokio for the sale of Bibles and other Christian books in the language of the Japanese.

—The Lutheran Standard notices the laying of the corner stone of a new church in Elida, O., and speaks thus of the pastor whose struggle with the lodge at Lima, has been published in our columns: "The congregation at Elida, of which Rev. A. S. Bartholomew is pastor, has grown in numbers and in fidelity to the Lutheran church and her confessions amid the troubles which have been caused by the Council party in that neighborhood, and contends earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints. Pastor Bartholomew's labors have been signally blessed in that place, and the determination to build a new and more capacious and beautiful house is only one of the indications of the prosperity which the congregation enjoys. May God continue to bless pastor and people!"

—Hon. Wm. E. Gladstone in a recent paper speaks as follows of Presbyterianism. "It has given Presbyterian communions the advantages which in civil order belong to local self-government and representative institutions—orderly habits of mind, respect for adversaries, and some of the elements of judicial temper; the development of a genuine individuality, together with the discouragement of mere arbitrary will and of all eccentric tendency; the sense of a common life, the disposition energetically to defend it; the love of law combined with a love of freedom; last, not least, the habit of using the faculty of speech with a direct and immediate view to persuasion."

THE POSTAGE ON THE CYNOSURE MUST BE PAID AT CHICAGO. It is twenty cents a year.

The cost of postage now depends entirely on the size and weight, and therefore some smaller papers charge but fifteen cents; and others about the size of the Cynosure charge twenty-five cents a year for postage.

If the subscription price of the CYNOSURE was $2.50 or $3.00 a year, the price of many religious papers containing no more reading matter, we might afford to pay the postage ourselves, but at $2.00 a year we cannot do this with our present Subscription list.

Therefore let all send the postage, 20 cents a year, 10 cents for half a year with their renewals.

The commission on one new subscription for a year will pay the postage on your own and the new subscriber's paper. We would rather have the postage paid by commissions than in any other way.

When postage is not paid we shall have to shorten the time of subscription sufficiently to pay it.

News of the Week.

—A branch of the dry goods house of A. T. Stewart is to be established in Chicago.

—The letting of the stone contract for the new Court House by "ring" management is roundly denounced and legal process is not unlikely to overthrow it. One of the contractors is said to be a Freemason able to bribe with the grip as well as with money.

—A terrible condition of things exists in the anthracite coal regions of Pennsylvania. The "Molly Maguires" seem to hold murderous possession and to bid defiance to the authorities. There have been five murders in Scranton alone within a fortnight. Jurors who have convicted members of the society have been assassinated.

—Ex-Governor and Senator Morgan of New York was nominated again for the gubernatorial office last week by the Republicans of that State.

—After six days fighting at Alaxinatz the Turks have been driven from the place. Gen. Tchernayeff has telegraphed to Prince Milan that the Servians have won a great victory, routing the Turks with a loss of 15,000 killed, wounded and prisoners. Thirty-one Russian officers were killed in this battle and the Servian loss was severe. A Belgrade telegram to the London Times says it is "almost certain that the war is about at an end. The Servians are ignorant of the fact that their Government is suing for peace. The news of Tchernayeff's victory is spreading like wildfire, and there is great rejoicing. Success at this time is unfortunate, as it will be made use of by the war party, but it may help Servia to secure better terms. Important diplomatic action on the part of the great Powers, and an armistice between Turkey and Servia may be expected immediately. Turkey will ask for permanent occupation by her troops of certain Sevian fortresses, and a war indemnity.

—A Roman Catholic Albanian tribe has offered its 1,000 warriors to the assistance of the Turks it is supposed on an order from the Vatican. Which shows the temper of that religious body toward the Greek church. It is no more friendly to the Protestant.

The Oaths and Penalties of Thirty-three Degrees of Freemasonry, Compiled by Franklin Paine, Sen., a Seceding Master Mason.

I promise and swear to redouble my zeal for all my brethren, Knights and Princes, that are present or absent, and if I fail in this my obligation, I consent for all my brethren, when they are convinced of my infidelity, to seize me, and thrust my tongue through with a red hot iron; to pluck out both my eyes, and to deprive me of smelling and hearing; to cut off both of hands, and expose me in that condition in the field, to be devoured by the voracious animals; and if none can be found, I wish the lightning of heaven might execute on me the same vengeance. O God, maintain me in right and equity. Amen. Amen. Amen.

XVI. OBLIGATION, PROVOST AND JUDGE.

1st. Secrecy. 2d. Obey all orders and decrees of Council of Prince of Jerusalem. 3d. To justly and impartially decide all matters of difference between brethren of this degree if in his power to do so under of being punished as an unjust judge, by having his nose cut off (or penalty of all the former degrees.)

XX. OBLIGATION, GRAND MASTER ARCHITECT.

Promise of Secrecy, etc., same as former degrees.

PENALTY.

To have hand cut in twain.

XXIII. OBLIGATION, PRINCE OF JERUSALEM.

I———, do solemnly promise and swear, in the presence of Almighty God, the Great Architect of heaven and earth, and of these Valiant Princes of Jerusalem, that I will never reveal the mysteries of the degree of Prince of Jerusalem to any one of an inferior degsee, or to any other person whatever.

I promise and swear as a Prince of Jerusalem, to do justice to my brethren, and not to rule them tyrannically, but in love.

I promise and swear that I will never, by word or deed, attack the honor of any Prince of Jerusalem; and that I will not assist in conferring this degree except in a lawful Grand Council of Princes of Jerusalem. All this I promise and swear, under the of being stripped naked, and having my heart pierced with a poniard. So help me God. Amen! Amen! Amen!

XXVII. OBLIGATION, CHIEF OF THE TABERNACLE.

I———, do promise and swear, never to reveal the secrets of this degree to any person in the world, except he has acquired all the preceding degrees, and then, not unless within the body of a Sovereign Council of this degree of Chief of the Tabernacle, regularly holding its authority from some legally established Supreme Council of the thirty-third degree; nor will I be present, or aid, or assist at the communicating them, unless with the above named authority, regularly obtained. And in case I should violate this my sacred obligation, I perjure myself: I consent that the earth should be opened before my eyes, and that I should be engulfed (swallowed up) even to my neck, and thus miserably perish. To the fulfillment of which may God preserve me in my senses. Amen.

(PENALTY)

XXIX. OBLIGATION, PRINCE OF THE TABERNACLE.

I———, do promise and swear, that I will never reveal to any person in the world whatever, the secrets of this degree of Prince of the Tabernacle; and that I will never confer them, nor aid, or assist in conferring them on any person or persons, by my presence, or otherwise, except under an authority regularly obtained from some Supreme Council of the thirty-third degree, which has been constitutionally established, giving full power so to do.

That I will stand to, and abide by, all the laws, rules, and regulatious which belong to this degree, or may regularly emanate from the Supreme Council of the the thirty-third degree, under which we are now acting; and in case I should violate this sacred obligation, I consent to be stoned to death, (as St. Stephen was,) and that my body be left to rot above ground, deprived of burial. For the faithful performance of which, may the Almighty Architect of the Universe preserve me. Amen.

XXX. OBLIGATION, KNIGHT OF THE BRAZEN SERPENT.

I— —, do solemnly promise and swear, in the presence of Almighty God, the Grand Architect of the Universe, that I will never reveal the secrets of this degree of Knight of the Brazen Serpent; nor, by my presence, aid or assist in revealing them to any person or persons whatsoever, unless the candidate shall have taken all the preceding degrees in a regular manner, nor without a legal authority. I now swear allegiance and true faith. In case I should transgress this my solemn obligation, and thus perjure myself, I freely consent to have my heart eaten by the most venomous of serpents, and and thus to perish most miserably; from which may the Almighty Creator of the Universe defend me! [Kisses the Bible.]

(PENALTY)

XXXI. OBLIGATION, KNIGHTS OF KADOSH.

I———, promise and swear, never to reveal the secrets of the Grand Elect Knights of Kadosh, or White and Black Eagle, to any person. I swear to take revenge on the traitors of Masonry; and never to receive in this degree, none but a brother who has come to the degrees of Prince of Jerusalem and Knight of the Sun, and then only by an authority given to me by a Grand Commander or Deputy Inspector, under his hand and seal.

I promise to be ready at all times to conquer the Holy Land, when I shall be summoned to appear, to pay due obedience at all times, to the Princes of the Royal Secret; and if I fail in this my obligation, I desire that all the of my former obligations may be inflicted on me. Amen. He kisses the Bible and rises.

XXXII. OBLIGATION, SUBLIME PRINCE OF THE ROYAL SECRET.

I———, do, of my own free will and accord, in the presence of the Grand Architect of the Universe, and in this Consistory of Sovereign Princes of the Royal Secret, or Knights of St. Andrew, faithful guardians of the faithful treasure; most solemnly vow and swear, under all the different penalties of my former obligations, that I will never directly or indirectly reveal or make known to any person or persons whatsoever, any or the least part of this Royal degree, unless to one duly qualified in the body of a regularly constituted Consistory of the same, or to him or them whom I shall find such after strict and due trial.

I furthermore vow and swear, under the above penalties, to always abide and regulate myself agreeably to the statutes and regulations now before me; and when in a Consistory to behave and demean myself as one worthy of being honored with so high a degree, that no part of my conduct may in the least reflect discredit on the Royal Consistory, or disgrace on myself. So may God maintain me in equity and justice! Amen! Amen! Amen! Amen!

XXXIII. OBLIGATION, SOVEREIGN GRAND INSPECTOR GENERAL.

I———, do hereby swear, and promise on my word of honor, on the faith of an honest man, in the presence of the Grand Architect of the Universe, and before this assembly, to guard and preserve the mysteries of this degree which has been conferred on me, not only from the profane, but from all of an inferior degree, under the

of all my former obligations; and I consent, if I violate this obligation, to have my tongue torn out by the roots. May God keep me in this, or destroy me. Amen.

LOCATION.

Wheaton College, of which a cut is seen above, is located on the Iowa Division of the Chicago and North-western rail-road in the village of Wheaton. This town is one of the most healthful and pleasantly located in northern Illinois. It contains about two thousand inhabitants; and Congregational, Wesleyan, Baptist, Methodist, Free Methodist and German Lutheran Churches.

INSTRUCTION.

It is the intention of the Board of Trust and the Faculty to make the instruction of this institution thorough in every respect, without caring to develop the merely showy and ornamental, they intend to furnish facilities which will enable young men and women to obtain a solid education in the Classics, Mathematics, Natural, Mental and Moral Science, Music, Painting and Drawing, with Book-keeping and Penmanship.

BUSINESS EDUCATION.—A few years since there was a great excitement regarding Business Education. Circulars were scattered broadcast over the country agreeing to take a boy from the plow and fit him for commercial life in three to six months. These representations, being false and fraudulent, Business Colleges fell into disrepute. The fact remains that a knowledge of accounts is necessary to every business man, or we may say to every man who is truly intelligent. Hence at WHEATON COLLEGE students have the opportunity to acquire a knowledge of Book-keeping and writing and at the same time to study Reading, Spelling, Grammar, and the natural sciences. Terms low. Write for a catalogue, or come at the Opening, Sept. 6th.

DRAWING AND PAINTING.—Mrs. Nutting, formerly of the State Normal School in Vermont, gives instruction in all branches of Drawing and Painting. She is a most successful teacher, and her charges are very low. Students desiring to pursue these studies cannot do better than under her care. For terms write for catalogue or come at the opening of the term, Sept. 6th, 1876.

EXPENSES.

Young Ladies can board in the Building represented above, for one hundred and fifty dollars per year; payable seventy-five dollars at the opening and seventy-five dollars at the middle of the year, and assisting one hour per day in the domestic department. Daughters of ministers and missionaries can have the same privileges for one hundred dollars per year and one hour labor per day in the domestic department. For this sum of money the student has board, tuition, and room during the year. Each room contains bedstead, mattress, pillows, stove, washing utensils, etc. Fuel and lights are furnished at cost. There are also a few families where young ladies dependent on their own exertions can defray a part or the whole of these expenses by assisting in the family work.

Young men board themselves in rented rooms, or rent rooms and board at the College, or have their board in families. They can get along with one hundred dollars a year by boarding themselves; one hundred and seventy-five boarding at the College, and from that sum to two hundred and fifty boarding in private families. In other words the expenses are from one-third to one-sixth part as great as at Eastern Colleges, while the facilities are, in many respects, as good. The tuition is thirty dollars per year in the College classes, twenty-four in the Scientific, Preparatory and English Course. This tuition includes everything but Drawing and Painting, Music and Penmanship, which are extra. For further and definite information see Catalogue.

RELIGIOUS INFLUENCE.

It is and will be the constant endeavor of the Faculty to promote the spiritual as well as the intellectual welfare of their students. While there are no religious tests for admission students are expected to attend some church on the Sabbath and devotional exercises daily in the Chapel. It is also understood that students attending this Institution entirely abstain from Tobacco, Billiards, Cards, Secret Societies and other hindrances to good morals and good scholarship. The efforts of the Faculty in the past to this end have been, by the blessing of God, successful to a great degree and it is hoped may be still more so in the future.

REFERENCES.

There are now nearly one hundred Alumni who are doing credit to themselves and the Institution in the Ministry, at the Bar, in the Schools and Colleges of the country and in other places of responsibility. The Illinois State Association has repeatedly commended it to the confidence of the intelligent public as have Dr. J. E. Roy, Rev. James Powell, Dr. Geo. N. Boardman, Prof. F. W. Fisk, Rev. L. T. Chamberlain, Hon. Wm. H. Bradley, Philo Carpenter, Prof. James T. Hyde, Rev. N. A. Prentiss, Prof. T. W. Hopkins, Jas. W. Scoville, Rev. S. J. Humphrey, Dr. W. A. Bartlett, Hon. S. B. Gookins, Dr. E. P. Goodwin, Dr. C. D. Helmer, Hon. W. W. Farwell, and others.

The Fall Term opens September 6th, let all those who contemplate sending sons or daughters away to school write for a catalogue to

THE CENTENNIAL TRACT WORK

The importance of this work is almost incalculable. Many thousands of visitors at the Centennial hear, for the first time, of the work of the National Christian Association, and we learn both from Elder Freeman and brother Hodge that a great number of those who receive our tracts there are overjoyed to know of this glorious reform movement. Nor are such rejoicings confined to those outside of the lodges. Elder Freeman estimates that considerably more than half of the Freemasons and Odd-fellows who called at our stand were really glad of our movement and many of them declared their approval in unmistakable terms.

A vast number of young men whom the lodge has not yet drawn into its meshes, here receive their first warning against these works of darkness and many of them, we are assured, will heed this warning.

THIS WORK REQUIRES MONEY.

We estimate the total expense for the entire time, including tracts, R. R. fare, board and services of Elder Freeman and brother Hodge at $1,000.00 in round numbers. To meet these expenses we have the following

DONATIONS:

From sundry persons, cash	$179.36
Services Elder Freeman 10 weeks,	200.00
Services Thos. Hodge 12 weeks,	240.00
Philadel'a friends 15 weeks board,	90.00
Expenses connected with getting place at Exposition, all paid by Ezra A. Cook & Co.	150.00
Total,	$859.36

Besides this, E. A. Cook & Co. pay for half the price of the tracts (charge but half price for them).

From this estimate it will be seen that from $125.00 to $150.00 more is needed for this work.

EZRA A. COOK,
Sec'y Tract Committee.

Topics of the Time.

Considerable indignation is manifested by the Protestants in Canada at the final step of the Catholics of Oka in notifying the Wesleyan missionary to the Indians at that place to leave within twenty-four hours. Last year the Catholics pulled down the Protestant church and now they follow with banishment of the pastor. Bishop Gilmour of Cleveland, a most zealous Romanist, not long since made great professions of regard for the free institutions of America, because they secure "universal religious tolerance," and because, "under the constitution, there is no discrimination in favor of creed or church, but all are equal." Now he may practice his good professions in securing the same toleration from the Canada papists or from the Catholic Review of New York which maintains their cause. Very likely the Bishop's statement was meant only to be local and temporary. Will he go to Canada or Mexico and preach this doctrine?

The report that an Albanian tribe of papist adherents had at the instigation of Rome taken part with the Moslems against the Greek Christians of Servia is confirmed by the further statement of sympathy existing between the Sultan and the Pope. The anti-Sclavonic feeling at the Vatican is said to be very strong. There is unlimited sympathy for the Turks, and unlimited detestation of the Servians, and all the insurgents of the Greco-Orthodox creed. This union of the extremes of false religion shows that what some are disposed to think improbabilities may happen, and the union of all systems that virtually ignore or reject Christ as the only Mediator will not be a strang thing in the final struggle with anti-Christ.

The meagre and unsatisfactory results of the Indian war will more strongly direct public attention to the late letter of Bishop Whipple of Minnesota to Pres. Grant. The perpetual fraud, injustice and treachery of the white race toward the miserable remnant of the Indians, under the present method of dealing with them, is reason enough for a thorough change. Bishop Whipple puts the case in plain language thus:

"Here are two pictures: On one side of the line a nation has spent $500,000,000 in Indian war; a people who have not 100 miles between the Atlantic and the Pacific which has not been the scene of an Indian massacre; a government which has not passed twenty years without an Indian war; not one Indian tribe to whom it has given Christian civilization; and which celebrates its Centennial year by another bloody Indian war. On the other side of the line there is the same greedy, dominant Anglo-Saxon race and the same heathen. They have not spent one dollar in Indian war. They have had no Indian massacres. Why? In Canada the Indian treaty calls these men "the Indian subjects of Her Majesty." When civilization approaches them they are placed on ample reservations; they receive aid in civilization; they have personal rights of property; they are amenable to law and are protected by law; they have schools, and Christian people delight to give them their best men to teach them the religion of Christ. We expend more than a hundred dollars to their one dollar in caring for Indian wards.

Anthony Comstock, the representative of the Society for Suppressing Vice, and the victor in many hard-won battles at the East with the desperadoes who fatten themselves by stimulating the vices of the young, has made a raid in the West. At Indianapolis and Des Moines he broke up dens of these foul spirits and handed over their agents to the United States courts for punishment. He seems to have passed by Chicago, and a nefarious agency of this kind was last week ferreted out and brought to justice by the Post Office authorities at Washington in connection with their agent here. Mr. Comstock describes this business as managed in Iowa as of "a horrible character" and suggests that parents are wickedly negligent if they are not better informed of the reading matter put into the hands of their children, and respecting those with whom their children correspond. He touches upon a great weakness of American society. Our families need more centralization, an infusion of the Jewish arrangement, in which, by Divine ordinance, the parents were almost the sole instructors of their children. Were the ideas held by the founders of American principles held firmly by us, their children, social and political curses now overhanging, would never have been known.

WATCH THEREFORE. MATT. XXV. 13.

BY ANNA S. FISK.

In the dusk of midnight,
Neath the starlit sky,
While the watchers slumbered,
Came the welcome cry,
Waken, Zion, waken,
For thy Lord is nigh.

Some of those who listened
Heard with burning heart,
'Tis the Lord who bought us,
He shall take our part.
Glory, for He cometh
Never to depart!

We shall see his triumph
Over death and sin;
In this glorious conflict
Grace and truth, shall win;
Waken, Zion, waken,
For thy lamps are dim.

Banished and forgotten
Every doubt, and fear;
Precious every promise
Fulfilment so near.
Waken, Zion, waken,
For thy Lord is here.

Waken, sleeping Zion!
Shall we plead in vain?
Jesus surely cometh,
He has come to reign;
See his torches gleaming,
On the distant plain.

Waken, Zion, waken!
Now, thou must not wait,
Hasten forth to greet Him,
Ere He reach the gate.
Waken, sleeper, waken
Lest thou be,—too late!

SKETCHES OF SUMMER TRAVEL.

NEWBURYPORT AND BOSTON.

A short ride of about three hours on the cars takes us from Old Orchard Beach, Maine, to Newburyport, Mass. This is one of the old substantial towns of the State, a great shipping port in the olden time, when fabulous fortunes are said to have been made. It still has a Custom house, but its commerce has been declining for the last half century. The population is 14,000. The beautiful Merrimac river, whose waters are so utilized by man, in sustaining the great factories of Manchester, Lowell and Lawrence, here pursues a less disturbed course, and sweeping gracefully past the pineries, and the lower part of the town, gently mingles its waters with the ocean. The town gradually rises from the wharf to High Street, a long avenue shaded with fine trees, mostly elm and horse-chestnut. Here is a singular pond surrounded with trees, and remarkable for its great depth. In nearly all parts of the city, the pure air and grateful shade are most refreshing, and the great number of very large residences, with their tasteful surroundings give pleasing indications of wealth and prosperity. Easy access is had to Salisbury beach, three miles distant by omnibusses, and constant facilities are enjoyed for day and night excursions on the water. The pineries are most lovely places of resort during the warm days, for there one may rest, in the words of the poet,

"Neath the shadows of tall sighing pines,
That in the fiercest noon create a soft,
Cool, cloistered light upon the sward beneath."

This we tasted to our own satisfaction in a very enjoyable picnic, with some of the good people of the place. When sitting on the banks of the Merrimac, and glancing up stream we could almost discern Amesbury, the home of the poet Whittier. One pleasant afternoon, our kind friends took us out three miles into the country to see the recently discovered silver mines. Only one is in successful operation. This one has made in a few months $20,000 in silver, besides the lead and gold found in union with it. The pure pulverized material yields over seven per cent. of gold, over thirty of silver, and 62 per cent. of lead. The most striking object on the wharf is a large building owned by the Philadelphia and Reading coal Company. The coal is conveyed to it in their own iron-built ships, and so complete is the machinery that a cargo of 1,000 tons can be unloaded in a day. The enterprising superintendent of this establishment informs us that pure anthracite coal is found only in Pennsylvania; a few small mines of hard coal, but differing essentially in quality, being found elsewhere. We are surprised at the great number of persons, distinguished both in the literary and religious world, who have had connection either by birth or residence with this place. "There," says our friend, pointing to a beautiful dwelling, back of an extensive green lawn, "is the house where Mrs. Bannister died," (better known as Miss Grant, for so long a time the famous teacher of Ipswich Seminary.) "Here is the residence of the Hon. Caleb Cushing." There Hannah Gould, the poetess, lived and died. Mr. John B. Gough in his early life was rescued from scepticism and probably converted and made his first effort at reform under the teachings of Rev. R. Campbell, who has been the successful pastor of a Congregational church here for nearly forty years. Mr. James Parton, whose recent marriage with the daughter of his former wife (Fanny Fern) has given him so unpleasant a notoriety, is now living here. The old Dexter place is in possession of Mr. Corliss, the inventor of the famous steam engine, now attracting so much attention at the Centennial. His Puritan grit was displayed in the remark he made when the Sabbath question was under consideration. "If they do open the exhibition on the Sabbath my great engine shall not run." The lover of relics when here, always finds his way to the old church on Frederick street, where the veritable bones of the Rev George Whitfield have lain, we can hardly say in quiet repose, for one hundred and six years. In this church he preached at many different times, his first sermon being delivered at the age of twenty-six, just thirty years before the day he died here. At that time this church has an average attendance of two thousand persons. There were two large galleries extending round three sides of the house. One of these had been removed, and the ceiling and pulpit lowered, though the latter is still reached by an ascent of seven steps. As we gazed at the empty skull, and the bones lying loose, above a mass of black mould, we almost wished that like the bones the prophet saw in the valley of vision, bone might come to its fellow bone, and muscle, sinew, flesh and spirit return, and the magical voice again resound through these walls, and through our country, rousing the dormant energies of the church, and leading awakened sinners to the Lamb of God. But why should the dead arise? Let us rather pray that the energies of the living may be vitalized by the Spirit of God, and accomplish the work so much needed to be done. A marble cenotaph on the left of the pulpit is erected to the memory of Mr. Whitfield, with a lengthy inscription. We listened to a very good orthodox sermon in this church on Sabbath eve on the subject of the Sabbath. We can hardly imagine how a dull and lifeless preacher could speak over these bones.

Having spent a delightful week in this place enjoying the kind hospitalities and Christian intercourse of friends, reluctantly we take our leave, and in a few hours are in the city of Boston. Here as elsewhere the weather is pronounced unprecedentedly warm, but we find a cool, delightful breeze stirring on the common and the shade of the elm trees as grateful as ever. Walking over the hill, where an unfinished monument to the soldiers stands, we find our way into the public garden below, and spend an hour walking and resting alternately as we view the beautiful displays of nature and art combined, in this lovely place. The burnt district next claims our attention, and we find it covered with some of the most magnificent buildings in the city. The Old South Church, at whose doors the raging fires ceased their work, looks still more antiquated than ever, and covered from base to tower with inscriptions supplicating aid to save it from threatened demolition, is an object of uncommon interest and sympathy. We enter — the seats and pulpit are all removed. A century plant twenty-five feet high and having a thousand buds and blossoms, occupies the place of the former, hidden from public view by canvass, an entrance fee of 25 cts being required. At the close of the second week of exhibition $250.00 had been received from this source. Only one more week remains, as the flowers are fading. This is ouly one of the expedients resorted to for raising money. As the ladies have the matter now in charge, we trust they will be successful. We copy one of the many inscriptions that everywhere meet the eye. "Napoleon turned his Simlon road aside to save a tree. Cæsar had once mentioned: Won't you, turn a street or span a quarter of an acre to remind boys what sort of men their fathers were? W. P." We will also add another quotation from Wendell Phillips' oration of June 14th, and with that close this letter. "Let these walls stand if only to remind us that, in those days Adams and Otis, advocates of the newest and extremest liberty, found their sturdiest allies in the pulpit; that our Revolution was so much a crusade that the church led the van." Leipzig and its University.—III.

BY PROF. H. A. FISCHER.

After this historical sketch it may be a relief to take a stroll through the city as it now is, and study some of its interesting features.

A promenade taking the place of the ancient wall passes completely around the original city. By walking southward on this promenade, from its N. E. corner, a small park is passed with shaded walks and a "Schwanenteich" (swan pond) where swans swim and fountains play in Summer. In the Winter this pond is a favorite skating rink of the Leipzigers. The new theatre, one of the finest buildings in the city overlooks the "Schwanenteich." As in other German cities, the theatre and opera are very popular; frequently on cold winter evenings (especially on Sunday's) long rows of men and women patiently freeze and wait for the doors to open. The theatre fronts on the Augustus Platz, the handsomest square in the city. The large post office, the museum, the Augusteum, and the Pauliner Kirche (the last two belong to the University), also face this square. The Pleissenburg occupies the S. W. corner of the old city. Its large round tower was formerly used as an observatory; but a new one was erected in 1861, under the direction of Prof. Bruhns, who still has charge of it. This is one of the prominent observatories in Europe and its efficient Director is well known to European and many American astronomers.

The oldest church building is the Nikolai, which with its curious towers and its pottery shops around the base looks decidedly antiquated. Another old church is the St. Thomas, where a fine choir of men and boys sing motets every Saturday afternoon to crowded audiences and a minister reads prayers immediately after to a great many empty seats, and a dozen hearers. The old "Rathhaus" is a very interesting building with its four-story roof; and the "Gewandhaus" is well known to the musical world through its concerts which were conducted by Mendelssohn in his day, and through the Conservatory of Music where many Americans complete their musical education. Inside of the promenade the buildings are old, tall and gloomy. There are only a few streets, but a number of narrow alleys and covered passages. In the newer parts of the city which extend all around the promenade, the streets are wider and more regular, the buildings more modern, but equally tall. Real estate owners realize the fact that there is plenty of room overhead, so they build four or five story houses and quadruple their rents. The first story (and sometimes the second) is generally used for business purposes. Higher up most of the 107,000 inhabitants arrange themselves in layers, according to their means, for the nearer heaven the cheaper the rents. The large door by which the dwellers of each house have communication with the street, is locked at 10 p. m., and they are shut off from the rest of the world till morning.

In passing through the streets many interesting sights will be noticed. Woman bears her share of the burdens of life, and apparently the "better half." It is a somewhat rare occurrence to see men carrying heavy loads; women, with large, heavily loaded baskets on their backs, are seen on every street. If there is snow on the ground Droschken drivers are out with their sleighs. They stand behind their passengers and amuse themselves cracking immense whips which make noise enough for a pistol. When there is no snow the different varieties of conveyances afford an interesting study. Dogs, goats, donkeys, men, women, cattle and horses draw carts varying in size from a toy wagon to a street car. Frequently a team is half human and half canine. Workmen, whenever they can, form groups. Bricks are tossed from hand to hand to the top of tall buildings. Three or four men attack a little woodpile together. Sometimes women are seen drawing their saws as vigorously as their male companions.

The question of woman's rights has little thought from either sex. She has the right to work with her hands; to sit in the market-place by her vegetable stand, to sell goods in the shops, and, if she is married, to take care of the children and wait on her husband. Among the wealthier classes she has the additional privilege of wearing fine clothes, attending the theatre, and going into society. There are numerous exceptions to every general rule, but even educated ladies are surprised that their sisters in America should have or ask for more. One "Fraeulein" who teaches German, understands English, and is well informed generally, was astonished to learn that some wives in America would permit their husbands to get up in the morning to build the fire. She declared that if she had a husband she should do all she could to help him rise in the world, and if they could not afford a servant she would build the fires herself.

The Germans are as industrious as any class of people in the world, but the work must be nicely adjusted to rank, among the upper classes. Rising in the morning to build fires and rising "in the world," seem quite irreconcilable to the German "Dame," and the "Herr" shares her prejudices. A young theological student, while he was boasting of the great attention of the Germans to ladies (as compared with the less gallant Americans), declared he would be ashamed to be seen carrying a bundle in the street. Frequently a man and woman can be seen walking together, she carrying a heavy basket or a heavier baby, and he smoking a pipe or cigar. Occasionally even, well-dressed men will carry the baby, but such sights are rare. When they do occur, the couple may turn out to be Americans.

There are several hundred Americans in the city generally. The University attracts some: the Conservatory still more. Others are with friends, and others are here apparently only for the sake of being abroad.

Quite a number meet every Sabbath in the American Chapel (a room in the 1st Buergerschule) where services are conducted by American ministers or theological students. The pastor, Rev. S. J. Curtiss, Jr., and his wife will be gratefully remembered by their countrymen for their work in connection with the chapel, and their hospitality at home.

American students are treated with the greatest consid ration in the University, even if they have not learned the noble art of "kneiping," and do not carry the scars of half-a-dozen sword duels in their faces. Some German students seem quite proud of their disfigured countenances and unlimited capacity for beer, but the better class of students, as well as the professors, discourag these practices. The latter believe in enjoying social intercourse, however, and once or twice a year do so on rather a large scale. They arrange a "Professorium" in a public hall and invite some of their friends, a sprinkling of students among the number, to enjoy the entertainment. It is a full dress occasion, especially for the wives and daughters of the professors. The order of exercises is as follows: An address listened to with as much attention as the circumstances will permit; supper with wine and toasts, after which those who wish, dance; others adjourn to the smoking room where professors and students smoke clay pipes, while those who care for neither of these things, look on for a time and then go home.

At supper each professor provides for his own table and with his wife, (if he has one), entertains those whom he has invited. The toasts are accompanied with "Hoch's" and jingling of wine glasses. The writer endeavored to join in with an empty glass, but the professor's wife objected; he proposed water, but that, she said, was too cold, so he was compelled to "look on," and be called a "Unitarian," by the hostess and a "Quaker" by the host. They were none the less attentive in their hospitalities, however, on that occasion and afterward.

A young American minister earned a different compliment by his temperance principles on another occasion. Having declined both wine and cigars, his host in amazement exclaimed, "Sie koennen nicht trinken; und sie koennen nicht rauchen! Was koennen sie denn?" (You cannot drink, and you cannot smoke! What can you do then?)

Few cities can boast a better and more complete educational system than Leipzig. Numerous kindergartens open their doors to the little ones as soon as they are large enough to walk there. When they are old enough to learn their A. B. C.'s, they are promoted to the "Buergerschule," and afterwards the boys can enter the "Gymnasium," or "Realschule" and the girls the higher "Tochterschule." After completing the respective courses in the Gymnasium or Realschule, the young men are examined for the University, where they might almost spend a lifetime without exhausting the stores of instruction that can be had in the several departments.

The following statistics, taken from the catalogue for the Winter Semester of 1875–76, will give some idea of the importance of the Leipzig University:

	Theo'l Fac'y.	Law Fa'y.	Medical Fac'y	Philos'l Fac'ty.
No. of Prof.'s	12	17	24	63
No. of Docenten (Tutors.)	2	2	16	24
No. of Matriculated Students.	337	1130	428	1030

Besides the above, 107 persons have attended lectures without matriculating. The whole number of instructors is 160, of students 3,032. Of the students 2,575 are natives of the German Empire, 274 of other European States; 76 of States outside of Europe (63 from the United States). Europe, Asia, Africa, N. and S. America, are all represented.

I cannot tell you how happy this service in which I am engaged makes me. Instead of my being the anxious, careworn man as many persons think me to be, I have no anxieties and no cares at all. Faith in God leads me to roll all my burdens upon God. Not only concerning money, but concerning everything; for hundreds are my necessities, besides those connected with money. And in every way I find God to be my helper, even as I trust in him for everything, and pray to him in child-like simplicity about every thing. Be encouraged, dear fellow-believer, to go this blessed way yourself, and you will see what peace and joy it affords.—Muller.

Masonic Testimony Invalid.—A Dangerous Element.

BY A. OLDFIELD.

1. a. No man charged with crime should be regarded as a material witness in proof of his own innocence, because he is an interested witness.

b. But every man should be held as innocent until he is proved guilty by disinterested witnesses.

c. Therefore interested testimony should always be regarded as invalid and inadmissible.

2. a. No testimony in any court should be regarded as valid in any case where the witness is interested in the question at issue, or has previously committed himself under oath to one side of the question.

b. But in regard to the good or evil tendencies of Speculative Freemasonry, its members are all interested witnesses, and all previously committed under oath to "always hail, ever conceal, and never reveal" any of its secrets or crimes.

c. Therefore, no Masonic testimony, either in or out of courts at law, which involves the interests of the craft or any one of its members, should be regarded as valid or admissible in any case.

3. a. All fraternities or parties of men, whether claiming to be citizens of the United States or otherwise, but living under the laws and jurisdiction of this government, who arrogate to themselves a right to organize secret combinations of men, and to exercise the functions of legislative, judicial, and executive authority, and also claim a right to bind all who may become members of said fraternities in perpetual allegiance to a code of secret laws of which the candidates at the time of initiation know nothing; by oaths and penalties which are extra-judicial and wholly unknown to the laws of a republican government or the laws of God, should be regarded as dangerous institutions that should be suppressed by law.

b. But Speculative Freemasonry not only arrogates to itself a right to organize petty secret government wherever it pleases within the jurisdiction of this United States government, make its own laws, hold its own nightly secret courts, but also a right to bind its own members in perpetual allegiance and secrecy to its own laws, by oaths and penalties unknown to any civil or Christian government.

c. Therefore, the institution of Speculative Freemasonry, and all similar institutions whose governments are founded in perpetual secrecy, should be regarded by every honest citizen as dangerous elements to the perpetuation and maintenance of republican government, and should be suppressed by legislative and judicial authority.

A Thesis.

Editor of the Cynosure:—I would propose, through your columns, the following thesis, for the consideration of all who are interested in preserving our religion from the taint of pagan arts and practices.

Resolved—That those ministers of religion who suffer members of their congregations to remain in the superstitious belief that Freemasonry is as good as Christianity, if not better, either have not sufficient knowledge of Christ and his Apostle St. Paul to expound the Holy Scriptures, or they neglect the most solemn duty incumbent upon their sacred profession.

If any reader of the Cynosure regards this thesis as improper in any respect, or as one the discussion of which Christian preachers could reasonably object to, I would be greatly obliged to him to state wherein he so regards it. Should not church-goers themselves require their preachers to examine this thesis, and decide upon it in the affirmative, or else be regarded as particeps criminis with their preachers in corrupting the faith?

Church Reform.

Catholic Orders in the United States.—The Jesuits entered Florida in 1565, Maine 1613, and Maryland in 1634. The Franciscans came in 1528, and the Dominicans in 1539.

The Carmelites entered California in 1602, and the Augustinians came to the United States in 1790. The Lazarists, Redemptorists, and Passionists Congregations of regular clerks have all commenced their labors in this country in the present century. The Benedictine and Cistercian order of monks; the former dating back in antiquity, 1,300 years, was introduced into the United States in 1846, and the latter in in 1803. The Cistercians are represented by its severest form—that of La Trappe. The Trappists have two abbeys, one in Kentucky and one in Iowa.

As regards the religious orders of women, we have houses of all the sisterhoods, the Sisters of Charity, established in the United States by Mother Seton in 1809, the Sisters of Mercy of St. Joseph, Sacred Heart, Little Sisters of the Poor, and others too numerous to mention.

For the instruction of boys, the Christian Brothers, Brothers of Mary, Xavierian Brothers, and other communities.

The Archbishop of San Francisco is a Dominican; the two successive Bishops of Buffalo have been Lazarists; the first Bishop of New York was a Dominican; and in Philadelphia Bishop Egan was a Franciscan, and Bishop Neumann a Redemptorist; and the present Bishop Gross of Savannah, is also one of that order. The Vicariate Apostolic of Kansas is governed by Bishop Meige, a Jesuit, and Bishop Fink, a Benedictine.

A tart temper never mellows with age; and a sharp tongue is the only edged tool that grows keener with constant use.—Irving.

Religious Intelligence.

—The Shorter Catechism has been translated into Japanese.

—It is said that during the past year two thousand and forty-three French Catholics in Montreal abjured the papal religion.

—There are 792 Protestant Episcopal churches in London, and of these 211 have daily service, 240 have free seats, and 144 are open for private prayers.

—Buddhism in Japan is declining. In a single district or ken seventy-one temples have since 1873 been converted into dwelling-houses or used for other secular purposes. During the last six years upwards of 600 temples have thus been diverted from their original object.

—The "Century of Gospel Work" gives the following as the increase of ministers in the leading Protestant denominations of the country since 1776; Methodist from 20 to 20,453; Baptist from 370 to 19,517; Presbyterian from 140 to 7,954; Congregational from 575 to 3,233; Lutheran from 25 to 2,662; Reformed German from 25 to 623; Reformed Dutch from 25 to 476; Episcopalian from 250 to 3,140; Moravian from 12 to 75. There are altogether about 60,000 clergymen in the United States.

—The Wisconsin Synod of the Lutheran church is about undertaking a mission among the Indians (for which Rev. Mr. Drewes, of Hermannsburg, has offered his services) and the establishment of a Synodical Publication House.

—Bishop Whipple recently confirmed twenty-four Indians at the White Earth Reservation, and ordained two full-blooded Chippewas to deacon's orders. The latter surprised all who were present at their examination by the extent of their Scriptural and doctrinal knowledge. They have been in training for the ministry over two years.

The Missouri Campaign.

Albany, Mo., Aug. 24, 1876.

I am here in the "sanctum" of the Freeman with Bro. Needles and his corps of earnest workers around me. Each one is doing something, for there are no drones in this hive. The influence emanating from this office reaches to the uttermost parts of the State and far beyond. The man at the head of this paper seems to have been raised up for his special work. Bro. G. W. Needles was evidently born for a leader, and has, in the Providence of God been placed on the pioneer corps, where he can neither be intimidated by threats, influenced by flattery or bribes, or silenced by all the malice, hate or persecution of the lodge. He knows no such word as fear, and rain or shine, hot or cold, and I may almost say sick or well, he is ready for an encounter with the "Sir Knights" or any of the white-aproned crew and never comes off "second best." He knows men at sight, and knows others about him only those upon whom he can rely. It has been my good fortune to spend a fortnight with this brother on this field, and I have learned much and enjoyed myself hugely.

The meetings thus far held in this State have been a decided success, and this is one of the most encouraging fields I have ever visited. There are few "dead-heads" here. Every man has opinions of some kind and is ready to advocate and defend them with his might. I spoke here last evening in the court house, and am to attend and take part in three meetings to be held at the same place to-day. I have spoken from one to three times per day, Sabbaths not excepted, and have had little opportunity or strength to give to the secretary work or to the special Centennial fund. I trust, however, after the State meeting at Chillicothe, to be on duty at the office and do what I can.

J. P. Stoddard.

Chillicothe, Mo., Aug. 30, '76.

Dear K.—This is a hot time in these parts, with the thermometer at 96 in the shade. Last evening we had a full house and good order while I spoke for two hours. This, the 30th, is the first day of the political convention proper, and much business has been done, although some of the delegates came in late in the forenoon. The convention organized by choosing Elder Geeslin, chairman, and G. W. Stewart secretary. A committee was then appointed on nominations, and reported recommending the following names:

For Governor, Wm. Beauchamp, Livingston Co.

Lieutenant Governor, Wm. Love, St. Clair Co.

Sec'y of State, J. W. Thompson, of Dade Co.

Treasurer, L. Allen, of Harrison Co.

State Registrar of Lands, J. F. Briggs, Henry Co.

Attorney General, D. D. Fisher of St. Louis.

State Auditor, P. F. Stoddard, of Linn Co.

Railroad Commissioners, W. Barker, Scotland Co.; S. Skinner, Livingston Co., and G. Kelley of Adair Co.

STATE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Wm. M. Castell, Princeton; G. W. Needles, Albany, T. R. Shimer, Caldwell Co.; Phil. Parker, Benton Co.; Henry Fry, Worth Co.; E. Booth, Harrison Co.: and A. W. Geeslin, Livingston Co.

ELECTORS.

1st District, J. Taylor; 2d,———; 3d,———; 4th, C. F. Obermeyer; 5th, ———; 6th, M. B. Witmer; 7th, Charles Barnett; 8th, James F. Fort; 9th, J. Beauchamp; 10th, L. Raymo; 11th, S. D. Darly; 12th, A. D. Thomas; 13th, G. V. Bohrer. At Large: E. G. Cooper, L. D. Ambrose, T. R. Shimer, J. O. Prindale, and J. Raney.

Ronayne gives the first degree this evening, and it is now time to go to the Hall. Bro. M. R. Britten is here from Wisconsin.

In great haste, J. P. Stoddard.

Kansas State Convention.

The Kansas State Christian Anti-secrecy Association met pursuant to the call of the President, H. A. Bell of Peoria, in Winchester, Aug. 16th, 1876, at 9 A. M. The President being absent, Rev. F. M. Spencer of Leavenworth was called to preside as temporary chairman, and open the meeting by reading a portion of Scripture and prayer.

After disposing of some preliminary business, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President, Rev. H. T. Besse, Peace, Rice Co.

Vice-presidents:

Rev. F. M. Spencer, of Leavenworth.

Rev. J. A. Richards, Fort Scott.

Rev. J. S. T. Milligan, North Cedar.

Rev. R. Loggan, Lecompton.

Rev. H. A. Bell, Peoria.

Secretary: Rev. J. Dodds, Winchester.

Assistant Secretary: G. L. Shephardson, Topeka.

Treasurer: C. A. Sexton, Topeka.

The committee on resolutions reported the following:

Believing that secret oath-bound societies are, in their spirit and nature, essentially antagonistic to both church and state and society at large; therefore:

Resolved, that it is the imperative duty of the church of Christ to exclude from membership, and from sacramental privileges, all who refuse to sever their connection with such organizations.

Resolved, that every American citizen should discountenance all secret societies as dangerous to our free government, and a prolific source of the corruptions and frauds practiced from the Cabinet down to the lowest offices of trust.

Resolved, that we regard the influence of the said secret orders to be highly injurious to the moral characters of their members; and we would exhort them to sever such connection in order to a more intimate union with Christ.

Resolved, that, depending on God for his blessing, our only hope of permanent reformation rests in a thorough exposure of the inherent vices and disastrous tendencies of such societies.

There was a lively, earnest, and somewhat protracted discussion on these resolutions, after which, they were unanimously adopted.

During the session of the Convention interesting and eloquent addresses on secret orders were delivered by Rev. Messrs. J. A. Richards, R. Loggan, G. L. Shephardson, J. S. T. Milligan, and others.

The Executive Committee was instructed to arrange for two State Conventions during the ensuing year, and to appoint the first one at North Cedar, in Jackson county.

The Secretary was instructed to have an abstract of the proceedings of this Convention published in the Winchester Press, Kansas New Era, Sickle and Sheaf, Leavenworth Times, and Christian Cynosure.

The business of the Convention was continued with unabated interest throughout two days and evenings. The cause of anti-secrecy is gaining strength in Kansas, and is beginning to attract attention.

A mass meeting, separate and apart from the Convention, was called, and nominated Presidential electors for the State of Kansas. It was deemed advisable not to nominate a State ticket.

Notes by the Way from the Illinois Agent.

Aug. 31, 1876.

Dear Bro. K.—The extreme hot weather, the Morgan county fair, and the political meetings, have interfered somewhat with my work. Nevertheless, something has been done. I have lectured once and preached twice in the Free Methodist church in Jacksonville, and have given one lecture in the Methodist church in Chapin, and one in Bethel; each to a full congregation. There are but few Masons, and a good many Odd-fellows at each of these places, and the I. O. O. F's. as usual, felt a warm sympathy for the A. F. & A. M's. They ventured on no denials, but professed in a general way to believe that I was a liar, etc. One brother told us that Odd-fellows only expended from 12 to 15 per cent. of their funds for running expenses, and the rest was all benevolent. I referred to the fact that their semi-centennial statistics showed that they had received in fifty years forty millions of dollars and only paid out for relief thirteen million. But he said that the other twenty-seven millions were accumulated funds either loaned out or in the treasury. Would it not be a great relief to our depressed finances if they would pay out this vast amount?

The Methodist minister at Bethel had never been an Odd-fellow and did not belong to the Masons, but said he knew enough of both these orders to know that I had said many things which were untrue. What these things were he declined to say. He was very sure, however, that I knew nothing about Masonry or Odd-fellowship, as I did not belong to those orders. He did not stop to explain how it was that he knew that my statements were false.

Yesterday and to-day Bro. French and I have spent in Jacksonville, a beautiful city of twenty thousand inhabitants, renowned for its institutions of learning and multitude of fine churches, but terribly lodge-ridden. Last night we partook of the hospitalities of a Christian minister, who, but a few years ago, took seven degrees in Masonry. He told us that he had a fine set of Masonic regalia which he had been trying to give away. He said he was willing to sell his entire stock in Masonic knowledge for a nickel, but thought the buyer would be badly cheated in the bargain. He said that as for any moral improvement from joining the lodge it was like bleaching white linen in a tan vat.

He also told us the following amusing story: A young Presbyterian minister applied to be made a Mason in the lodge of which he was a member. He was accepted and came seven or eight miles on horse back one cold night to be initiated. He was "duly and truly prepared" all but the cable-tow. Just then one of the stewards picked up a piece of old iron, and remarked that he thought they ought not to heat it as hot as usual, for the young man would have to ride home. The poor fellow was terribly frightened, and breaking out of the building he mounted his horse and rode home in semi-nudity.

I don't think one R. A. brother is as good a Mason as he used to be, but I hope he is a better Christian.

Yours for the Lord,

H. H. HINMAN.

SENECA COUNTY CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

This organization, opposed to secret societies, with Rev. E. Tripp as as its President, and H. Baldridge Esq., Secretary, met on the 19th inst., in a semi-annual session, in front of the Presbyterian church in Romulusville, Seneca Co., N. Y., under the shade of some beautiful maples. A good attendance and marked interest cheered the friends of the cause. A large load of people came some twelve or fourteen miles from Seneca Falls. Rev. A. F. Dempsey, formerly of this counry, but now pastor of the Wesleyan church in Eagle Harbor, addressed the forenoon meeting, and L.N. Stratton the afternoon. These were sandwiched by an excellent collation, served up under the shade of the trees to all who would remain, amounting to about two hundred people.

The afternoon meeting was interrupted by the dash of a much needed shower.

Two services held in adjoining neighborhoods on the next day—Sabbath—supplemented the Saturday meeting, and gave us hopes of promise for that beautiful region and intelligent people, which we scarcely dare as yet to syllable into words. God willing we mean to see them again. —Wesleyan.

Correspondence.

OUR CENTENNIAL LETTER.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 24, 1876.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I send a few subscriptions again, most of them for short time. In threshing grain there is the chaff and wheat mixed. The winnowing process will leave you some good, sound, new friends, whose zeal will, I hope, win others to this cause.

This is a very busy day here owing to an invasion from New Jersey, which, added to the usual number of visitors, crowd the passages, wide and extensive as they are. There is so much else to see that these Jerseyites give our stand only a passing gaze.

This morning a gentleman conducted past our stand some Chinese youths who are being educated in this country. I gave their conductor a history of the N. C. A. and an Anti-masonic scrap book, and tracts to each of them.

Judge Zearing, of Chicago, and Rev. James Matthews, of this city, both of whom are warm friends to the cause, called yesterday. Also Mrs. Beekman, of Byron, well known to you all.

AUG. 28th.—As usual, Saturday (26th), was a very busy day because the admission fee is but half price to all on Saturdays. The tracts are going off very fast. I have many very interesting conversations and discussions with those who stop at our stand.

The question of all questions for discussion with Freemasons is: "Is Freemasonry a religion?" and it is amusing to see the great variety of opinions expressed by different members of the order. An elderly gentleman asserted that he had been a Mason for 20 years and it had done him no harm—it did much good and exercised Christian charity. This at once brought up the question as to the religious character of the institution. He boldly asserted that Freemasons acknowledged Christ, doubtless having taken the Knight Templar degree, which does mention Christ, yet he well knew that Christ's name is even there blasphemed, and that in all the former degrees he is entirely ignored. Another man, who called soon after, curtly asserted: "No man's a Mason who believes in Christ," and off he went. I followed to say that he was contradicting another brother. He accounted for the contradiction by saying that he had taken higher degrees than the other man.

Probably half of the fraternity will deny that it is a religion at all, as a Baptist brother did, yet he admitted their religious ceremonies and deplored the fact that these ceremonies were frequently conducted by men whom he knew to be irreligious. Others boldly say that Masonry is a good enough religion for them and this is particularly the case with ungodly men, who have no Christ and want none. Some of them seem honestly desirous of convincing me of entertaining erroneous views of their "benevolent order." I met with such a case this evening. I handed a gentleman some tracts just before leaving the building which led to an animated discussion, which, as we took the same street car, was continued all the way home. He maintained that the eighteen-degree Mason, whom I have referred to, was ignorant ("not a bright Mason") while he claimed for himself a full knowledge of the subject, as he is now Worshipful Master of a lodge. He declared his high respect for Christianity, although not a member of any church, but was greatly exercised about the inconsistencies of Christians, which are indeed deplorable. I tried to set before him the Lord Jesus as our great example, and as he declared his own rectitude of life, I referred him to the case of the rich young man who came to Jesus. For the self-righteous, Christ has no message. He calls "sinners." There is always unrest in those who are conscious of sin and this man seemed really desirous of knowing the truth. The next day another, boarding at the same place as this man, called to discuss the same question. As I was very busily engaged with others, I handed him tract No. 26, "Freemasonry a Religion," and before I could talk with him he was gone. I had a call from Rev. Mr. Smith (Baptist) from Wheaton, and an interesting conversation with him. As you know, he takes a correct stand on the subject of secretism. Rev. A. B. Hubbard, of whose hospitality and zeal in this cause Elder Freeman has informed the readers of the Cynosure, and also Mr. Higginson, a former Wheaton College student, cheered me by a call. A lady, to whom I gave tracts, called again to get more to distribute among her neighbors at home. She had read them and liked them. Many young men, especially ministers of the Gospel, who have not yet been swindled into the lodge, seem very glad to get the information furnished concerning secretism. I have just had a call from a young minister of this class.

In contrast with his frankness and candor was that of a sleek young gent whose impudence and assumed air of wisdom was so amusing that I could scarce keep from laughing in his face. His conclusion was in these words, "Ah, well, you had better join the lodge and then you will know." Freemasons are sadly put to it to justify the language quoted from their own books in tracts No. 24 and 26.

Aug. 21st, 1678.—Your parcel, several numbers, came to-day and will answer a good purpose. I have found the usual characteristics in visitors to-day, as they talked on the great topic. Ronayne and others were traitors, therefore could not be believers, and they were not, therefore had not spoken the truth! Masonry is and is not a religion, but don't interfere with any. It is a religion, therefore man needs no other! Christ is not named in the lodge, said one Mason. Will you put that in writing, I asked. He said, "No occasion for that, but I say it." I told him that was precisely what we said, that it was a religion without our Christ, and as we did not wish any one to think we misrepresented Masonry, we would be glad to have his authority for the statement he had made. This, however, he declined to give, and so every one who comes along may affirm of his Masonry whatever his own fancy may have painted it. It has no Mediator between God and man, no Christ. It has not THE WAY to the Father, but teaches a worship of the Great Architect of the universe. If the way is Christ, how shall any of his professed followers dare to ask God's blessing on the dark deeds of Masonry in their secret brotherhood of men who may be deists? The Jew or the deist is more consistent than the Christian. The result is told in the oft-repeated tale of a cold church and a decaying spirituality in its members.

One of my fellow-boarders tells me the following story as of his own knowledge, which occurred to a friend of his. A certain Mason in a Southern State, hired a colored man to murder a brother Mason and burn his house. The colored man was so alarmed that he told the contemplated victim, who then held some office, to obtain which, was the object of the contemplated crime. His friend was very naturally highly indignant and threatened prosecution, but as no suit was ever brought before the courts, or if brought, he believes that the lodge smothered the crime and defeated the punishment which ought to have reached the criminal. The public attorney was also a Mason. The case was one of considerable public notoriety. My informant is an educated man who daily uses his Greek and English Testament, and is a member of one of our leading denominations. This event occurred about four years ago.

Yesterday afternoon I attended the mammoth Sunday-school of Mr. Wannamaker, the head of one of the largest clothing houses here, one of which is the building in which the meetings of Moody and Sankey were held, covering about two and a half acres. The school is now in connection with the Presbyterian church of Rev. J. Russell Smith, and had an attendance of, in all, 2,942. Two galleries are occupied and the people locked out took refuge in the church where the lesson was also elucidated. Wannamaker is an excellent specimen of a lay worker for Christ. He is a fluent, easy and attractive speaker, and his warmth is like that from the glow of the anthracite, rather than from the flame of the pine. About 150 members were added to this church as the result of Moody's preaching here. In the morning I had the pleasure of hearing Prof. Loos, of Bethany, Va., in the church of Christ or Disciples, and in the evening attended at a very fine Baptist church which had a magnificent organ, and the text was one to every Christian may respond, Amen. It was, "Neither is there salvation in any other," etc.

cution of his fathers with feeling and zest, pleased to have a willing listener even for a few minutes. What a fine verse that is (John iii. 16). I send a copy of the pamphlet containing it in 163 languages. There is a great Masonic procession here to-day down town and the attendance at the Centennial is small in consequence. Yours truly,

THOS. HODGE.

How to Go to the Centennial.

SEEMLY, Ill., Aug. 28, 1876.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—By your permission I will drop a few lines through the Cynosure to the friends of our cause respecting what I heard and saw whilst en route to the Centennial and return.

I left home Monday morning, Aug. 7th inst. Took train at Hoopeston for Lafayette, Ind. Before we arrived at the latter city I supplied all the male passengers of our coach with tracts. This I tried to do in a quiet and inoffensive way. Among those that received tracts were the Rev. John L. Smith, D.D., of the M. E. church. He left his seat in the rear of coach after I was seated and touched me on the shoulder and inquired if I was the one who gave him the tract. I told him I was. He then invited me in a gentlemanly manner to go back with him and occupy a seat with him for the purpose of conversation on the subject. By the way, I will say that I was well acquainted with him when I was a boy and often heard him preach and delighted to hear him talk. He has often called and rested for the night at my father's house and partook of the good things that my mother would prepare and spread upon the table, including delicious biscuits and johnny cakes that my mother knew then and knows yet just how to bake. But to the conversation. I saw at once he belonged to the "mystic order" as he refused to answer many questions, alleging as a reason that I was not a Catholic priest and not a proper person to confess to. He said, however, he had but little if anything to do with the order. But said I, "Are you known and recognized as a Mason?' Said he, "I am!" He wanted to buy Ronayne of me. I told him I could not sell it on the train as the right to sell books belonged exclusively to the newsboy. I finally gave him a copy. He said when he was stationed at the city of Terre Haute, Ind., Mrs. Wm. Morgan also lived there, that he often visited her and said that she had been married again; and when her husband, who was a Mormon and resided at Nauvoo, Ill., left with the Mormons for Salt Lake she refused to go but went to Terre Haute as before stated. He said the conversation with her often turned upon the death of her husband and Doctor Smith said at no time would she admit that the Masons killed him (though she did not deny it) but in almost every case when asked, Did the Masons kill your husband? her reply would be she had no better friends than the Masons. This may be the fact in one sense as the order were without doubt anxious as much as possible to wipe out that wretched affair. Who knows but this same Doctor of Divinity was the agent, as he would and could be the least suspected, to take her money and valuables as agent for the lodge and hence she had no better friends than the Masons in that sense, although they had murdered her husband and made her children orphans. These are simply my suggestions. I may not have given the exact words used by Rev. Mr. Smith though I have tried to give the substance of his statements. I told him I should use his name. At first he objected but finally he said he had no particular objections. I am not without some hope that he may secede entirely yet. I told him it was behind such men as him that the lodge delighted to hide. Why not, friend Smith, "come out from among them" and not be any longer a partaker of their sins?

In going to the Centennial, in the daytime I scarcely passed a station but what I put my head out at the window and supplied those standing on the platforms with tracts. They were generally well received as I gave them out always with a pleasant remark. In many cases they would rush for the tracts like half grown ducks after dough. In no case was I abused. I kept up the handing out of tracts on the way home also and found a number—quite a number—of strong friends of our cause which otherwise perhaps I would never have known. That alone paid me for distributing the tracts. Let every Cynosure reader get a supply of tracts and try it also.

Found Mr. Hodge at the Cynosure book stand in the Main Centennial building and believe he is doing a noble work. One man at my boarding place seemed to take an interest in me and gave me his hand. I could not resist the temptation to give him the "grip." He thought I was genuine, but I was only "bogus"—possibly I was "genuine" and he was "bogus".

Last night a gentleman, Mr. Jackson of Crawfordsville, Ind., a man who travels extensively, stopped over night with me. He reports he never had before even heard of the movement against the lodge, although Mr. Kiggins and others have lectured all around him and possibly in Crawfordsville also. How still, like death, lodge men keep about it and yet they say we are helping them all the time! Mr. Jackson now takes the Cynosure.

We have every reason to believe that ere many years the lodge will lose its power even if it don't tumble. Let the day be hastened.

A Visitor on the Centennial Work.

PITTSBURGH, Pa.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I visited Elder Freeman at the Centennial, and found him discharging the duties of his arduous but honorable undertaking with faithfulness and zeal. As I approached his stand my heart thrilled with more real pleasure than when I beheld the most gorgeous display of the great nations of the earth.

It is very small, only a mere speck in that vast building; but nevertheless, the venerable reformer has been doing a work there which will be felt not only in his own day and generation but surviving these will spring up and bear flowers and fruit when another Centennial opens up a new era in the history of this nation.

During my visit the Elder was fiercely attacked by one of the "sons of darkness," to whom he offered a tract. The assailant was soon forced to take refuge behind the adjacent cases, which seemed most admirably adapted for this purpose. It was exceedingly refreshing to witness this struggle between light and darkness, and to hear the withering and cutting words of truth hot from the lips of the reformer. I question whether the work can be so successfully carried on in his absence, and therefore hope soon to hear of his return, for he seemed to possess all the necessary qualifications for laboring in that important field. Of him it may justly be said:

"Like Knox of old he onward sped
Still foremost in the van,
He did not quail beneath the foe,
Nor fear the face of man."

What is Perjury?

YATES CITY, Ill., Aug. 21, '76.

MR. EDITOR:—Since writing to you on the subject of Masonic keys, the book referred to in that letter has been sold to the Secretary of Yates City lodge for a good round price, and he ridicules the idea of its taking three or four days for me to read it, and says he can read it in three or four hours. Dr. Marsh says he can read it in less time than that. But my object in writing to you at this time is to give you the legal definition of the crime of perjury. When I was attending the Circuit Court of Knox county last February I heard the Hon. James McKenzie, formerly States Attorney in and for Knox county make a speech in defense of a man who had been denounced as a perjured scoundrel on account of testimony that he had given in a civil court. Said he, "Gentlemen of the jury, a person may swear falsely and still not be guilty of perjury, but he cannot commit perjury without swearing falsely. Four things are necessary in order to constitute that crime: first, the witness must swear falsely; secondly, his testimony must be material to the matter at issue (as for example a witness may swear that his grandfather was a cousin of George Washington, and not be guilty of perjury, because it does not make a particle of difference whether such statement is true or false); thirdly the person administering the oath must have authority according to the laws of the State to administer oaths; and fourthly, the person administering the oath must have jurisdiction of the subject matter under consideration."

Now, Mr. McKenzie is a Mason, and probably under different circumstances he would contend that perjury consists in the violation of a Masonic promise of secrecy. But I would like to have him or any other Mason inform me what authority a W. M. has for administering cut-throat oaths, and and would also like to be informed whether a W. M. would be permitted to inflict the penalty of a violation of such an oath. W. H. ROBINSON.

Freemason Holiness.

W. C. Neal, a prominent member of the Methodist Episcopal church at Caledonia, Ohio, professing holiness, holding a high office in the Freemason lodge, has been found out in his past dishonesty and forgery. He has signed the names of his father-in-law and brother-in-law to notes for large sums of money, and also other names. He was taken by the proper authorities and feigned himself sick with a dreadful pain in his head and eyes, and had his head bound up, and rolled and groaned and sweat like a man in full labor in harvest time, all day; so that the officers could do nothing with him, and at night they turned him over to his Masonic doctor to see him die and transfer him over to the grand Freemason lodge where all the good Freemasons have the promise of protection and eternal life. But alas! when morning came he had not been conveyed to heaven nor to hell, but to Canada.

Our Mail.

A. J. Simmons, Clarence, Cedar Co., Ia., writes:

"I live in the very hot-bed of Masonry. For ten years the Masons have had control of both religion and politics. This whole community has been under the ban of Masonry as the Christians were in the days of the inquisition No man would even dare say Masonry in public here. There seems to be a mortal fear resting on the minds of the people, and it is my candid opinion that this is one of their strong points, to operate on the minds of the people through fear. Take for instance, the editor, the merchant, the professor, the lawyer, the doctor and the preacher, all are afraid that if they say a word against secret societies it will injure their business. But since I have been taking the Cynosure and distributing it people are less afraid and are beginning to talk and discuss freely the subject of Masonry. I had a discussion last winter with a prominent Mason. He justified all the secret societies from the Thugs of India down."

J. Pixley, Hudson, Mich., writes:

"There are many who would like your paper but everything is controlled by Masonry and whiskey. May God speed the time when the dark dens of iniquity shall come to naught and the light of the Sun of Righteousness shine into every heart."

John Ross, Rossville, Vermillion Co., Ill., writes:

"We have had quite peaceable times in Rossville since the Masons got over their shock caused by Mr. Ronayne'e exposing their tomfoolery last winter."

Mrs. M. A. Gamble, Birmingham, Oakland Co., Mich., writes:

"I thlnk the American party platform just the platform for the times, and what the country can only venture to stand upon morally. It should have a wide circulation. When the constitution of these United States shall be so amended that it will assert the duty of national allegiance to Jehovah as ruler over the nations of the earth and Redeemer of mankind then Christians can ask God to bless our land, and that she may yield her increase."

G. W. Rose, Guthrie Center, Iowa, writes:

"I do not feel as though I can get along without the Cynosure. To me it is a feast of fat things. I am battling with all the might that I have against the hydra-headed monster of secrecy. I believe its father is the devil, who is our common enemy, and to come off conquerors we must maintain the right in unity."

S. P. Poole, Bellevue, Eaton Co., writes:

"Those pictures, Signing the Declaration and the Declaration, are very fine and give good satisfaction. They are valued by many at from $2 to $5."

Elmer Bryan, Mt. Union, Stark Co. O., subscribes for the Cynosure and writes:

"I want to read up before election, as I get my first vote this fall and it shall be 'American.' "

We believe the American platform will inspire enthusiasm in all rightminded young voters.

G. W. Hott, Staunton, Va., writes:

"There is a powerful anti-secrecy element in the Shenandoah valley of Virginia, and yet it is increasing, and ought to be developed more fully. Rev. G. W. Howe has delivered some telling lectures."

This is good news from Virginia.

C. A Schulze, a Lutheran pastor, Sugar Grove, Fairfield Co., O., orders several books on Odd-fellowship, Masonry, etc., and writes:

"I have to contend with these fellows and must arm myself well, as you know."

Let all ministers do likewise.

J. S. Rice, N. Pownal, Cumberland Co. Me., writes:

"I consider the Cynosure the most reliable and most important paper to be read by every person, that is published in the country."

The Sabbath School.

LESSON FOR SEPT. 17.—A GODLY LIFE.

SCRIPTURE.—Eccl. xii. 1-14. Commit 8-14; Primary Verse, 1.

1 Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them;

2 While the sun, or the light, or the moon, or the stars, be not darkened, nor the clouds return after the rain:

3 In the day when the keepers of the house shall tremble, and the strong men shall bow themselves, and the grinders cease because they are few, and those that look out of the windows be darkened,

4 And the doors shall be shut in the streets, when the sound of the grinding is low, and he shall rise up at the voice of the bird, and all the daughters of music shall be brought low;

5 Also when they shall be afraid of that which is high, and fears shall be in the way, and the almond tree shall flourish, and the grasshopper shall be a burden, and desire shall fail; because man goeth to his long home, and the mourners go about the streets:

6 Or ever the silver cord be loosed, or the golden bowl be broken, or the pitcher be broken at the fountain, or the wheel broken at the cistern.

7 Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was: and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it.

8 Vanity of vanities, saith the Preacher; all is vanity.

9 And moreover, because the Preacher was wise, he still taught the people knowledge: yea, he gave good heed, and sought out, and set in order many proverbs.

10 The Preacher sought to find out acceptable words: and that which was written was upright, even words of truth.

11 The words of the wise are as goads, and as nails fastened by the masters of assemblies, which are given from one shepherd.

12 And further, by these my son, be admonished: of making many books there is no end; and much study is a weariness of the flesh.

13 Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man.

14 For God shall bring every work unto judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good or whether it be evil.

God asks no unreasonable thing when he demands that children shall remember him in the days of their youth. He gave for us a price; not of corruptible things, such as silver and gold, but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot. He who has a right, and might well compel, asks for our service. Ps. ciii. 2, 3; cxvi. 12, 17; Is. lxiii. 7; Luke xvii. 17, 18; Rom. xii. 1; xiv. 7, 8; 1 Cor. vi. 19, 20; 1 Pet. i. 18, 19.

An unlovely, unloved, and unloving old age is the sure and bitter fruit of a selfish, sinful life, while an old age that is attractive to look upon, with all the juices of life ripened into sweetness, is just as surely the product of an unselfish Christian life. The Christian shall go from strength to strength, but there shall be no peace for the wicked. Sooner or later, in time or eternity, will every soul be compelled to say with Solomon, that the whole duty of man is to "fear God, and keep his commandments." To the Public.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:

Permit me to say to the public through the medium of your widely circulated and valuable paper, in response to numerous enquiries I am receiving, that I have never issued a number of the "Mah-Hah-Bone," a paper which I had in contemplation last winter. The reasons are: first, that it was the judgement of the very best friends of the Anti-masonic cause, that such papers could not be sustained unless at the severe cost if not the imperilment of the Cynosure itself, and secondly, because the prospectus for the paper expressly stated: "The Mah-Hah-Bone, will not be issued until subscribers enough have been secured and pledged to justify its publication and make its continuance an assured fact." Enough subscribers could not be secured, nor were pledged, and consequently no paper appeared nor will for the present appear. Not less than 2,500 would have answered to begin with, and not one fourth that number was forthcoming. Here the matter rests and must rest, until affairs take a turn, and the times and cause require and will sustain more articles for Anti-masonic thought than at present exists.

My time however, has not been unemployed; I have prepared two Anti-masonic pamphlets, and have a third in contemplation. One is now given to the public and entitled, "How to defeat Masonic Scoundrelism within the Court House." Inside of three weeks, the first edition of 1,000 copies has been completely exhausted and of the 2nd edition of 2,000 copies not yet out of the bindery, 975 are already disposed of. The demand is increasing and the pamphlet is sought after by the regular trade—although quite unusual with Anti-masonic literature generally. Nearly all the book stores and news-stands in Cincinnati are openly selling the pamphlet and the Masons are very wrathy about it. It strikes their ring arrangements in a tender place. It overturns the beauties of the institution and is well calculated to raise a tempest in the Masonic tea pot. I was successful in getting the pamphlets onto the Ohio and Mississippi, Hamilton and Dayton, and Marietta rail road trains, where not less than 1,000 copies per week would have been publicly sold, but the Masons got them retired from the roads, but were not successful in stopping the sale in the city at the book stores and news-stand, although they made the attempt. The miscreants are as unwilling the outside public should receive light as were the old slave-holding oligarchy that the negroes of the South should be taught to read and write. I am informed by a gentleman at Elkhart, Indiana, that he intends to use the pamphlet for impeaching Masonic jurors, etc., in a cause between himself and a Mason, which he expects to be tried soon. Let the fights take place in the Courts and public will soon get their eyes opened as to what kind of an institution Masonry is—that field is a very important one to cultivate, quite as much so as the political or religious, and I feel a strong disposition to see it properly attended to. In this connection it is proper to add that the name and address of every seceded Mason in the United States, now living, should be promptly reported to the Cynosure for publication, so if occasion arises then testimony may be taken to prove the nature, character, &c., of the Masonic obligations, in contests arising in the Courts between Masons and non-Masons. The day is at hand, in which it behooves the public to purge both bench and panel of all that pertains to Masonry. The duty cannot be longer postponed. Respectfully,

J. H. H. WOODWARD.

Levington's Key to Masonry.

This is Rev. Mr. Levington's last, and in the judgment of its author, best work on Masonry. The contents of the first chapter are as follows:

The contents of the Eleventh chapter are thus startling:

"Knights of the Golden Circle—Graphic account of them by a seceding Knight, and remarks thereon, showing the identity of the order with Masonry—Quotations from Sir Walter Scott."

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 7, 1876.

ARCHBISHOP PURCELL.

From 1836-7 I was nine years pastor of the Sixth Presbyterian church, Cincinnati. At that time Bishop Purcell was building the huge cathedral on 8th street. He was a member of the school board, Cincinnati, aud made flaming speeches in praise of the free schools of that city—the first, since that time, to cast out the Bible.

He applied to an Austrian "Society for Propagating the Faith" for money for his cathedral, and assured them that his pillow was nightly wet with tears, mourning over the twenty-four colossal temples of anti-Christ, (i. e. the school houses) which were perverting and sending to hell the children of Roman Catholic families. His Austrian letter was written in English, translated into German; and getting into print the Tracys of the N. Y. Observer turned it again into English and published it. Chas. G. Hammond of the Cincinnati Gazette, printed the portion of his letter denouncing the "twenty-four colossal temples" (school houses) which he was bepraising at home, and to whose school board he belonged, and called on Purcell to rise and explain.

Next day the Gazette contained a curt note from him, saying in contemptuous tone and language, that it was sufficient for him to say that he was not the writer of the German letter or the English translation! This was true; as he wrote in English and his letter was translated twice, once into German and once again into English.

His cool fraud and falsehood was exposed and he withdrew from the school board. Had any Protestant minister been guilty of such wicked deception and hypocrisy, or had even a member of Congress done it, it would have sunk him. Yet this and the like have made Purcell an Archbishop.

The Ohio elections were made to turn on excluding the Bible and hostility to the free schools, and the Democrats failed to carry the State. This arch-deceiver appears again in the arena as follows:

"For years the attitude of the Catholic church toward the public schools has been either knowingly or ignorantly misrepresented. By the press and in the forum, in the halls of legislation and in the pulpits of Protestantism, the atholic church has been falsely and foully accused of designing the destruction of the common school system. With the faint hope of making our voice heard above the loud din of slander which meets us on every hand when the school question is discussed, we beg leave to state categorically the position of the Catholic church in relation to the common schools.

1. The Catholic bishops and clergy have no intention whatever to interfere with your public school system. Build as many schools as you wish; we will never say a word against it, and we will leave to yourselves the care of your own children."

Now, per contra, read the following from his own organ, edited by his own brother, The Catholic Telegraph, Cincinnati: "It will be a glorious day in this country, when under the laws of justice and morality, our school system is shivered to pieces."

Cardinal McCloskey's Catholic World, Aug. 29th, 1875, says: "It is our duty to oppose the pagan error that the State is master of education. The church alone is endowed with power to educate the young."

The Freeman's Journal, also Roman Catholic, says, Dec. 11, 1868: "Let the free school system go to where it came from—the devil. We want Christian schools and the State cannot tell what Christianity is."

Volumes might be filled with similar extracts from priests, bishops, and papers devoted to Rome and Jesuitism.

And yet Archbishop Purcell's official statement that the Romish church is not opposed to our free schools will be quoted on the stump this fall in Ohio, and strangest of all, its author be treated by the religious and political press, not as a common liar, but as a gentleman and a priest.

But the time will yet come when Christ who was the TRUTH shall yet reign on the earth and all iniquity will stop her mouth.

METHODIST REUNION.

The Methodist Episcopal church was formed in 1874, substantially as at present constituted, a preacher's government, consisting at the time of humble devoted men who were ultra reformers, set by their founder, Wesley, against the world's spirit and the world's evils. Of distillers, Wesley had said, in a volume which every preacher must read and embrace, "They murder his majesty's subjects without stint. They drive them to hell like sheep." Coming to this country, Wesley said to the slave-holders of Georgia: "Your lands, houses, furniture, all that you have, is covered with blood," and his sentence, "American slavery, the vilest that ever saw the sun," has become an American proverb, and the Methodist Discipline was set square against the system.

In 1845 Bishop Andrews had become a slave-holder by marriage and refused to emancipate. And although in 1836, the General Conference at Cincinnati censured Orange Scott and George Storrs for praying at an anti-slavery meeting in that city, nine years discussion had made the slave-system so unpopular that the Conference dared not justify Bishop Andrews' slave-holding, nor did they dare condemn it, for fear of a Southern secession. They took a middle course and caused two secessions, North and South. They left Andrews a Bishop but gave him no work, leaving him to look on like the fifth calf in the fable. This action was based on no known principle, human, divine, or Satanic, but it doubtless pleased Satan as a complete ignoring of Christ and his code.

In 1868, the General Conference at Chicago, on petition of L. C. Matlack and others, rescinded their censure of Scott and Storrs, long after the men were dead, and five years after the fall of slavery by Lincoln's proclamation.

Now, in 1876, ten commissioners, five from the old church and five from the church South, have met at Cape May in New Jersey, and agreed on terms of mutual recognition preparatory to reunion. They dispose of the slave-holding, rebellion, Ku-Klux, White League, color line,—everything in short which involves error or sin, or holiness or justice in connection with the slave question, in the following naive and gentle words:

"It is not to be supposed that in respect of some matters of mere opinion, all ministers and members of either church will be in accord!"

We incline to think no human utterance ever equalled, certainly never exceeded, the above, in cheek. Its theory is that there is but one moral and religious principle, viz: the union and prosperity of the M. E. church; slavery, and present oppression, injustice, violence, and years of blood, are "matters of mere opinion!!" Is this the "Church of the living God, the pillar and ground OF THE TRUTH?"

Thoughtful Methodists will ponder these things in their hearts. Some will leave, and some remain to pray and toil and hope to purify it. But the lodge, the invisible sentinel of all evil will resist them.

THE CAUSE IN CALIFORNIA.

In June last the national political mass meeting in Chicago appointed James Kennedy Esq., of Los Gatos, Santa Clara county, a member of the National Central Committee. His name was misprinted J. H. Kennedy.

We take leave to publish below extracts from a letter from Mr. Kennedy lately received. They will be read with interest, not only in California, but by all friends of our cause.

LOS GATOS, Santa Clara Co., Cal. Aug. 21, 1876.

Pres. J. Blanchard:

MY DEAR BROTHER: In my reply to Bro. Beck I made the following propositions to him to be submitted to our Chairman, J. Black; and if they both approved of them, for us to begin work at once.

1st. We need a tract fund in California. Therefore, in order to begin the good work let every member of our State Committee (21 in number) pay to Phil Beck, our Treasurer $10.00 in greenbacks in $2.00 monthly enstallments, for five months, commencing in Sept.; also let each member of said committee get up a subscription paper and raise what money he can in his vicinity for the same purpose, and forward it to the Treasurer. By adopting this plan we would have ample means to scatter Anti-masonic tracts broadcast all over the State. In this way we could soon build up a strong Anti-secret public sentiment and prepare the way for lectures.

2d. Also let each member of our State Committee raise subscriptions for lectures and forward to our treasurer, Mr. Beck;

3d. To commence operations at once by putting a resident lecturer in the field, one, two, three, or four months the coming winter. This would develope our strength and prepare the way for Pres. Blanchard or some Eastern lecturer.

4th. To appoint electors, and put our ticket in the field and meet the enemy face to face at the ballot-box, and vote for the candidates of the American Party, J. B. WALKER and DONALD KIRKPATRICK next November. If necessary I would pay for getting up the tickets myself.

5th. Let our Secretary send letters to each member of our State Committee, 21 in number, and get their views in regard to putting our ticket in the field this fall, and if a majority decide to do so, let us begin at once.

6th. I propose that our Treasurer keep an account of all monies received and all monies expended in the work, and that he should be allowed all expenses incurred in the performance of his duties such as stamps, envelopes, stationery, &c.

If this work belongs to me as a member of the National Central Committee, I will do it all free of charge. I would like to have the duties of each member of the National Central Committee published in the Christian Cynosure. All parties would then know what to do, and how to act.

I think our work here requires some skilful guiding hand should take the helm. If this is my work I stand ready to perform it to the best of my ability; but if this work belongs to any other person they shall have my hearty co-operation.

"When smooth old ocean and each storm's asleep,
Then ignorance may plow the watery deep,
But when the demons of the tempest rave,
Skill must conduct the vessel through the wave."

I shall endeavor to make our relations with the Northern brethren as cordial and pleasant as possible, and will hold myself ready at all times to give or receive advice.

JAMES KENNEDY.

Mr. J. W. Stetson of California, and efficient men from other States were appointed members of the National Central Committee by a small informal meeting sometime since, and their appointment would doubtless have been ratified by the Chicago Convention but for the unavoidable absence of Rev. J. P. Stoddard.

The appointments of the Chicago Convention must of course stand, and James Kennedy is now member from California of the National Central Committee. (See remarks on duties of National Central Committee men on fourteenth page.)

We feel safe in assuring Mr. Kennedy that the Northern brethren, Black, Beck, Harrow, and others will feel moved by the above spirit-stirring propositions and remarks as by the blast of a bugle.

Mr. Thomas Kennedy, son of the above gentleman, lately delivered a temperance address in the Presbyterian church, San Jose, in which he stated with clearness and force the impossibility of aiding the temperance cause, by adding to it that by which popery destroyed the Christianity of the New Testament, viz., secret despotism and rites!

Young Mr. Kennedy was a member of Wheaton College for a year or two. He is a calm, clear-thinking young man, whose general excellence and force of character are calculated to conciliate and convince.

Edmond Ronayne in Iowa.—Past Master Ronayne is to give his very telling public initiations at Ames, Story Co., Iowa, September 19th, 20th and 21st. Let every one within fifty miles of that place go and see them and let the friends in every town in Iowa, who want Mr. Ronayne's services address him at once at this office or they may fail to get him at all for four or five months at least. There are applications for his services in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, and we advise Iowa friends to keep him in Iowa while he is there, for at least the month of October.

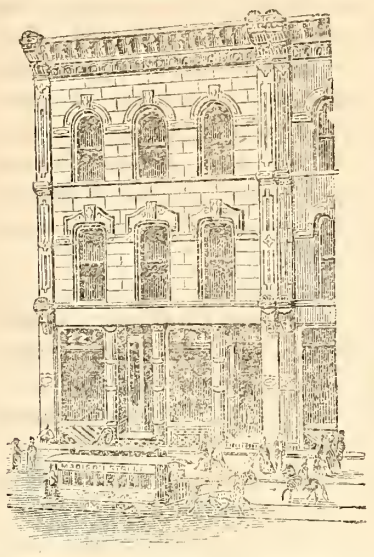
This notice is written in Mr. Ronayne's absence and with a knowledge of the fact that he is wanted in many Eastern towns in October, but they can all wait, we believe.

—Mr. Woodward, of Cincinnati, explains why "The Mah-hah-bone," the paper of which he issued a prospectus some time since, has not yet appeared. The reasons seem good and sufficient, though our self-regard forbids us to fall in with the apprehensions of some good friends respecting the Cynosure. This paper has survived more severe attacks on its list than it would be likely to suffer through the friendly emulation of Mr. Woodward.

—The Kansas State Convention was not noticed as it deserved to be in these columns, from a misapprehension of the notice, which had the appearance of being for a polical meeting solely. With the new arrangements in our present number, this department of our reform work will have its proper share of attention.

—The city of Elgin, in many respects one of the most attractive of Illinois towns, must be sadly in need of some relief from her local press if a specimen purporting to be from the "Elgin Daily News," is a representation document. The letter encloses the tracts written by Hon. Seth M. Gates of New York, ex-Congressman and ex-Mason; by Howard Crosby, D. D., the head of the University of New York, and late moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly; and by Dr. Nathaniel Colver, one of the most highly respected and talented ministers of the Baptist church, also an ex-Mason. The opinions of these gentlemen on secret societies is denominated in this letter as "nonsensical trash," "filthy tracts," "foolish in the extreme," "unreasonable and inconsistent," "the capstone of ignorance, hypocrisy and bigotry" and "filthy things." It must have greatly relieved the writer to get off so wise an opinion; but the good people of Elgin would feel more so, were such news-mongers to banish themselves from decent society.

—A judge of theSupreme Court of South Carolina thinks the boot is on the wrong foot in regard to licensing the sale of intoxicating liquors. He proposes to settle the question by allowing every one who chooses to sell liquor, requiring at the same time all those who drink to take out a license. If licenses were the only remedy or restraint upon the awful traffic it is plain that this method would have some advantages peculiar to itself.



Are You Going to the Centennial by way of Chicago? If so, please call at the Cynosure office and you may, without great inconvenience assist our Centennial work.

Obituary.

Died after a lingering illness at his farm residence, near Meadville, Mo., on the 22nd ult., Marcus Augustus Stoddard, in the 59th year of his age. Bro. Stoddard, was the eldest son of Israel Stoddard now deceased and Irene Stoddard now nearly 82 years old, and the only brother of our General Agent. He leaves a wife and four sons who are all in sympathy with our reform work. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. C. B. Davis and his remains deposited in the cemetery at Meadville. He is greatly missed in the church of which he was an active member, and by a large circle of friends who mourn his loss.

News of the Week.

Hildreth, a member of the Chicago whiskey ring,. an Alderman and Freemason, who run away to Canada to escape sentence by Judge Blodgett, now offers, through his attorney to tell all he knows of the ring operations, both among the distillers and in the late city council under Mayor Colvin.——Crook and Terry, after uniting their forces in the Yellowstone country, followed the Indian trail until it divided to the north and south. There is little hope of the army effecting anything but to scatter the hostile bands for the present.——Although an armistice in the Servian war was reported last week it seems not yet to have been brought about. Russia wants only an armistice, while England and Austria are anxious for peace even at the expense of the Servians. The cable dispatches still tell of hard fighting in the vicinity of Alexinatz. A battle fought on Friday last is said to have been one of the heaviest of the war, and the Turks appear to have been moderately successful. Gen. Tchernayeff has telegraphed for reinforcements, and a battalion of 12,000 has been ordered to his relief by the Servian Minister of War. Russian officers and troops continue to swell the Servian ranks, and the advent of peace is no nearer than before.——The little city of St. Hyacinth, near Montreal, was burned up Sabbath afternoon. The loss is $2,000,000. This calamity, coming upon a popution of probably 5,000, is really terrible, and the cries of the unhoused and starving demand instant recognition.

The Home Circle.

All Things Perish Save Virtue.

Sweet morn—so cool, so calm, so bright,
The bridal of the earth and sky,
The dew shall weep thy fall to-night,
For thou must die.

Sweet rose—whose fragrance now I crave
To glad my sense and joy mine eye,
Thy root is ever in its grave,
And thou must die.

Sweet Spring—so full of shine and showers,
It makes the weary spirit sigh,
To think, with all thy herbs and flowers,
That thou must die.

Sweet music—e'en the lovely song
Which from my harp in window nigh
Is floating on the breeze along,
E'en thou must die.

And all the bright and glistening train
Of stars that stud the deep blue sky
Must they all perish—none remain
To glad the eye?

And vales, and fields, and rushing streams,
And mountains that invade the sky,
Are they as baseless as our dreams?
And must they die?

And all that's beautiful and fair
On nature's face—love's melody,
That makes sweet music of the air,
All—all must lie!

And man, frail form of senseless clay,
Tho' low his glance is proud and high,
Perchance upon this passing day
He too may die!

But the bright soul?—THAT, shrined within
The quenchless light in mortal form—
Tho' dimmed by misery and sin,
Defies the worm.

When all the stars shall fade away,
And suns in their own blaze expire,
And trackless comets cease to stray
With wand'ring fire,

The soul shall ever live, nor know,
The lapse of time, but dwell on high,
And share—in endless joy or woe—Eternity. —Powell.

Holiness and Temptation.

How can a pure being be tempted? This question is often asked. The answer is, that a holy being can be tempted precisely as an unholy being is tempted. Temptation is solicitation to evil. The pure can be solicited to evil, just as are the impure. Jesus was solicited and urged to do evil. Yet Jesus was holy. The tempter came to him with his suggestions and promptings to evil, but "found nothing in him." That is, Satan found nothing within the pure and immaculate nature of our blessed Lord that was sin, or that would respond appropriately or sympathetically to sinful suggestion or enticement.

Suppose strong drink be offered to one who has inward desire for it, a love for its tastes or stimulating effects, appetite for it. The inclination to partake of it, for the sake of the imagined enjoyment which will be realized from its use, will be inwardly strong in proportion to the intenseness of the desire or the urgency of the appetite. Temptation, when it comes to such a person, will have all the stronger power over him because of his inward proclivity for the sin into which the temptation would lead him. The temptation, in such a case, will have a very real and very fearful advantage over the tempted one, on account of the depraved taste within, which seconds and reinforces the appeal from the tempter without. One so tempted may yield, and drink to intoxication. Or he may resist, and utterly refuse to partake of the damning cup. In either case, he is tempted. In the one case, he is overcome by the temptation. In the other he overcomes the temptation, and preserves his sobriety and his innocence. It is no fault or sin of his that he was tempted; that some one sought to entice him into drunkenness. If yielding, he sins. But if not yielding, he does not sin; and so far from being blamed, should be praised, because, when sin allured, he turned away and sinned not.

But let one who has no inward desire for strong drink, be solicited to partake of such intoxicants. Suppose he have no taste, not any, for strong drink. The temptation will affect him very slightly. In such a case, the tempter will meet with nothing within that is responsive to the solicitation—he will "find nothing in him." In a word, so far as all the matter of wanting of strong drink is concerned, the man is pure. Yet he is tempted. He is as really solicited and persuaded to do evil, to commit sin as the other. And he is solicited and persuaded in precisely the same way, so far as all the objective conditions of the tempting experience are concerned.

A pure Christian, one who is sanctified, and thus made holy, has no desire within to sin. Nor has he anything within from which or in which such a desire can be excited, if he be really holy. Yet temptation may come to him from without, and certainly will come to him. And yet is it altogether possible for even such an one to fall, and to enter into sin. The pure angels sinned, and were cast out of heaven. Holy Adam and Eve sinned, and were cast out of paradise. Holiness does not involve that it is not possible to sin; but that it is possible not to sin!

Every tempted person will be in one of the three conditions named:

1. He may have desire toward the sin, and yield; in which case he falls, being overcome.

2. He may have desire toward the sin, and not yield; in which case he does not fall, but overcomes the temptation.

3. He may pass through temptation without either desire or compliance, touching the outward solicitation to wrong-doing.—Banner of Holiness.

A Plain Talk.—An old-fashioned woman, writing in the Watchman and Reflector, speaks thus of some of our young seminary girls: "I have found in the class-room that the girls who have the most on the outside of their heads have the least inside. Last summer I heard a fashionable young lady read her graduating essay, earnestly demanding 'a wider sphere for women,' while her chest was so narrowed by artificial means that she could hardly read her essay. She evidently thought this whole world a 'pent up Utica' that was confining her powers; but all the poor girl needed was sufficient strength and purpose of character to free herself from the thraldom of fashion, and go to work in an earnest way to bring nearer to Christ the world she had found so much out of order. Some of you, my dear girls, may be filled with 'infinite longings' for a career. Let me tell you that what our sex most need at present is women who, unembarrassed by fashionable drapery, can walk a few miles without being tired—women whose thinking powers are not injured, who find a 'career' in earnestly doing their Master's work, however homely it may be."

Sunny Rooms Make Sunny Lives.

Let us take the airiest, choicest and sunniest room in the house for our living room, the work-shop where brain and body are built up and renewed. And let us there have a bay window, no matter how plain in structure, through which the good twin angels of nature—sunlight and pure air—can freely enter.

This window shall be the poem of the house. It shall give freedom and scope for eye and mind. We shall hang no picture on our walls that can compare with the living and everlasting pictures which God shall paint for us through our ample window. Rosy dawns, golden-hearted sunsets, the tender green and changing tints of spring, the glow of summer, the pomp of autumn, the white of winter, storm and shine, glimmer and gloom—all these we can have and enjoy while we sit in our sheltered room as the changing years roll on.

Dark rooms bring depression of spirits, imparting a sense of confinement, of isolation, of powerlessness, which is chilling to energy and vigor; but in light is good cheer.

Even in a gloomy house, where walls and furniture are dingy and brown, you have but to take down the heavy curtains, open wide the window, hang brackets on either side, set flower pots on the brackets and ivies in the pots, and let the warm sun stream freely in, to bring health to our bodies and joy to our souls.—Ex.

Servia.

The kingdom of Servia, after many fierce conflicts between Gauls and Romans, Ostro-Goths and Huns, entered into history about the ninth century. Its conquerors became Christians and members of the Eastern Church. The liturgy adopted nearly a thousand ago remains the same to this day. The people elect their own bishops. Being a frontier country between the Latin and Greek churches on the one side, and the pagan Huns to the other, it had been a battle-field for centuries for the adherents of those inevitable antagonistic forces, the Crescent and the Cross. For many years the rulers of Servia maintained an independent government, neither yielding to aggressions of Roman Catholics or Turks, although both these neighboring powers attempted coercion. Indeed, at that time, Servia would have preferred Islamism to popery. At length the Servians laid down their arms and accepted the Moslem conquest. All the leading families of the brave little kingdom became Mohammedan to save their property and their lives. By and by, when by the treaty of Passarowitz a great portion of their country was ceded to Austria, and subsequently, without any reference to the wishes of the inhabitants, it was given back to Turkey, the Servians revolted. This was about the year 1737. Their army of 20,000 peasants was almost destroyed, and for two generations the county was in a hopeless condition. No Servian was allowed to carry arms, to enter town on horseback, or to pass a Turk without a salute. Their rights and privileges were utterly abased. The privilege of electing their own bishops was denied them, and they became the servants of the Turks. This grinding oppression was continued for seventy years or more. During this time the arrogant Turks made whatever demands they pleased, of cattle, of money, of corn, or of women. It was a cruel bondage, and the Servian soul rebelled, and bided its time for action. At last a liberator appeared. It was Kara George, or Czerny George—Black George. He was a peasant, but he was a man of courage, a genius, and heroic spirit. He delivered Servia in his rough guerrilla way, and the Turks were routed from the land and their insolence silenced for the while. In 1812 he achieved independence for his country. Russia sympathized with him, and lent him aid. He was a dreadful sort of Christian; for he cut the throats of his captives, and thought nothing of massacreing the surrendered Turks at Belgrade. He hanged his own brother for some breach of trust. But the Servian power, as represented by Black George, was destined to fall in pieces very soon. A compromise was forced, by which the hateful Turk came again into possession, and the treacherous invader, breaking his promise, as Mohammedans always do at the least provocation, began to slaughter women and children without mercy. Three hundred Christians were impaled at the citadel of Belgrade. These outrages are still fresh in the memories of some men living. It is vengeance for insulted and injured women, which cries aloud to-day. The Servians are comparatively few in number; they represent a crude form of Christianity; they may be rash and ignorant and all that; but they have that humanity which deserves the respect of Christendom. Their homes have been violated; their lands have been taxed by a usurping power; their rights of suffrage and manhood have been set at naught. Hence they rise, a few against a mighty host, to die rather than submit to such a reign of terror any longer. Their cause is just. And close allied to Servian rights are those of other millions. It may be the beginning of a conflict between Christian and infidel powers, as one by one they are providentially arrayed in the light of the later day. Let all sincere lovers of liberty pray God to give victory to that party which represents most of Gospel truth, and that sensuous Moslemism with all forms of false religion which corrupt and destroy, may be utterly overthrown.—Rev. A Clark.

RESTING THE BRAIN.—The best possible thing for a man to do when he feels too tired to perform a task or too weak to carry it through is to go to bed and sleep a week if he can; this is the only true recuperation of brain power, the only actual renewal of brain forces, because during sleep the brain is in a sense at rest - in a condition to receive and appropriate particles of nutriment from the blood which take the place of those which have been consumed in previous labor. Mere stimulants supply nothing; they only goad the brain, force it to greater consumption of its substance, until that substance is so fully exhausted that there is not enough left to receive a supply; just as men are sometimes so near death by thirst and starvation, that there is not strength enough left to swallow anything, and all is over. The incapacity of the brain for receiving recuperative particles, sometimes comes on with the rapidity of lightning, and the man becomes mad in an instant; in an instant falls into convulsions; in an instant loses all sense, and he is an idiot. We repeat, that there is renewed force for the brain only in early and abundant sleep.—Ex.

A NEW HEART.

An anecdote published many years ago of the Indian chief Teeyuscung, King of the Delawares, is too valuable to be lost. One evening he was sitting at the fireside of a friend. Both of them were silently looking at the fire, indulging in their own reflections. At length the silence was broken by the friend, who said, "I will tell thee what I have been thinking of. I have been thinking of a rule delivered by the author of the Christian religion, which, from its excellence, we call the Golden Rule." "Stop," said Teedyuscung, "don't praise it to me, but rather tell me what it is, and let me think for myself. I do not wish you to tell me of its excellence, tell me what it is." "It is for one man to do to another as he would have the other do to him." "That's impossible. It cannot be done," Teedyuscung immediately replied. Silence again ensued. Teedyuscung lighted his pipe and walked about the room. In about a quarter of an hour he came to his friend with smiling countenance, and taking the pipe from his mouth, said, " brother, I have been thoughtful of what you told me. If the Great Spirit that made man would give him a new heart, he could do as you say, but not else." Thus the Indian found the only means by which man can fulfil his social duties.—S. Allinson.

Children's Corner.

A MITE SONG.

Only a drop in a bucket,
But every drop will tell;
The bucket would soon be empty,
Without the drops in the well.

Only a poor little penny,
It was all I had to give;
But as pennies make the dollars,
It may help some cause to live.

A few little bits of ribbon
And some toys; they were not new,
But they made the sick child happy,
Which made me happy, too.

Only some outgrown garments,
They were all I had to spare,
But they'll help to clothe the needy,
And the poor are everywhere.

A word now and then, of comfort,
That cost me nothing to say,
But the poor old man died happy,
And it helped him on the way.

God loveth the cheerful giver,
Though the gift be poor and small;
What doth he think of his children
When they never give at all!

HEALTH BETTER THAN WEALTH.

Little Martin was a poor boy who had no father or mother. He earned his bread by going on errands. One day on his way home, he sat down to rest, and to eat his piece of dry bread, near the door of an inn. As he sat there a fine carriage drove up, and the master of the inn came out to serve two gentlemen who were in it. One of them was very young—not much older than Martin—and Martin thought to himself that he should like to be in his place. When he looked at his own crust of bread and his worn clothes, and then at their fine things, he could not help saying aloud:

"Oh dear, I wish I had that young gentleman's grand coach. I wish I could change places with him."

The other gentleman, who was the boy's tutor, heard this and told it to his pupil, who made signs to Martin to come to him.

"So, little boy," said he, "you would like to change places with me, would you?

"I beg pardon, sir," said Martin, "I did not mean any harm by what I said."

"I am not angry," said the young gentleman, "I only wish to know if you are willing to change places with me."

"Oh, now you are joking," said Martin; "no one would wish to change places with me, and walk so many miles each day, and have nothing to eat but a dry crust."

"Well," said the young man, "I will give you all I have, if you will give me all that you have, and that I have not."

Martin did not know what to say; but the tutor told him to speak freely.

"Oh, yes," said Martin then; "I will change places with you."

But when the young gentleman stepped out, Martin saw that he was very lame. His legs were bent so that he had to walk upon crutches. His face was pale and thin too, like that of one who is often ill. Martin then began to think that health was better than a fine carriage.

"Will you change places with me now?" asked the youth. "I will give you all that I have to be strong like you."

But Martin said, "Oh, no; not for the world."

"I would gladly be poor," said the young man, "if I could run like you; but as it God's will that I should be lame, I try to be happy and thankful as I am."—Church and State.

A FATHER OF THE FATHERLESS.

Mrs. Rogers was a poor widow woman who had four little children; the eldest was about eight years old. One evening, in the midst of winter, her children were hungry, and she had no food to give them. But she loved and served God; and trusting in him to provide for their daily bread, she kneeled down to tell him of their wants and ask him to supply them.

At the close of the prayer, the eldest said to her, "Mother, doesn't the Bible say that God once sent some ravens with bread to a man who was hungry? Don't you think God can send us some ravens with bread now, just as well as he did then? I'm going to open the door, or they can't get in."

A few minutes after, the village magistrate passed, and glancing through the open door, said to Mrs. Rogers, "My good friend, how does it happen that your door is standing open this cold winter's night?"

"It was my little boy who opened the door a moment ago, in order, as he said, 'that the ravens might come in and bring us some bread.'"

Now it so happened that this gentleman was actually dressed in black from head to foot.

"Ah, indeed!" said he laughing; "Richard is right. The raven is come, and he is a pretty big one too. Come with me, my little man, and I will show you where the bread is."

DON'T GIVE UP; BUT TRY, MY BOY, TRY."

A gentleman traveling in the northern part of Ireland, heard the voices of children, and paused to listen.

Finding the sound proceeded from a small building used as a schoolhouse, he drew near, and, as the door opened, he entered, and listened to the words the boys were spelling.

One little fellow stood apart, looking sad and dispirited.

"Why does that boy look so sad?" asked the gentleman.

"Oh, he's good for nothing!" replied the teacher. "There's nothing in him. I can make nothing of him. He is the most stupid boy in school."

The gentleman was surprised at this answer. He saw that the teacher was so stern and rough that the younger and more timid were nearly crushed. He said a few kind words to them; then placing his hands upon the noble brow of the little fellow who stood apart, he said:

"One of these days you may be a fine scholar. Don't give up; but TRY, my boy, TRY."

The soul of the boy was roused. His dormant intellect awoke. A new purpose was formed. From that hour he became studious and ambitious to excel. And he did become a fine scholar, and the author of a well-known commentary on the Bible; a great and good man, beloved and honored. It was Dr. Adam Clark. The secret of success is worth knowing: "Don't give up; but try, my boy, try."—S. S. Messenger.

Home and Farm.

HOW TO BEAUTIFY YOUR ROOMS.—The first condition of success in furnishing either a large or a small room is that there must be no overcrowding. This is absolute. When outline is lost, beauty, as a matter of fact, is also lost. We must all know many drawing-rooms in which, perhaps, the worth and beauty of each individual thing is indisputable, on entering which the first thing which strikes one is a sense of incongruity. What might have been an art collection is degraded to the level of an old curiosity shop. Most women are born with a love of beauty. But generally, unless this love is cultivated and trained, it runs to waste, and fritters itself away on small things. Women go into a shop and hover over a counter for an hour, engrossed in the purchase of fifty minute things, each one of which is pretty enough in itself if taken up in the hand and inspected; but not one of which can be clearly defined at a distance of two yards, and not one of which repays the trouble of the minute inspection. These are packed away in shiny cabinets that are blazing with ormolu scroll-work, on spindle-legged what-nots that seem to be designed for no other purpose than to be knocked down at brief intervals, and on mantle-pieces that confuse one's vision and muddle one's brain during the long periods when the need of being near the fire forces one to face them. It is a better and higher s stem of economy to buy two or three good bronzes or marbles, on which the eye can always rest with pleasure, than to spend ten times the sum on a heterogeneous mass of the parti-colored rubbish which many accumulate, "in order," they call it, "to take off the naked look of their room." Better the naked room ten thousand times, than the false decorations.—Ex.

TO MAKE APPLE BUTTER:—The best apple butter is made by pealing, coring and slicing sweet apples and stewing in sweet cider. Very little of this sort of apple butter, however, comes to market. The bulk of that sold is made from second-rate apples, pealed, sliced and stewed and sweetened with brown sugar. A large quantity of such butter is made and sold for ship's stores for use by the sailors.

Flowers nearly always begin to fade and droop after being kept for twenty hours in water; a few may be revived by substituting fresh, but all may be restored by the use of hot water. For this purpose place the flowers in scalding water, deep enough to cover about one-third of the length of the stems. By the time this is cold the flowers will have become erect and fresh. Then cut off the shrunken ends of the stems and put them into cold water.

A Tract Fund for the Free Distribution of Tracts

HAS BEEN SECURED AND SHOULD NEVER BE EXHAUSTED. A friend has pledged this fund a dollar for every other dollar received, so EVERY NEW SUBSCRIPTION TO THE TRACT FUND COUNTS DOUBLE, and thus $10.00 pays for 20,000 pages of tracts.

The distribution of these tracts has already saved hundreds of young men from the lodge, but there is a great lack of funds to supply the constantly increasing demand for Free Tracts.

During the year ending July 1st, 1875 a little less than 150.000 pages of Cynosure Tracts were gratuitously sent out, mostly in very small lots. The present demand is fully 100.000 pages per month, but funds are lacking to meet it.

Many of our most earnest workers in this cause of God are poor men, who would be glad to circulate thousands of pages of Antimasonic literature if they could have them free.

SHALL WE NOT HAVE AN INEXHAUSTIBLE TRACT FUND

"THE ANTI-MASONS SCRAP BOOK."

SEPTEMBER,

OCTOBER

—AND—

NOVEMBER

ARE THE THREE MONTHS OF THE CAMPAIGN OF 1876.

Commencing with our first issue in September we intend to devote a whole page or more of the Cynosure to the subject which should be near every Christian patriot's heart, THE POLITICS OF OUR COUNTRY.

The campaign is now fully opened. The next two months will be full of work for the coming election and the third, November, of tidings of the result of the great campaign. While we do not intend to ignore any political news which will interest intelligent patriots our special attention will be given to the interests of

In 1832 the Anti-masons cast seven electoral votes for Hon. Wm. Wirt. This record will be handed down to future generations.

CAMPAIGN RATES.

We will send the Cynosure to any one for the months of September, October and November for forty cents; but the subscription must be sent in September. We say "to any one," not wishing to discourage persons who can send in one, two or three subscribers. Let every one who can immediately secure a CLUB OF TEN and forward the names together with a $4,00 postal order, registered letter or draft as soon as possible. Subscriptions at "CAMPAIGN RATES" receivable during the whole month of September.

FORTY CENTS FOR THREE MONTHS,

September, October and November. Who will send the first club? Who will send the largest club?

Send for tracts, circulars and subscription papers for canvassing purposes.

THE AMERICAN PARTY NOMINATIONS FOR 1876.

FOR PRESIDENT
JAMES B. WALKER,
OF ILLINOIS.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT
DONALD KIRKPATRICK,
OF NEW YORK.

The platform was revised and adopted at Pittsburgh, Pa., in June, 1875 It contains the following live issues:

1st. Christianity against infidelity and heathenism.
2d. A proper observance of the Sabbath.
3d Prohibition of intoxicating liquors as a beverage.
4th. The withdrawal of Masonic charters and prohibition of Masonic oaths.
5th. Civil Rights.
6th. Arbitration better than war.
7th. The Bible in schools.
8th. Monopolies discountenanced.
9th. A return to specie payments.
10th. Maintenance of public credit: protection of loyal citizens; justice to Indians.
11th. A direct vote for President and Vice-president.

THE AMERICAN PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage, is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. The charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discountenanced.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency, and a return to specie payment as soon as practicable.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And finally we demand for the American people the abolition of the Electoral Colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

THE NATIONAL CENTRAL COMMITTEE—DUTY OF MEMBERS.

The National Central Committee is composed of one member from each State. There should be State Central Committees also of which the member of the National Committee is chairman, but in States where this Committee is wanting the member of the National Central Committee will have the work of the Committee to do. The appointment of electors in the various districts should be attended to at once if not already completed, and we will render all the aid in our power.

Full State tickets should be nominated wherever practicable and where friends cannot get together in State Convention for the purpose each member of the National Central Committee can correspond with the electors and other friends in his State on the subject and agree on a State ticket. EZRA A. COOK, Acting Chairman National Central Committee American Party.

Next week we hope to review the PROSPECTS OF THE AMERICAN PARTY in different States.

—The nominations in Missouri are reported in a letter of the Gen. Agent, on page 5.

Those who ask: "What is the use of voting for Walker?" can be well answered by the reply which Franklin made to one who said to him, "What is the use of your discovery of the atmospheric electricity?" The philosopher answered; "What is the use of a new-born infant?" To-day, in view of the great use of electricity how foolish seems the question! Is that of the politician more wise?

We will gain nothing by the election of Hayes; and if Tilden is elected, and the Democrats do their very worst, it will only disgust all decent people and send them to our army.

Go ahead now, with all your might, at once, and consider how best to get up tickets, etc.

Yours, &c., E. J. C.

FATHER PRESTON'S REASONS FOR SUPPORTING HAYES AND WHEELER.

[We publish with pleasure father Preston's reason's for supporting Hayes and Wheeler. We do not view the situation from his standpoint, but we think there is too great a tendency among Americans to hear only one side of a question.—ED.]

LOCKPORT, Ill.
Aug. 25th, 1876.

Editor Christian Cynosure:

As the Centennial campaign for Presidential election is now fairly opened and the various parties have their speakers on the stump, I wish to say a word to our friends of the American Party, and to the readers of the Cynosure generally, on the subject of political action. I wish first to state that I was in favor of the party taking a political stand, as such, and that I was entirely satisfied with the nomination of Walker and Kirkpatrick at Pittsburgh in 1875. I have known and most highly esteemed and honored Mr. Walker, as a man of uncommon intelligence, wisdom, learning and piety, for more than thirty years. Mr. Kirkpatrick I do not know, but believe him to be competent and honest, and worthy the position, and it was my intention previous to the Cincinnati [Republican] convention to vote that ticket. But on review of the terrible history of outrages committed by the Southern rebels on the freedmen, and their total helplessness before the law, and in view of the character and principles of the nominees of both the old political parties, I cannot do it; and now, friends, this is not that I hate Masonry less but that I love my country more.

From statistics, which I suppose to be reliable, the Anti-masonic, or American Party, one year ago numbered in its ranks 5,000 Evangelical Christian ministers and a membership of over 750,000 communicants, male and female, of Christian churches, and I think it would be quite a fair estimate to claim that one third of the whole number would be legal voters at the fall election. We are having a severe conflict and shall doubtless have a very close election, and who will doubt that with 250,000 voters we might hold the balance of power in the nation. We all know that 5,000 or 1,000 votes might turn the scale in New York or Illinois, and that either of those States might turn the scale for the nation. If there was a possibility of electing our ticket I would go in for it head and heart and soul, but this is impossible.

The free and untrammeled use of the elective franchise is one of the choicest boons guaranteed to us in the constitution of the United States. It is a matter of history that from 1,500 to 4,500 of our best, most intelligent and useful colored citizens of the Southern States within the last ten years, since the war, have been deliberately murdered in cool blood by southern Democrats for no other cause than their partiality for Republican principles and Republican men to rule over them. It is also matter of history that not a white man has been punished for one of those murders, and also that the Southern white race throughout those sixteen Southern States in a vast majority are thoroughly organized in bands and clubs and societies of different names, all sworn to secrecy on pain of death, for the avowed purpose of driving every Republican, white or black, from the polls and carrying the national election in November, "Peaceably if they can, forcibly if they must."

The two old political parties have both made their Presidential nominations. The candidates for one party are old political hacks, notorious as political schemers, speculators and jockies, and not a word in their letter of acceptance as to the enforcement of the provisions of the constitution in connection with those abuses. The nominees of the other party are men "like Cæsar's wife," above suspicion of moral or political corruption, "their enemies being judges." Their lives are pure. They are old line abolitionists, old line temperance men, and old line Christian men, and they stand pledged before the American people if elected to do their endeavors to reform the civil service and to see to the enforcement of the laws and the provisions of the constitutional amendments in all the States. They are honest, capable, God-fearing men, without a stain on their character or history, moral or political; and just such men as we of the National Christian Asssociation have been praying God the last seven years to send us for rulers.

But we are told by our honored and venerable friend, Mr. Green of Indiana, over his own signature in the Cynosure that they, the Republican candidates, are both Masons. In reply to this I respectfully ask that gentleman to furnish the readers of the Cynosure with evidence of the truth of his assertion.

The National Association at our annual convention in June voted almost unanimously to support Walker and Kirkpatrick at the fall election. These are noble, competent and worthy men. But in view of the utter impossibility of electing them, and in view of the fact that we may poll a vote that may turn the scale for the nation, it is a very serious question with me if any one of us can justify ourselves before God and our fellow countrymen in casting our vote, the direct effect of which shall be to place those five millions of our down-trodden fellow-citizens under the iron rule of that rebel element of the Democratic party for the next four years if not forever. For we all know that nineteen out of every twenty, if not forty-nine of every fifty votes for Walker and Kirkpatrick will be a draft from the Republican party. Indeed, I don't know a Democrat in the United States that is an Anti-mason. We are told by some of our earnest friends that we do not reckon so much on reclaiming our Southern rebels by Legislation as by "moral suasion."

But I tell those friends that those Ku-Klux, White Leagues and the great mass of that entire white race in the South are to-day as inveterate rebels as they were in 1864 and as invulnerable to all moral influence on this subject as the fallen angels.

But the convention voted almost unanimously to go for Walker and Kirkpatrick,—and why? Because it is our duty to maintain our position and principles as opponents of secret societies and to press forward our great reform; to organize a solid political phalanx; form a bold front and march up to the polls shoulder to shoulder and show to the country and the world our numbers and our strength.

These I confess are among the most important and worthy objects of our life work. I consider Freemasonry with its entire progeny down to the present White Leagues of the South to be one of the two most unmitigated evils left resting on the United States since slavery was abolished; and to the exposition of the true character of these institutions and their overthrow I have done what I could for the last forty-nine years of my life, and have been so recognized by all who know me, and as for fealty to this cause and devotion to its interests and success I grade myself No. 2 to no living man. But if duty requires us to adopt and pursue a caurse of action that may jeopardize the lives of thousands of our fellowmen and deprive five millions of our fellow citizens of all their civil and political rights under the constitution, I confess "I can't see it." I don't believe our duty to the cause of Anti-masonry requires us to run any such risk or assume any such responsibility, and it is a matter of amazement to me that Christian men who occupied prominent positions through the great anti-slavery struggle, and endured the scoffs and sneers of the Christian church and infidel world for thirty years before the war, can now find it in their hearts to entirely overlook or totally ignore the claims of those millions of our freedmen who were emancipated from the most villainous system of slavery that ever existed on the globe through their untiring labors and efforts.

The election of Tilden and Hendricks will insure a Democratic majority in both houses of Congress and the Democratic majority in Congress will be composed of members from the Southern States, and of course all the Legislation will be shaped by those Southern rebels with special reference to their supreme object of consummating their already concocted schemes—not only for crushing the freedmen but for recovering the cotton tax. The expenses of their rebellion, all their war claims, and remuneration for their slaves, and Tilden, knowing that he owes his elevation to this same rebel element in these sixteen Southern States would not if he had the disposition be able to oppose them.

And now, friends, I ask, in heaven's name, are we in duty bound to take this terrible risk and assume this terrible responsiblility? If we do and if our 250,000 Anti-masonic voters go solid for Walker and Kirkpatrick, and Tilden and Hendricks and a Democratic Congress are elected in consequence and our helpless freedmen turned over to their brutal treatment, will not a righteous God hold us accountable, and will not our blessed Savior say to us as he once said to another company of men, "Inasmuch as ye have done it to" these five millions "of my brethren ye have done it unto me."

I will only add that I am fully aware of my entire incapacity to do any thing like justice to the merits of this subject. I have looked in vain for a word from some one of the numerous contributors to the columns of the Cynosure and failing, determined, old and feeble as I am, to do what I can, and I wish I could reach the ear or the eye of every Anti-masonic voter in the union if possible I might persuade some. As I said I know that Freemasonry is one of the sorest evils resting on the land since slavery was abolished. It demoralizes Christianity in the church. It defeats the ends of justice in the Courts. It practices fraud and circumvention in business, creates jealousy and strife in families and neighborhoods, and by its sworn secrecy affords boundless facilities for wrong-doing generally; and while I freely admit that political organization and action in opposition to these oath-bound combinations is right and proper and necessary, I still claim that we are in a crisis that for national interest and importance far transcends any we have known since the war and hardly before, and that every patriot, every philantrophist, every voter and every Christian man should well and thoroughly consider the situation and promptly so act as to avert the impending danger.

Here I leave the subject with the desire and prayer that we all may be guided in the way of duty by that wisdom which is from above, that we may finally be able to look back on our present acts with approval when we shall see with "unbeclouded eyes."

Fraternally yours,

ISAAC PRESTON.

REPLY.

"Do right and leave results with God," is a maxim that it is always safe to follow.

"Elect an abolitionist President and we will disrupt the Union," was the cry of the South for years before the election of Lincoln, and thousands of men supposed it to be right for them to continually vote contrary to their prayers in order to save the Union. They finally saw their almost criminal blunder and we believe that every one who loves the principles of the American party as set forth in our platform and hates the abominable Masonic trickery and favoritism which pervades the nation, yet helps to perpetuate such lodge rule by voting for General Hayes, who has proved himself a trickery secretist; or worse still, for the copperhead Tilden, instead of the principles they love and the men who advocate them, will look back upon such a vote as little less than a crime.

The Cynosure of Aug. 10th, contains the statement that General Hayes "joined the Odd-fellows when young, but has abandoned them."

We see however that the papers are parading the fact that he is an Odd-fellow before the people with no protest from General Hayes and J. H. H. Woodward of Cincinnati Ohio, writes: "Why don't the Cynosure put its foot down for Walker and Kirkpatrick and make the welkin ring with their names? Neither Hayes or Tilden contribute time or money to the anti-secret cause, or any writings favorable to it. Clark & Co. of this city are publishing a campaign life of Gen. Hayes (written by himself, I was informed). In the proof sheets of the book, which I have seen, he says that he was made an Odd-fellow and Son of Temperance at Fremont in this State. Hayes has an interest in Odd-fellowship even now, or he would not bring in review and parade before the public what a lively interest he took in it when here (Cincinnati) and how he helped to spread it. Is he one thing to the Mason and Odd-fellow and quite another to the anti-secretist? It would seem so to read what he says and then read the apologies for him in the Cynosure. Hayes took an active part in spreading Odd-fellowship in this city."

If this evidence does not prove Gen'l Hayes a secretist and trickster as well, we do not know what would. Yet father Preston says: "Hayes and Wheeler are just such men as we, the National Christian Association have been praying God the last seven years to send us for rulers."

We know that we have not prayed for such men as Hayes for rulers, nor can we believe father Preston has done so.

Supposing that a quarter of a million votes could be polled for Walker and Kirkpatrick and the best platform of principles ever presented to this nation; and suppose further, as father Preston does, that Tilden and Hendricks might carry the election if we thus vote for our principles; to state that we would be in the remotest degree responsible for the misrule of the Democratic party is an utterly false conclusion. To charge a woman with the murder of a man who had committed suicide because she would not marry him, even though she was warned that he would take his life in case of her refusal, would be extremely unjust, yet not more so than to charge those fearless, conscientious men who, in spite of the jeers of secretists, will not be scared out of voting for pure principles and good men, would be equally unjust and unreasonable. It would be much nearer the truth to charge the Republicans with this fearful responsibility. But exact truth would lay the sin at the door of those who vote for Tilden and Hendricks. God certainly will hold them responsible for their own conduct. The Republican party, whose rule Mr. Preston desires to have continued, have had things their own way ever since 1860, until within a year, and yet he says that for the murder of from 1,500 to 4,500 of our best, most intelligent and useful colored citizens of the Southern States * * * not a white man has been punished. That secret societies are responsible for these murders and for shielding the murderers, is a historical fact, and the Republican party, because run by secretists, is powerless to prevent these atrocities, or punish the perpetrators.

Our duty to the freedmen demands that we should vote, not for this party, but for the American Party, which seeks the overthrow of these societies, which have hitherto prevented the administration of justice in the South.

Postage on the Cynosure.

THE POSTAGE ON THE CYNOSURE MUST BE PAID AT CHICAGO. It is twenty cents a year.

The cost of postage now depends entirely on the size and weight, and therefore some smaller papers charge but fifteen cents; and others about the size of the Cynosure charge twenty-five cents a year for postage.

If the subscription price of the CYNOSURE was $2.50 or $3.00 a year, the price of many religious papers containing no more reading matter, we might afford to pay the postage ourselves, but at $2.00 a year we cannot do this with our present Subscription list.

Therefore let all send the postage, 20 cents a year, 10 cents for half a year with their renewals.

The commission on one new subscription for a year will pay the postage on your own and the new subscriber's paper. We would rather have the postage paid by commissions than in any other way.

When postage is not paid we shall have to shorten the time of subscription sufficiently to pay it.

How to Send Money.

Post office orders, checks or drafts on Chicago or towns east of Chicago, and currency by express may be sent at our risk. If it is not possible to send by either of the four ways named, money in a registered letter may be sent at our risk, but it is not as safe.

The date at which subscriptions expire is with each subscriber's name on the address label. Send renewals before this date occurs. Notice if this date is changed to correspond; if not or if the paper fails to come, write without delay.

We discontinue during the first part of each month all subscriptions which expire during the preceding one except such as are ordered continued with a promise to forward the money soon. Address all letters with subscriptions or orders for Books, Tracts and donations to the Tract Fund to EZRA A. COOK & Co., 13 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

THE WISCONSIN STATE MEETING.

It is announced by the Secretary that the annual convention of the Wisconsin State Christian Association will be held in Delavan, Walworth Co., October 11th to 13th. The General Secretary of the N. C. A., Rev. J. P. Stoddard, and Past Master Ronayne are invited and will probably attend. Let immediate steps be taken by every local association or reform church to send a delegation; and let the questions to be settled at that meeting be discussed as much as possible beforehand through every available channel.

—As Bro. Stoddard was finishing his work in Missouri an urgent invitation came to him from the Friends in Iowa to attend their "yearly meeting" at Oskkaloosa on Wednesday the 6th inst. Having arranged for an able substitute at the Jacksonville convention he went to Iowa as his letter states. The Iowa Freeman has the following notice of this meeting:

The Iowa yearly meeting of Friends will convene at Oskaloosa September 6th. This meeting will be one of unusual interest, as the revision of their discipline will take place. This is a matter upon which every true Friend must have a deep interest. Important questions will doubtless come before this meeting for the discussion and decision of its members.

The following distinguished ministers from abroad are expected. Friend Humphrey and Bevan and Brethwait, of England; David Updegraff and John Henry Do glass, of Ohio; and Nathan Frame and his wife, Ellen Esther, and Dougan Clark of Indiana.

—Mr. Ronayne has received letters inviting him to visit various places in Ohio, Oberlin, Berea, Pataskala, Newark, Lamertine among the number. He will fill these appointments, the Lord willing, in October; and will set the exact day for each course of lectures as early as possible; meantime every preparation possible should be made so that no unnecessary delays shall occur.

ARE YOU GOING TO THE CENTENNIAL by way of Chicago? If so, please call at the Cynosure office and you may, without great inconvenience assist our Centennial work.

Topics of the Time.

The religious convictions of the late lamented Senator Sumner were never very fully made public. His life was devoted to the elevation and freedom of God's poor in the person of the African slave, and his public acts in their behalf hid all other traits of his character from common view, though they occasionally shone out in their truthfulness and purity. His well known remark to the French Republican Gambetta, that the "great want of France was more vital religion," shows a deep personal experience of that need and the source from whence it is supplied. In this connection the Herald and Presbyter has reproduced a conversation had with Mr. Sumner by a Presbyterian minister of Cincinnati:

He was in his house at Washington, with Mr. Sumner and one other person present, when the minister said: "Mr. Sumner, I have always understood that you are a Unitarian; that you do not believe in the divinity of Jesus Christ, nor in prayer. For one, I should like to know if this is true." Mr. Sumner, dropping his head for a moment, replied: "Mr. ———, I believe in prayer, and I pray daily; and I believe in the divinity of Jesus Christ, and trust him as my Almighty Savior; he is my only trust." The words of this conversation, our informant says, are distinctly remembered, and were uttered as here related. After the conversation was over, and our ministerial friend was about leaving the room, Mr. Sumner said to him: "I wish to show you something which you will never forget, and which I greatly prize," and, taking down from the shelf an old book, much used and worn, and fastened at the ends of the cover with nails having large heads like those of trunk rivets, opened the book and read from a fly-leaf: "John Bunyan: his book," and then added: "This is the book which sustained the prisoner of Bedford jail."

The British government has not been noted in history for maintaining strict neutrality in foreign wars. But her course in the present Eastern troubles has been as conservative as it was partisan in our rebellion. The immense loans to the Turkish government by English capitalists has been alleged as a reason for English indifference to Turkish atrocities. But that apathy has been resolutely broken by such leaders of the people as John Bright and Gladstone. Bright has written: "But for the confidence caused by the support of England, the Turks would not have dared to commit the horrid crimes of which they have been guilty in Bulgaria. England should clear itself of all partnership in the interests and policy of Turkey. It is a partnership unnecessary to our interests, and degrades us in the estimation of every Christian nation." This terrible indictment has found many echoes and Lord Derby, the new prime minister has sent a demand for an armistice. Negotiations are sluggishly going on, while both armies rest from their terrible battles around Alexinatz, and Russia improves the opportunity to recruit the Servian army, so that it is expected to be on good footing on the renewal of hostilities.

"Deacon" Gurney's "Oriental Consistory" of 32 deg. Masons of this city lately passed through New York on their way to Philadelphia. A person calling himself "Grand Minister of State" marshalled the host. On their arrival at the former city they were met by a committee of "Grand Pontiffs Illustrious" and other things of that sort, and from the distinguished notice given of the visitors in the press one would presume them to be certain notable persons widely known for public enterprise, private virtues and distinguishing talents. Alas! people that know better must say it's no such thing. The crowd can muster some small tradesmen, tailors and the like, and a few practitioners like Dr. Reynolds, but the biggest men of them have every appearance of long and loving acquaintance with beer mugs and wine glasses. Any one can prove this by their own observation.

Professor Day, Secretary of the late General Conference of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, says there are 200,000 colored children in the Roman Catholic schools, or under the influence of the Roman Church in this country. Without knowing the actual statistics, the assertion may be ventured, that all the Protestant organizations have not so many children under instruction among the freedmen of the South. The Catholic church is the only one, too, in full sympathy with the efforts of Southern White Leaguers for the re-establishment of the Southern Confederacy in more than its former power. These Jesuit movements cannot be watched too closely.

THE MORAL WARFARE.

When Freedom, on her natal day,
Within her war-rocked cradle lay,
An iron race around her stood,
Baptized her infant brow in blood;
And, through the storm which round her swept,
Their constant ward and watching kept.

Then, where our quiet herd repose,
The roar of baleful battle rose,
And brethren of a common tongue
To mortal strife as tigers sprung,
And every gift on Freedom's shrine
Was man for beast, and blood for wine!

Our fathers to their graves have gone;
Their strife is past, their triumph won;
But sterner trials wait the race
Which rises in their honored place,
A moral warfare with the crime
And folly of an evil time.

So let it be. In God's own might
We gird us for the coming fight,
And, strong in Him whose cause is ours
In conflict with unholy powers,
We grasp the weapons He has given,
The Light, and Truth, and Love of heaven.

John G. Whittier.

FREEMASONRY AND ROMANISM COMPARED AND EXAMINED.

BY P. M. R.

I have been recently engaged in reading, for the second time, a very remarkable book entitled "Universalism Examined, Renounced and Exposed," by Matthew Hale Smith, and I was forcibly impressed with the coincidences existing between Universalism and Freemasonry.

The same reasons which Mr. Smith gives for renouncing and exposing Universalism in 1844, are exactly those which any intelligent Mason will give for renouncing and exposing Freemasonry to-day. The same arguments are used in both cases and the same passages of Scripture apply to each. But while Freemasonry is largely composed of Universalists, deists, infidels, Unitarians, Spiritualists and Liberalists in general, and of course its dogmas and teachings are in perfect harmony with the teachings of these various sects, yet it is very singular that such an irrepressible antagonism should exist between Freemasonry and Romanism, although the coincidences existing between the latter are, if anything, more numerous than those existing between Freemasonry and Universalism or any of its kindred associations. This, I believe, can only be accounted for on the theory that all of these various sects from Romanism down to Freemasonry, through Universalism, Liberalism and Materialism, either preach another Gospel besides the Gospel of Jesus Christ, or else teach no Gospel at all. It is my purpose, then, in this and succeeding articles to institute a brief comparison between Freemasonry and Romanism at the same time comparing both systems with the Bible, and I doubt not but the numerous readers of the Cynosure will be at a loss to understand how a Protestant minister (Methodist, Baptist or Congregationalist) can satisfactorily explain his adhesion to and sworn support of the fraternity of the cable-tow, while he at the same time, in his pulpit exhortations and Sabbath-school lectures, so violently denounces the fraternity of the cowl and tonsure.

To begin then at the beginning, it may be noticed

First, that, among many other coincidences, Freemasonry claims Divine origin.

Romanism also claims to be the only true church, being that which was founded by Christ and his apostles.

As proof of the pretended claim of the former I need only produce the hymn so frequently sung,

> Glory of ages shine,
> Long mayest thou reign;
> Where'er thy Lodges stand,
> May they have great command,
> And always grace the land.
> Thou art divine.

In support of the Divine origin of Romanism, the promise of Christ to Peter, "Thou art Peter, and upon this rock will I build my church," is always quoted by her advocates. Both pretensions, however, are utterly false. Neither Freemasonry nor Romanism is from God because the teaching of both systems is diametrically opposed to the Word of God. Freemasonry originated in a grog-shop in 1717, according to the highest Masonic authority, while the doctrines of Rome were invented from time to time, the oldest of them reaching no further back than the middle of the fourth century, as can be abundantly proved by ecclesiastical history.

Second, Freemasonry, in all its prayers and religious worship, rejects Jesus Christ as the only Mediator between God and man.

Romanism in like manner rejects the all-sufficient advocacy of Christ with the Father, a multitude of saints and angels, and especially the Virgin Mary, being substituted in his stead.

The coincidence in this one particular is very remarkable, and both systems in this respect are equally false, being in direct violation of the plainest and most positive declarations of the Bible. "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way the same is a thief and a robber." "I am the door of the sheep." John x. 1, 7.

And Christ himself expressly declares, "I am the way, the truth and the life, no man (whether Mason or Romanist), cometh unto the Father but by me." John xiv. 6. "For there is one God and one Mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus." 1 Tim. ii. 5. See also Heb. iv. 15, 16; viii. 6; ix. 15; vii. 25; Rom. v. 1, 2; 1 John ii. 1, 2.

Third, Freemasonry refuses private judgment. "We may not call in question the propriety of this organization; if we would be Masons we must yield private judgment."—Pierson's Traditions of Freemasonry, page 30.

Romanism also rejects private judgment—its rejection is in fact the very bulwark of its faith, for every Romanist is bound to profess and believe, "Neither will I ever take and interpret them (the Scriptures), otherwise than according to the unanimous consent of the fathers."—Creed of Pope Pius IV., Art. 2.

Here again these two systems of error are remarkably similar and both are in direct opposition to the emphatic command of our Saviour as when he says, "Search the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life and they are they which testify of me." John v. 39. "These (the Bereans) were more noble than those in Thessalonica in that they received the word with all readiness of mind and searched the Scriptures daily whether those things were so." Acts xvii. 11. See also 2 Tim. iii. 15, 16; 1 Cor. x. 14, 15. Matt. xvi. 2, 3; Luke xii. 55, 56, 57.

Fourth, Freemasonry rests exclusively upon tradition in support of its pagan ceremonies and lying legends.

Romanism also promulgates the doctrine of tradition and accepts traditional teachings on an equality with the written word.

Freemasonry constantly rehearses tradition to the candidate at almost every step he takes in his initiation and advancement through the Masonic degrees. The Senior Warden gives him instructions from "Masonic Tradition." The Worshipful Master meets him with a long list of doctrines, practices and ceremonies all based on "Masonic Tradition." There is a tradition of Enoch; a tradition of the Sts. John and more especially of John the Evangelist; a tradition of Solomon, of Hiram, King of Tyre, and there are numerous traditions of Hiram Abiff. There is a tradition of the "three ruffians," a tradition of our "ancient brethren," and various traditions of the temple. It is tradition first, last and middle—tradition from beginning to end. Freemasonry, in fact, is nothing but tradition, supported by oaths, obligations and death-penalties, and cemented by grips and pass-words—while Romanism claims to be equally fortified by tradition and carries its vindication of that peculiar doctrine so far, as to pretend to exclude from heaven all who do not acknowledge and believe it. The Council of Trent says, concerning tradition, "That the truth and discipline of the Catholic church are comprehended both in the sacred books and in the traditions which have been received from the mouth of Jesus Christ himself or of his apostles, and which have been preserved and transmitted to us by an uninterrupted chain and succession." In this particular then the coincidence between Freemasonry and Romanism is peculiarly significant and noteworthy, while both systems are unmistakably pointed out and condemned by the Word of God.

Our Saviour, in his denunciation of the false doctrines of the scribes and Pharisees, most distinctly affirms, "Ye have made the commandment of God of none effect by your traditions." Mark vii. 13. And again, "In vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men," Matt. xv. 9, which is as literally true of Freemasonry and Romanism to-day as it was in the day when Christ uttered it as a direct charge against the corrupt teachings and practices of the man-worshipers among the Jews. See also Matt. xv. 2, 3.

The Washington Commandery of Knights Templar.

We hardly know how effrontery could be carried to a greater extent than it was by the Knights Templar (so called) of the Washington Commandery, when it proceeded to lay the corner stones of Christian temples, as it did in the case of the New York Avenue Presbyterian church, October 10th, 1859, and again of the Methodist Foundry church, April 19th, 1865.

When we Anti-masons of the present day look back upon the past, and see what we have done towards insuring a more healthy tone of sentiment in our once Mason-ridden community, we can hardly realize that Masonry was ever so boldly impertinent as to lay corner stones of those Christian temples whose religion it is plotting to destroy. Still less can we conceive that the American press would look on in silence and see this desecration perpetrated, openly, in the face of a Christian people.

Men calling themselves Knights errant, and dressing themselves in the armor of the dark ages, with cross-hilted swords, and banners of the cross flying from their lances, might as well assume to lay corner-stones of religious edifices as these so-called Knights Templar. What have such foundational falsehoods as Masonry teaches to do with the truth that lies at the foundation of the Christian religion?

To give the reader some idea of the religion of the Washington Commandery of Knights Templar, it is sufficient to say that its three most shining lights are B. B. French, Albert Pike and A. G. Mackey. Mr. French, however, has deceased during the last decade. He was a most distinguished man, with whom the effected urbanity and mockish sentimentality of the lodge seemed to take the place of Christianity. He seemed to fancy that one was as good as the other. He was considered so remarkably polished in his manners in Washington society, that we are told he used to act as Master of ceremonies at the White House, in introducing distinguished guests at the Presidential receptions. His office was that of Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Masons of the District of Columbia, and Superintendent of Public grounds and buildings. How much this urbane, mild mannered man may have had to do in getting the charter for the Masonic Hall Association of the District of Columbia, from admiring members of Congress and a kind-hearted President, we have never learned.

But we gather from Masonic testimony that after a Masonic career of great distinction, and of admirable service to humanity though the impositions of the lodge, he resigned the office of Grand Recorder, and received the presentation of a sword on the occasion. This memorable event in Masonic annals took place on the 28th of March, 1860, and Albert Pike was the man who made the presentation. As the time of this farce was just before the out-break of the war which Masonry was then laboring to bring about, it is curious to peruse the remarks then made by Sir Knight French. In concluding his speech he said: "Sir, while I wield this blade under the Templar Beauseant as a Templar, I will also wield it, should occasion ever call on me to do so, under the glorious stars and stripes of my country as a patriot. Yes, I here pledge myself to you and to all, that when my country is in peril, when her constitution and her union are in danger, and arms are required for their defence, without stopping to ask who is right or who is wrong, this sword will leap from its scabbard, and the hand that now grasps it, will wield it in their defence, till their safety is accomplished or this right arm is powerless. God grant that no such necessity may happen!"

Reader, you know that the necessity did happen; and you would naturally expect that this Grand Commander French, with such lofty titles, would be as good as his pledged word, and that his Masonic sword would "leap from its scabbard" against enemies of the country, but if you think so, you will mistake what the pledged word of a Mason means. He did not really mean to imply that he would be so ungracious as to let that Masonic weapon leap against Masonic throats. His fiery patriotism, it would seem, oozed out entirely when the necessity happened; for we cannot learn, after diligent inquiring, that he ever wielded that sword, or any other against the rebellion.

In short, we have no faith in the pretended patriotism of Masonry; and we have still less in the religion of Masonry. Masonry is full of good pretences, and nothing else. It is exactly like Sir Knight

French's speech, full of good words, but without any meaning. It promises fair, while its execution is worse than nothing. Very justly may it be said of the members of the lodge as moral teachers, that "they know not what they say nor whereof they affirm." They trifle with the oath, make a solemn burlesque of religion, and moral consistency with them is impossible. AMERICUS.

SKETCHES OF SUMMER TRAVEL.

BOSTON AND NEWPORT.

The suburban towns of Boston are justly noted for their fine drives, the elegance of their dwellings, and all their improvements in their surroundings that wealth and refined taste can command. We enjoyed highly the drives furnished us by the kindness of friends through the towns of Brookline, Watertown, Newton and adjacent region. One evening we reached the top of a high hill, just as the sun full orbed and unclouded was sinking to rest in the west, its rays faintly illuminating the scene in the opposite direction, where Boston (its position clearly marked by the glittering dome of its State House), the adjoining towns and Charles river lay spread out before us. It was a beautiful scene highly suggestive of historic memories; such as the noble, steady, resistance of our fathers to British oppressions,—the famous tea party—the battles of Lexington, Concord and Bunker Hill, the part the noble men of Boston bore in the events that led to, and in the framing of the Declaration of the Independence. And when this instrument had been put forth and the cry was "Give me liberty or give me death," the steadfast flame of patriotism that burned in all hearts, and the trust in God that enabled them to endure through all the fearful struggles in which they had engaged. This free and beautiful region teeming with wealth and luxury is the heritage they left to their children. With some solicitude we ask, will the sons rear as proud a memorial during the coming century for their children. Have they the conscience, the boldness and firm determination to hold to the right and oppose the wrong that will make them valient in the moral contests of the day? In one of our drives we pressed by the palatial mansion of Mr. Adams of the Express Co. A very beautiful and extensive lawn, kept in perfect order, surrounds it and the building presents a very imposing appearance. The grounds cover over two hundred acres. In the pasture about forty head of Alderney and Jersey cows were feeding. Butter made from their milk brings $1 per pound. We found the flower garden of Mr. Payson of Boston at his country residence, which he kindly opens to the public, a place of much interest. The arrangement of the beds is fine and the effect most brilliant, and the display of ribbon gardening gorgeous. There is in his grounds also a great display of fruit, particularly pears and apples, which by the way seem to be generally abundant in this region. Boston is at present like other cities, suffering from financial depression, owing to the disastrous fires and losing investments in Western railroads. Our next stopping place is Newport, R. I., situated on the Island of Rhode Island. A long railroad bridge connects it with the main land, so we go all the way by rail. Quincy, the old place of residence of the Adams' family, and Fall River, a stirring manufacturing town of 40,000 inhabitants, are the most important places we passed through. The population of Newford is 14,000 exclusive of visitors. The principal street is Broadway, over two miles in length. This is the grand promenade, where people go to see the fine carriages and various turn-outs of the wealthy class, who have their summer residence here. We saw one or two four-in-hand's, as they are called, which means a splendid carriage with footman and driver, drawn by four horses. Most of the carriages have a small elevated seat behind for the footmen. It was almost ludicrous to see stout, able-bodied men, dressed in style, setting bolt upright, with folded arms and demure look, on these seats, while the owners, or, as was very often the case, ladies were driving in front. They seemed to be merely ornamental appendages, until the carriage stopped and then they held the horse. As we proceed up Broadway from the Northern end, for about half a mile, the common opens on our right, having paths cut through the grass in various directions. In one of the divisions is the equestrian statue of W. H. Perry and in another the famous old mill. The latter is surrounded by an iron fence to keep people out, but as they happen to be mowing the grass now, the gate is open and we enter and take a survey. It is a circular stone wall supported by eight arches, the grass covers the ground below and the sky is above. Some holes cut in the stone wall, above the arches, are considered indications of a second story having existed once. The stone work shows no signs of decay the cement growing stronger with age. The woodbine is trained over the outside with fine effect. The oldest notice of this mill extant, was in the will of Benedict Arnold, who bequeathed it to some friend. There are said to be windmills of a similar pattern in the part of England he came from. Newport has been accused of trying from self-interested motives to attach a legendary interest to this relic, in attempts to prove that it was the work of "the Northmen," who came to this county before Columbus. Of this it is said there is not the least evidence. On the left side of Broadway is the Public Library, containing besides a large collection of books, statuary, paintings and curiosities. Further on is a row of shops and business places and then the "Ocean House," the principal public house of the place. Beyond this the street is lined on both sides with elegant houses, having highly cultivated grounds, gay with beds of flowers and shaded with trees. There are three beaches in Newport, but only one is much used. It is very short compared with Old Orchard, and the water and sand do not seem so clean and nice. The surf however comes up deep and strong and the water being much warmer is liked better, especially by delicate persons. The number of bathers is very large. We counted twenty carriages at one time and many camo on foot and by omnibus. There are over a hundred houses in a row for the use of the bathers, beside a row of shorter length. One would think architecture was on exhibition in Newport, judging from the great variety of plans used in the structure of its houses. There is no end to the angles and gables, the dormer windows and verandahs, the ornaments and odd mixtures of material and paint, used in their construction. Some are exeedingly elaborate and very expensive. The beauty of some we cannot appreciate while others are unmistakably fine. Many houses for rent are empty. Board is from two to five dollars per day. Some pay the latter price in private boarding houses, which is considered the more aristocratic way of living. This place so noted for its healthful climate does not agree with us, and on this account we gladly take our leave after a few days residence. We start about 9 o'clock in the evening of the 18th, for New York city on board the splendid steamer Providence. In the morning we are nearing the islands in East river. The large imposing structures that we see on Blackwells island, are for the insane, the poor. and tho criminal. This speaks well for the Christian philanthropy, that devised and executed such ample arrangements for the comfort and security of these unfortunate classes, but it is a startling fact that so many in the community require such aid. As we pass the prison a long gang of criminals file out in their prison dress, accompanied by several officers, to their morning work. It is a sad sight, and yet we are glad that they are not free to commit depredations upon the life and property of others. At New York we take the cars for Tarrytown, a beautiful place on the banks of the Hudson.

The greatest lack in the church to-day is not of members, but of workers. As it has been said that "the world needs not more men but more man," so it may be said that the church needs not more servants but more service.

THE DOWNFALL OF THE MOLLY MAGUIRES.

The terrible band of men called Mollie Maguires, who have for twenty years taken the lives of all who obtained their ill-will, have at last come to grief. Perhaps one hundred lives have been taken by this heartless association, without one individual being condemned. So completely have they been disciplined, and so much terror have they inspired throughout the coal regions wherever their organization has extended, that for twenty years it was found impossible to condemn one of them to death.

At last Mr. Gowan, the President of the Philadelphia and Reading railroad, after employing a detective for three years in the investigation of the secrets of the order, has exposed their diabolical proceedings; and already seven or eight of these wretched people have been condemned to be hung, and more than as many others will soon meet with a like fate.

Nothing in the history of our country has been more extraordinary than this association. They have been so thoroughly disciplined that the members of the order, with the greatest alacrity, have taken the lives of men they never knew, and who have never in any way done them wrong. And when their diabolical work has been accomplished they have gone to the superior officers and reported that "the job has been well put up."

One of the saddest features of this extraordinary affair has been the fact that tho two political parties in the State of Pennsylvania have constantly struggled to gain the support of these murderers; and the elections in their locality have, to a large extent, been under their control. And it is probable that, but for political influence, these murderers would long since have been brought to justice.

The lesson that this small body of men—probably not more than one thousand—have taught us, is one of the greatest consequence. We have been for a long time familiar with money rings, but here we are made acquainted with a blood ring. We see men shedding the blood of their fellow-men with as little compunction of conscience, and with as little discomfort of mind, as the leaders in the whisky rings and railroad rings rob the public treasure.

We need to be reminded by these startling events that there is but little fear of God before the minds of many of the people of this land. These murderers have been for twenty years saved from the gallows by false swearing. They have influenced the whole of their order, and all of their special friends, to swear to falsehoods, that they might escape punishment.

This Centennial year will ever be distinguished as the year when wickedness in high places and wickedness in low places was brought to light. But it will avail very little to expose the evil that exists, and to punish a few of the worst offenders, if it does not lead to our taking hold of the disease from which the evil flows. These people need to be grounded in the truths of God's Word. They are living entirely without God; their children are to a large extent growing up almost as ignorant of the Gospel as the savages of Africa or the South Sea Islands, and we are doing very little towards enlightening them. If our land is to remain for another hundred years a Christian land, the Church of Christ must make more zealous efforts than she has yet made to carry the Gospel to the people.—Church Journal.

Reform News.

The Jacksonville Convention—From the State Agent.

Dear Bro. K.—Our annual meeting has come and gone, and has been one of great interest. The attendance of delegates was not large, but what we lacked in numbers we made up in unity and earnestness. All our meetings were held in Strawn's Opera Hall, which is large, commodious, and central. The preliminary meeting on Monday evening was largely attended, and Mr. Ronayne worked the first degree in Masonry with his usual success.

On Tuesday at 9 o'clock the Convention was called to order by the first Vice-president, Rev. J. P. Richards, and after an hour spent in devotional exercises, committees were appointed on enrollment, on business, on nominations, on political action, and on finance; after which the State Lecturer made his report, which was requested to be published in the Cynosure, and other papers friendly to our cause.

The committee on nominations reported as follows:

For President, S. B. Allen, Westfield.

Vice-presidents: Rev. J. D. Farris, Sparta, Dr. Jas. S. Springer, Springerton; Rev. J. C. Graham, Viola, and Dr. H. W. Marsh, Elmwood.

Corresponding Secretary and Financial Agent: B. F. Cole, of Jacksonville.

State Lecturers: H. H. Hinman, Wheaton, and Rev. J. P. Richards, Bowensburg, Hancock Co.

Recording Sec'y and Treasurer, H. L. Kellogg.

The Committee on political action reported in favor of a full State ticket, and such ticket was put in nomination.

On Tuesday evening a severe storm did not prevent a large number from being present and listening to a brief address by Rev. J. P. Richards, and the working of the second degree by E. Ronayne.

The forenoon of Wednesday we had some general business and brief addresses by E. Ronayne, C. G. Webb, of Springfield, and Rev. John Spaulding of this city, the last two giving their experience as seceding Masons. In the afternoon we listened to the reports of committees and adopted an excellent series of resolutions. Eighty dollars was pledged to the State fund the coming year.

In the evening Mr. Ronayne worked the third degree before a very large audience. There was good order and quiet attention for over three hours, and the people dispersed deeply impressed with the folly and wickedness of Masonry, and sincerely desiring to see it destroyed.

The effect produced on this city, renowned for its culture, morality, and conservatism, is, I think, most excellent. Some of her most distinguished religious teachers who profess to be in real sympathy with us, failed to be present, but many of the common people including some who have been ensnared by the lodge, heard the truth gladly.

The Missouri Campaign.

From the General Agent and Past Master Ronayne—A Great Meeting at Chillicothe,—And a Characteristic Masonic Reply with Bad Eggs.

Princeton, Mercer Co., Mo.
Sep. 2, 1876.

Dear K.—After speaking twenty-two times since coming to this State, I have drifted into this eddy where I intend to rest to-day; expect to preach twice to-morrow, and then go on Monday to attend "Friends yearly meeting," at Oskaloosa, Iowa. as per telegram received at Chillicothe.

The State meeting is written a success in the hearts and memories of friends who attended, and I have no doubt recorded with approval in that book which will be opened at the judgment. It was really "a time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord," and although it was evident in some of the business meetings that all present were not skilled in parliamentary tactics, no one could question the sincerity or doubt that most, if not all, had been with the "Master and had learned of Him."

The closing exercises conducted by Bro. Ronayne, in the third degree initiation, with accompanying lecture, were like a deluge of fire to consume the "rubbish about the temple" where the mutilated body, not of "Hiram" only, had been buried, but where "justice had been turned away backward," virtue robbed of her precious jewels, and the envenomed shaft of hell's malignant hate thrust into the very heart of the "Bride of Christ," and the whole den of thieves and robbers concealed under the sacerdotal robes of the "Rev. Dr. Hunt," and kindred apostates, who at the beck and bidding of the "Most Puissant Soverign Grand Commander" (Albert Pike) are leading the confiding sheep and lambs of their flocks through dens of heathen infamy to that Grand Lodge," where the spirit of that edict, "Once a Mason always a Mason," will be literally enforced upon those who appeal in vain for a "drop of water" to mitigate the terrible sufferings of such as having denied Christ before men, will be denied by him "before the angels of God."

The meeting though protracted to a late hour was decorous and intensely interesting, and all retired in good order, and some at least with feelings of deep solemnity. I felt that Miss uri, so far as I had made the acquaintance of her citizens was entitled to that name which "is rather to be chosen than great riches," and that in one of her leading inland cities, the home of the Grand Master of the State, the right of "free speech" could be enjoyed. I should most gladly have left the field with these impressions and ever afterwards cherished none but pleasing recollections of this my first visit among a warm-hearted and generous people; but before reaching the house of our "good host" in company with a few of our friends, an event occurred which suggested that the "craft" had been held in abayence through fear of consequences rather than by a decent respect for the equal rights of their fellow citizens. Like multitudes of the American people who see no cause for alarm in the covert power of the lodge, we were passing quietly along the street unconscious of our near proximity to a lurking band of ruffians, and ignorant of what was prepared by those who "love darkness rather than light because their deeds are evil," when suddenly a volley of eggs, accompanied by the discharge of fire arms, were showered upon us, and Bro. Needels, a young man near us, and myself found ourselves in a sad plight to appear in civilized society, both in the condition of our apparel and the unwholesome odor that filled the air, and presisted in attending us wherever we went. Fortunately no one was seriously injured, and if the apparently well-disposed, intelligent, and every way courteous citizens of Chillicothe whom I met "face to face" make no effort to trace this dastardly act to its legitimate source, and punish its perpetrators, but prefer that the honor or odium should rest upon the fair name of their city, I can say in behalf of those who are styled "Anti's," that we shall very composedly indure this "light affliction," confidently believing that it "shall work out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

I will not now attempt to show or even venture an opinion as to who instigated or perpetrated this act which must brand the guilty ones as unfit to be classed with a higher type of humanity than is found in the Digger Indians. But to prevent false impressions, which an interested public might receive, I will simply say that in my judgment this disreputable deed is not due to the neglect of the city marshall, or of his assistants. The authorities were promptly on hand at the meetings of our Convention where any trouble could possibly have been apprehended, and manifested an anxiety in behalf of "law and order" in striking contrast with what we are sometimes compelled to witness. The gentlemen from whom we procured the Hall exerted themselves to make our stay in the city not only safe, but highly agreeable, and in this they were eminently successful. There is no evidence that either one of the churches separately, or that all of them combined to instigate or execute this cowardly deed. A number of the colored citizens came in, and one at least participated in the exercises of our Convention, and several others with whom I conversed appeared to be interested in, and very favorable to our reform. I saw no indication of a conspiracy among the business men of the city, and from what I saw of them I believe them incapable of such meanness. Had they objected or deemed our exercises improper, they would have made their objections known "like men," and had we refused to desist and had they deemed it necessary for the good of their community they would have had us arrested by the proper officers. The ladies of the place in large numbers attested their approval by their presence at our meetings, and to suppose them capable of organizing a raid to suppress free speech with rotten eggs is too absurd to believe. Those who are neutral or indifferent would hardly have left their beds and come out to conceal themselves and throw eggs and discharge firearms at "low twelve." It is contrary to the well-known habits of this class in society to be prowling around at such a time of night.

But it was the "boys" who wanted a little fun it may be, says one. I can hardly think the boys about Chillicothe are so low-bred as to concoct and carry out such a scheme unless they were "put up" to it. Possibly they might engage in a "put up job," but the question is who "put up the job for them?"

This scheme must have been set on foot by parties deeply interested, and in some secure place away from the notice and without the knowledge of the decent people of Chillicothe. Is there any garret with "tiled recesses" in Chillicothe where interested parties meet in conclaves dark, and for aught we know conspire against the equal rights of citizens and instigate the perpetration of crimes by "boys" or whoever can be duped into their service, that would make an honest man blush for shame to be called a citizen of Chillicothe. I hope that should the men of Chillicothe prove recreant to the hitherto fair fame of their city, the ladies will see to it that the obliquy of this disgraceful act is fastened upon those to whom it in justice belongs, whoever they may be.

J. P. Stoddard.

Past Master Ronayne's Account.

Chapin, Ill.,
Sept. 4th, 1876.

Friend Kellogg:—I suppose Bro. Stoddard has already furnished you with a full account of our doings at the Missouri Convention so far at least as its political action is concerned; but as there may be a bare possibility of his overlooking some minor incidents which transpired in connection with the Chillicothe meeting, I intend to try what I can do by way of supplying or filling up any little gap he may have left open. I arrived in Chillicothe, Mo., the headquarters of Freemasonry in that State, on Tuesday about 4:30 P. M., and was met by friends Stoddard and Cooper at the depot, who escorted me to the residences of Bro. Burtch in the west end of town. Here I also met that giant veteran, Geo. W. Needles, as also Bro. Stewart, Past Master of Modena lodge, No. 39, Mo., whose testimony you will find enclosed and which it will be well to publish as extensively as possible in all friendly papers throughout the country. That night (Tuesday) Mr. Stoddard delivered a very able lecture in Well's Hall on the religion of Freemasonry to a large, respectable and attentive audience, announcing that the Entered Apprentice degree would be worked by your humble servant on the following evening, and that poor Hiram Abiff would be laid out stiff and stark "in due and ancient form" on Thursday night.

Wednesday morning quite a number of delegates from various counties presented themselves and immediately proceeded to make their nominations and take such other steps as seemed to them best for the success of the American Party in the State of Missouri. It appeared to me as I sat and looked upon these delegates that I never beheld a more determined, resolute set of men in my life and that the probabilities were largely in their favor of ultimately carrying their State for the American or Anti-masonic ticket.

In the afternoon Mr. S. again delivered a lecture on the government of Freemasonry, clearly demonstrating the absolute despotism of that dark and despotic combination, and conclusively proving from undoubted Masonic authority that the constitution and laws of Freemasonry, its obligations, oaths and death penalties, its edicts and its so-called traditionary legends were considered of far more importance and of a higher and more binding force upon the members of the craft than the oaths and obligations assumed in our civil courts and the good and wholesome laws guaranteed to us by the constitution of our country.

But still the question remained to be answered: "What is Masonry, in what does it consist?" What obligations does Masonry impose upon its initiates and what rites and ceremonies do its members practice in the hidden recesses of their garret lodge rooms and at a time of night when all other honest citizens are peaceably sleeping upon their beds? This could only be answered so as to make a lasting impression by turning the lodge-room inside out; by opening its doors and allowing the public to gaze upon what is going on inside, by publicly initiating a candidate "into the mysteries and privilages of Freemasonry."

Accordingly, then, a lodge of Masons was opened on the first degree in Well's Hall, Wednesday night, "in due form," and the "Rev. James Hunt" being duly prepared and presented was "regularly initiated as an Entered Apprentice." I am well aware that my brother Masons will be very apt to take exceptions to this language and may possibly deny that Dr. Hunt was "regularly initiated "inasmuch as I had no charter from a Grand Lodge, but let me assure them that if the work be well done it can make but very little difference whether I had a charter or not, and besides I cannot see how the Grand Lodge of Missouri or Illinois or in fact any Grand Lodge in these United States can object to the regularity of my work on the grou. d of having no charter when we take into account the fact that these so-called Grand Lodges themselves never had and never can have a charter. When a Grand Lodge meets and is opened by the M. W. G. Master in what is termed "Ample form," I demand to know where he finds his authority for so doing? Where is his charter? He has none. He never had and never will have any, and hence the initiation of Dr. Hunt was just as accurate and perhaps far more complete than if he had been up near some garret with the doors locked and the lodge room tyled. Well the audience were truly astonished and Freemasonry was the only subject of discussion and conversation everywhere in Chillicothe during the following day. Of course the usual Masonic arguments were heard on every side and the customary Masonic defence everywhere set up. I was a "liar,"a "perjured villain," and ought to be shot or in some other way disposed of as I was considered unfit to live. This is the grand, omnific Masonic argument in a nutshell and I would ask some grand mogul of this grand and gigantic humbug called Freemasonry what difference is there between this argument—this defense of Masonry—to-day and the inquisition of Italy and France or the auto-de-face of Spain and Portugal in the middle ages. Perhaps that infallible mouth piece of the impeccable Mackey, "The Voice of Masonry," can answer. Thursday evening drew near, the State Christian Association having transacted their customary business during the day adjourned at five o'clock, and preparations were made for laying out Hiram Abiff in the usual good old-fashioned Masonic style. The hall was crowded to overflowing, and from 7:30 to 11:30 that large congregation of men and women—some of the best in Chillicothe—sat with patience and the deepest interest witnessing the heathen ceremonials of Masonry and listening to the explanations of these ceremonies as they are found in the highest standard works of the institution. But the climax was reached when Hiram came to be killed. Here were six men holding a large heavy blanket, —three on each side and here was Jubelum having hold of Dr. Hunt by the collar of the coat shaking the very life out of him and because he refused to give him the Master's word, (the true name of God) this same Jubelum struck him a violent blow on the forehead and pushed him forcibly into that aforesaid blanket, figuratively killing the poor Doctor, and causing the deepest consternation in the temple. The audience shouted, stamped, cheered, and shouted and cheered again when they saw the representative of Hiram, the minister's god or Masonic idol, thus falling into the canvass, and it was very evident from the feeling manifested that so far as that congregation was concerned, Masonry had received a blow in Chillicothe from which in all probability it would never recover. The Freemasons bought quite a number of the Hand Books, in many instances sending their wives or female relatives for them or else the wives and relatives bought them for their own use; and a large number of tracts was distributed. Everything went off well and so did we when the degree was finished, little dreaming of what was in store for us before we reached our lodgings. The Masons of course were as mad as they could be and must defend their pet institutions in some manner and so what did they do but lie in wait inside the fence near the residence of Bro. Burtch where we were stopping, and when Stoddard, Needles, Cooper, Allen, Stewart &c., delayed for a minute or two at the corner of the lane to exchange a few words of greeting and farewell, the Masonic eggs began to fly quicker and faster than they ever did before perhaps in that usually turbulent State. Bro. Stoddard was almost literally covered from hat to boots; he did present a most ludicrous appearance without doubt, and if I were to be egged myself I could not help laughing heartily at the figure he cut. Needles too, got a heavy dose and so did Mr. Burtch's hired man, but your humble servant who caused all the row and against whom all the Masonic anger was directed escaped without as much as seeing a shell, in fact I was sitting quietly and comfortably in the house when the egg-throwing commenced.

I left Chillicothe Friday morning and spent that night with some old friends at Hannibal, leaving at noon Saturday for Chapin, Ill., where I remained over Sabbath in company with Rev. H. H. Hinman, and started this noon for Jacksonville, accompanied by Captain French, where I shall work the first degree of Masonry to-night in Strawn's Hall, and where we intend to stir up the Masonic lambs during the next four days.

Yours, EDMOND RONAYNE.

OUR CENTENNIAL LETTER.

[The letter for Aug. 21st was accidentally left out of its proper place.]

Aug. 21.

I would like to ask by what right Freemasons conceal the Bible, and the use they make of it in the lodge? Instead of their appeal for approval being met by the charitable judgment of Christians, it seems such an extraordinary violation of their Lord's command, viz.: to proclaim it to every creature, that the wonder is that its secret and mutilated use should not have already aroused their indignation, and caused the trumpet to sound throughout Christendom the call to "put on the whole armour of God that we may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil." Surely it is as true now as when first written that we "wrestle not against flesh and blood but against principalities and powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places."

When Christians are merely sentimentalists the deist, or Mason; may cordially respond, but they cannot cease to confess their risen and glorified Lord anywhere, nor can they systematically pretend to worship without him as the Way, unless they, by so much, forfeit their claim to the character. One link is not much in a chain, but if it is broken, what then?

I have been much gratified with the testimony in various ways borne to Mr. Freeman, and trust his health may enable him again to continue his loving labors in the Master's vineyard.

There is a great gathering of Scotsmen to-day to celebrate their national games and show the world's visitors what oatmeal can do for bone and sinew. It is, I believe, pretty generally admitted that it is good for brains, and that the intellect of the Scot is of fair standing in the various departments of knowledge, and their history tells of patriotic ardor and religious fervor as bright and beautiful as humanity can produce.

The other day one fellow, in defending his secret order, accused Scotsmen of being the greatest bigots in the world. Such "bigots" as he referred to made Scotland's fame and glory. But where great good was done, great evil would also be found near by, hence the distinguished place which Scottish Masonry holds in the Masonic brotherhood of the world.

Aug. 22d.

I have just had an interesting talk with a Parsee from Bombay, a disciple of Zoroaster, who spoke English very well, and read me, from "specimen verses" of different languages, John 3: 16 in his own language. I gave him tracts on Freemasonry. He is evidently an educated gentleman and spoke of his ancient religion and the persecution of his fathers with feeling and zest, pleased to have a willing listener even for a few minutes. What a fine verse that is (John iii. 16). I send a copy of the pamphlet containing it in 163 languages There is a great Masonic procession here to-day down town and the attendance at the Centennial is small in consequence.

"Howcan you know? You were never a Mason, therefore you can't tell anything about it." Again and again is such language reiterated. Let us see how it would apply in other cases. Men are seen going into a saloon sober, and coming out drunk. It is not at all necessary for us to be in the saloon and see them drink to know the effect of their visit. Young men are seen attending the gambling dens, and are reported to lose more than they earn. Who will employ such in trustworthy places if they know their habits? To see them play is not necessary; it is enough that they do frequent the gambling dens. So when it is seen that, although members of churches, are also members of the Masonic brotherhood in good standing, march in their processions, and are seen going to their meetings, yet as they go where irreligious men or profane swearers meet them as brothers, the inference is irresistible that irreligion and profanity, so far as these are characterized by Christ's religion, are perfectly compatible with Freemasonry as a system in which membership is not affected by such habits. When we, therefore, seek to prevent the Christian from holding fellowship with such men as their brethren, we only discharge a duty which every Christian ought to feel. And when both the Word of God and the evidence of daily life proves that such association is detrimental to Christian life, how could conscience be silent, even if our voice and pen did fail of bearing testimony against such a dangerous fellowship?

The Russian Government Commissioner visited the stand to-day and got a few of your specialities in this grand exposition. The question, you see, is thus penetrating remote countries, and while the effects may not be at onee apparent, diseussion and experience will reveal them in due time.

I am inclined to apologize in advanee for mentioning one remark made to-day by a Royal Arch Mason. He had a toy at his watch-chain which he called "the Keystone" with its letters engraved, whieh he seemed surprised did not excite my curiosity. He said he had become a Royal Arch Mason; was not a member of any ehureh; had attended Sunday-school in early life. On asking if he believed in Christ, his reply ehilled my soul, and as I looked at him I could the better understand why Jesus wept over Jerusalem. He believed in "no Christ nor in any such fools." I looked in pity and as he flushed a little, I hoped and appealed to his own paternal love, etc., and to let his heart respond to Scripture teachings of the love of God in Christ. He so far made amends as to withdraw the application of his language to Christ, whom he acknowledged to be a good teaeher. We need to have missionaries in every city. The gross perversions of Scripture which abound show the presumption and ignoranee of sceptieism. The devil quoted Scripture to tempt our Saviour, and was refuted by other Scripture. So let every Christian use this "sword" which "pierees to the the thoughts and intents of the heart."

You have a friend of the cause in Mr. Hebberd, formerly named by Mr. Freeman for his kindness. Agreeable neighbors anywhere are pleasant. If it had been our fate to have had near us a touchy, sour, prejudiced secretist, instead of a hearty friend, (I may rather say friends, for all near me have acted as perfeet gentlemen,) our enjoyment might have been considerably marred.

Perhaps some of your readers may think that your correspondent should give some account of the material things and curiosities here, but I shall not promise much of that sort till the observations on the mental and moral phenomena of the effects of Masonry are more fully resolved and time permits. However, I may mention for the young folks that in the Genevan Department, is a beautiful little watch, the smallest in the world, the price of whieh is only $2,000, another attached to a gold pen which tells the hour, day of the month and strikes; and as eompensation for outraged ears during Mr. Pig's lifetime his tail has been made into an agreeable whistle! So I have been told.

Mr. Quick, President of the State Association in Miehigan called today and was glad to see our maehinery in full operation, turning out the secrets! Does not a solemn reflection arise when we think of the great gathering of the nations, and of every thought and intent of the heart of every individual, "When every one of us must give an account of himself to God." Blessed are they who have the "righteousness of God" in Christ.

I saw to-day the great-great grand children of the printer of the first English Bible in Americe looking at, but disappointed in not getting at the old copy lying in the glass ease, and whieh they and their mother fondly believed must have their honored aneestor's name thereon as printer, which I have ascertained to be correct. His name was Robert Aitken. He was a Seotchman and Presbyterian in this eity. I gave her and the boys some talk and tracts. Their father was a Mason.

A similar incident occurred at the same time. A gentleman, descendant of Dill, whose old English Bible probably was also in the same case,ealled. He belongs to a race of printers, having several brothers so successful that they have retired with a competency. One relative recently died who had a responsible plaee in the Harper House.

But who are the present enemies of these precious blessings? We reply, the Roman Catholics and allies on the one hand and Freemasons and allies on the other. Each usurp the place where Christ alone should reign. Both equally bind their followers to a blind obedience. The Mason says his brother ean leave when he chooses. The Catholic can say the same. We hear less of Roman Catholic oaths than of Masonic oaths. The Catholic says an oath is of religious obligation. The Mason gives forth an uncertain sound. The erring Catholic is cursed by his priest and church; the Mason may fall before the exeeutor of his own rash and fearful invocation. Who executes the mandates of the Romish church? an invisible and irresponsible power wherever the law of the land is not controlled by the church; and a like response must be made concerning Freemasonry. And yet the latter appeals to the free citizens of this country for support against Rome. Freemasonry works on the Protestant minds by opposing the religion of the Catholics in a way which undermines their own. It behooves Protestants to be wide awake. There is danger on the right and left. Christians, be loyal to your Master—put on the whole armor of God and fight only under the Captain of your salvation.

Pleading for Church Purity.

In March, 1854, a few families of us left old churches East, that were steeped in slavery, whisky and Masonry, and eame to this new country and organized a ehureh, (Congregational) and barred out by prohibitory rules all these sins. Rev. Wm. Blanchard was our first pastor. Our best members died or moved away, or were killed in late war. I am the only original male member left. I returned from the army and found that our ehureh was full of all those condemned things. They have ruled it ever since. My prayers and expostulations and entreaties have (as I am often told) "destroyed my influenee," and I am often threatened with expulsion from the church and Sabbath School that I helped to organize. Nearly five years sinee a dark effort was made to destroy our radieal principles at one fell blow, by rescinding our entire rules and substituting others, very lengthy but carefully shunning all popular sin. This was carried by a vote of fourteen to seven. But old rules say, "No new principle shall be adopted or old one abrogated without being acted on before two regular meetings of the church and then must have the votes of at least two-fifths of the entire membership." We have had but one such meeting, and fourteen is not and was not 2-5 of our membership, consequently we elaim our old organization. For the last five years it has been the daily agonizing prayer of my heart that God would yet save this church. We have wealth and talent, but our minister opposes the Woman's Temperanee movement and votes license; our deacons are seeret clan men and also vote licensc. Oh, my brother, can you pray? Can you refer me to some poor humble despised, but consecrated diseiple, that can prevail with God in prayer?

Some time ago I sent the following to the "Fulton street prayer-meeting":

"I most earnestly ask prayer, not for relief from 'temporal embarassment,' not for personal peace of mind or comfort, not even for the conversion of those near and dear to me,—much as I do need prayer for all these—but for a ehureh which twenty years ago barred out the great erying sins of the day, slavery, intemperance and secret clans; these and many other gross sins have crept in among us, and are seeking our subversion. Oh, do help us pray, that God's hand may interpose to save us, solely, for his own eause and his own glory's sake."

Yours for truth and purity,
A. O. Howell.

An Old Patriot's Labors.

Cornton, Vt.

I am eighty-five years old, have for about fifteen years, been so mueh of a cripple as to perform no manual labor, and for ten years have been within no man's door but my own. My sphere in life has been that of a humble mechanie, which has not admitted of my being much acquainted over the State. About twelve years ago I bought and distributed fifty copies of "Bernard's Light on Freemasonry," and thirty copies one year later. In 1866 I had an edition 1,000 copies of Moses Thatcher's sermon, entitled "Christianity and Freemasonry Antagonistie," whieh was the best Anti-masonic work before the public for the price. I sent one of these to every minister in the State. Most of the remainder went to other parts of New England, but nearly all in the Union had some. Two years ago, I sent three or more important tracts to each member (258) of our Legislature, also to the chief offieers of the State. When recently I saw the statement that "Masonry had not held its own the past year in Vt.," I felt that the seed I had been sowing, was bearing fruit, which did not make me sorry.

I am now scattering twenty to thirty tracts a week to newly ordained ministers as I get their names, also lady officers, lady associations, lady school teachers, assured that if the ladies get these things, the men will know of them too. Wishing you eminent success in your undertaking,

I am respeetfully yours,
Warren Parker.

From a Christian Worker in Conn.

Thompson, Conn.,
Aug.26th, 1876.

Dear Cynosure:—I thank God that he is raising up men who are giving a paper to the people, so full of Christ as the Cynosure is. It is with real pleasure that I read and learn what Christian men are doing to enlighten the people of the infidelity of Freemasonry.

When we are told by Masonry that we ean be saved by the "Common Gavel," and that to leave the name of Jesus Christ out of passages of his word is a "slight but necessary modification," it is time for every man and woman who feels that they are saved by the atonement of Christ, to speak plainly and continue to speak as long as there is a lodge left in the land.

I was told by a Mason, a professed Christian, and I believe an honest man, that "he never knew that Masonry was a religion, until he saw a notiee that I was to speak on the religion of Freemasonry in Putnam." I asked him if he could find any way in whieh Masonry could and did injure the ehureh of Christ, and sent men to eternal ruin. He answered he could, and said, "Many young men joined the Masons and settled down and became satisfied with it and were lost." Lest I make this too long I will close by saying, may the blessing of our dear Lord and Master rest upon you and all who are laboring in this great reform. As for myself I am enlisted for life.

Yours truly, J. S. Perry.

Our Mail.

Stephen Wright, Glens Falls, N. Y., writes:

"How I wish Mr. Ronayne could come this way and wake up the dormant spirit of Anti-masonry that slumbers in both Washington and Warren counties, and in eastern New York. We have in this village of 8,000 people or more, two Masonic lodges, one Chapter, and an Odd-fellows lodge, three secret temperance societies, three Roman Catholic societies, besides our five Protestant and two Roman Catholic clubs."

Rev. H. S. Childs, Sandy Lake, Mercer Co., Pa., orders tracts and writes:

"The great M. E. Campmeeting is to commence here the 30th inst., and I want to sow these tracts in their midst. Please send a good selection."

We hope our friends will watch for and improve all good opportunities for putting Anti-masonic tracts into the hands of intelligent people.

O. C. M. Bates, Constantine, St. Joseph Co., Mich., writes:

"Nothing can be done here to help the Anti-masonic cause until we get Past Master Ronayne to lecture and initiate a candidate and expose the first three degrees in Masonry. I am satisfied with the Cynosure. I think it is the best paper I ever read."

Mrs. C. C. Miles, Dalton, Luzerne Co., Pa., writes:

"The Cynosure is the best paper we read, and the political platform is the purest ever given to the American people. Several of our anti-secret friends intend to vote the Prohibition ticket, but I could not vote for a man for President who had been 'Worthy Patriarch' in a Good Templars lodge, (had I the privilege) unless I knew that he had openly renounced all connection with secret orders. I admire the independence of the 'Prohibitionists' in recognizing woman as an American citizen and I believe she has a duty to do in this great temperance reform. Yours, in the noble work of opposing evil."

Mr. Hiram Summy, Pleasantville, Marion Co., Ia., writes:

"I want to know if Iowa is going to be organized. I want to vote for Walker and Kirkpatrick. There are a great many men here who would vote with us if we were organized. We would like to have 100 tickets in our township."

An electoral ticket for Iowa is about half completed already, and we hope she will also put a State ticket in the field.

Eleanor Cook, Albion, Noble Co., Ind., writes:

"I am 74 years old and poor, but I am doing all I can for the cause by throwing light wherever I can, and by talking and praying. I am afraid of no enemy. It is God's work. Dear friends, never take your eye off our Great General. He has promised to guide us with his eye. 32d Psalm, 8th verse."

Rev. W. G. Kell, Senecaville, Guernsey Co., O., writes:

"I will here and now express my regret, nay, my disgust, that so many loud-mouthed Anti masons, who are able, yet neglect, or refuse (as several prominent Wheleyans in our village did some days since, when I urged them) to renew their subscriptions for the Cynosure. I told them in plain terms that the support and circulation of this main organ of the anti-secret cause, was of far more importance than all their talk in the street and shops and stores of the village, or their voting either at present. Was I not right?

We answer, you are, emphatically right. Past Master Ronayne, our General Agent, and others who have labored in this cause as lecturers, speak again and again of the FUNDAMENTAL IMPORTANCE of the Cynosure. Without it their lectures would effect comparatively little. Let this fact take deep root in the hearts of our readers, and bring forth fruit in a large subscription list, and the progress of this reform will be much more apparent than it is at present.

Alex. Needles, Sparta, Morrow Co., O., writes:

"Within the last few years, I with the help of some others, have made a great stir, but I almost despair of doing much until we can get our reform more fully brought before the people in our larger cities and towns around us. Can you not contrive a plan to make a move in Carlington and Mt. Gilead, in Morrow Co., and Fredericktown and Mt. Vernon in Knox Co., and Delaware in Del. Co., for yet they have not allowed the lecturers to speak in those places."

Can not some of the many talented and earnest friends of our reform in Ohio correspond with and help Mr. Needles in this matter?

Mrs. S. G. Wilcox, Lyons, Walworth Co., Wis., writes:

"Of all reforms the one you are engaged in is the first in importance until ministers of the Gospel and the church of Christ place Masonry where it belongs with other sins of the age. There is a glimmering of light here and some feel that there must be a separation between light and darkness. May God speed the day when to be a Freemason will exclude one from the church of Christ."

J. A. Gibson, Brownington, Vt., writes:

"I give away every number after I have read it."

Elihu Holcomb, Poquonock, Hartford Co., Conn., writes:

"I am the only man in Poquonock who takes any Anti-masonic paper. I have seen 74 summers, and am one of the oldest men in this place. We have a few Freemasons at Poquonock. All youngish men plunge into that which they know nothing about. The people here mostly talk Anti-masonry but take no interest in the matter. If I hand them an Anti-masonic paper or a tract, they will read it, but will not subscribe for the Cynosure for fear it will be unpopular. Bro. Levington lectured here one year ago last winter, which stirred up the Masons very much. But that has all died away. We want a good man to lecture here throughout the State at least six months in the year, in order to keep Anti-masonry alive."

We would especially refer these Anti-masons to the above letter from Rev. W. J. Kell.

I. M. Thorn, Hartford, Wis., writes:

"It seems to me that Masonry is too old an institution to grapple with at this late day."

It is Christianity, through its representatives, that is grappling with the institution of Freemasonry, and Christianity is 1717 years older than Masonry.

R. B. Dawson, Baxter, Jasper Co., Iowa, writes:

"We feel it to be our duty to do what we can in opposition, and we do not know how to do so any better than to extend the circulation of the Cynosure and distribute tracts. The few numbers of the Cynosure taken in this vicinity are doing much good. We have had but few tracts to circulate yet. The sons of Hiram here already begin to feel themselves hard pressed. There are enough of us here to organize, but we have not yet. A good lecturer is needed and could do good here."

There is nothing like steady home effort in this reform, for effecting lasting and satisfactory results.

Ella Reidy, Wallaceton, Clearfield Co., Pa., writes:

"I have been trying to get subscribers to the Cynosure ever since I have taken the paper, and have just now succeeded in getting one subscriber for which I walked ten miles, and the lady who sends this subscription is a zealous woman and an able co-worker in the reform. I have worked and prayed, and I feel encouraged that we have one more subscriber in Clearfield Co., to the Cynosure. The time is not far distant in my mind, when even Clearfield will burst those bonds of iniquity and stand out from those evils. Wherever we can get the Cynosure circulated we can then have poor, blind, down-trodden creatures come to the light. In God we trust and we will work and wait."

H. C. Stoughton, Duncan, Ill., writes:

"I am waiting patiently until the full State ticket is out, and I expect to vote it."

Swanton Ranks, Algona, Kossuth Co., Iowa, writes.

"I heartily endorse the platform as published in the Cynosure: For President, J. B. Walker, Vice-president, D. Kirkpatrick, with the eleven sound elements in the platform as already published. And in studying them I find an approximation to the theocratic government, which has been my fond ideal for a quarter of a century."

SUNDAY-SCHOOL MACHINERY.

"That's a machine-made shoe, sir, and not a bad article. But try this, now. This is hand-made. It will outwear two of that." Which set me thinking. Ah, the machine-made scholars in the Sunday-schools! Put through the routine week after week, too often with about as much spiritual life in the operation as in the crank of an engine, amused with stories, drilled in the singing, called on for the pennies, equipped with library books, and sent home with hardly an earnest thought of Christ or heaven, and yet, "a splendid school," because there is a great, enthusiastic crowd, and they are kept in order!

Not everything can be done with machinery. Evil is alive in human souls, and nothing dead will send it off. Rules and regulations are not the chief end of man, and it is nowhere revealed that we are to enjoy them forever. There are cases—always will be—that they do not cover. Once upon a time, the city fathers of Edinburgh, before gas had made its advent to a benighted world, thought they would have lighted streets by turning every pedestrian into a walking lamp post. Whereupon they decreed that every citizen, thenceforward appearing after sunset on any street of the town, should carry a lantern. And the next night an irreverent youth was discovered carrying a lantern that contained no candle. After which the law was amended to read, "a lantern containing a candle." And night had no sooner descended again, than this graceless wight made his appearance with a lantern containing a candle, not lighted The worthy fathers determined to clinch him, at last, ordered "a lantern containing a lighted candle." And out came the law-abiding, lawless reprobate with a lantern containing a lighted candle, closely boxed in with pasteboard. Now rules are good. They are indispensable. But only for the negative work of avoiding confusion. They are defensive armor in the war against evil - not offensive. The machinery of the Sunday-school is good, provided you do not depend on it to do spiritual work. The prayer wheel of a Hindoo, by which he repeats his prayer to his god a score of times by giving as many turns to the crank is good—to grind corn, perhaps, but not to commune with heaven, nor to meet the Christian's wants.

Of course the winning and spiritual training of souls is the highest object for which the Sunday-school can exist. Success in that is the golden goal of an earnest teacher's hope. But this mere knack of so running the machinery as to keep the roll and attendance full is a very different matter. All the contrivances that it often involves in the rivalry of schools in the same community—the picnics and Christmas trees, advertised and puffed in the "local column"—the donations of numberless coats and frocks and shoes, in which the good Dorcases are set in unconscious competition with one another—are they not written in the book of the chronicles of half the schools of the nation? "No ma'am!" said an indignant washerwoman to a teacher who was enquiring after her boy—"my Jimmy is not comin' to your school again!" "Ah, why not?" "Because he went the whole of last year, every Sunday but six, and got nothing from it but one jacket—none of the best at that—and a pair of trousers. And over to the——school, where he goes now, they've givin' 'm already as much as that in a month—and a cap, too." Isn't that a lovely state of things?

This very name, "school," as some one has well said, is unfortunate. It suggests machinery, drill, head work, rather than spiritual life. "Bible Service" would be better—especially as the fathers and mothers, as well as the children, ought to be present, who are too far along in life for a "school." But whatever the name, let the aim be, not smoothly oiled machinery—not a grand show of success in a report to a convention—but spiritual life, with a thorough knowledge of the book, a larger indwelling of Christ in souls, and more of saving power in this perishing world.—S. S. Times.

HOW TO MAKE A PICTURE BOOK FOR THE CHILDREN.—Cut pictures from the illustrated papers and magazines. When you have enough collected, get some paper muslin, either all white or different colors. If you do not wish to purchase one of the self-binding covers cut some out of paste-board or bristol-board and paste bright cloth over them to make them durable. Cut the paper muslin to fit the covers, work the edges of it all around, button hole stitch with red worsted, and paste on the pictures. Fasten securely in the binding and let the little ones enjoy it to their heart's content. The larger children might make these books for the little ones, thereby relieving the mother of the task and at the same time amusing the smaller ones with the wonders of book making.

HOW TO TEST AND PURIFY WATER.—Mechanical impurities in water are removed only by filtration; chemical impurities cannot be removed in this manner. If lime is supposed to be present in water, the best test is to mix with it a small quantity of oxalic acid in a small vessel; lime, if present, will be revealed in a white precipitate. Carbonate of copper is best detected by the white tincture of galls, which produces a black precipitate. If a penknife, dipped in water, assumes a yellowish coating, copper is present. The best method of detecting the presence of vegetable and animal matter is by dropping into it a small quantity of sulphuric acid; the water becomes black. To purify water, add twenty drops of sulphuric acid to a gallon of water. An ounce of powdered alum in a hogshead of putrid water will, in the course of a few hours, precipitate the deleterious matter and make it fit for use.

COMMON SENSE IN PLOWING.—Teams drawing loads on the roads get a breathing spell on the descending ground, while in plowing, the draft is the same from morning till night. There is a certain number of pounds that a team can draw day after day and not worry them, but if more be added, even as little as fifteen or twenty pounds, they walk unsteadily, fret, and soon tire. No amount of feeding will keep them in condition. I have many plows in use on which it has been an easy matter to decrease the draft twenty-five pounds, and if men had been drawing them instead of horses it would have been done. It must be plain to the farmer that every pound taken off from the draft of his plow is so much gained for his horses. It may be done in this way:

For any soil, except sand or gravel, use a steel plow. Their cost is but little more, and the draft enough less to pay the difference in plowing twenty acres. In plowing sod, the coulter does a great deal of the work, and should be kept sharp by forging at the blacksmith's and grinding every day, if necessary. Of course it will wear out sooner, but new coulters are cheaper than new teams. Set the coulter in line with the plow, the edge square in front, with an angle of forty-five degrees from the point to where it is attached to the beam. When the share gets worn out, it is poor economy to use it any longer, but replace it with a new one. Let the traces be as short as will allow the horses to walk without hitting their heels against the whiffletrees, and have just pressure enough of the wheels on the ground to make the plow run steady. If the handles crowd continually one way, the draft is not right, and if the plow is a good one it can be easily remedied at the clevis. To prevent the horses stepping over the traces in turning, fasten a weight of about three-fourths of a pound on the outside of each singletree—that is, on the right end when you turn to the left, and vice versa. Every farmer knows that horses are susceptible to kindness, and equally so to unkindness. I have seen horses that were working steadily made reeking with sweat in a short time by a sharp word or a jerk on the bit. Let your horses do their work as you do yours, as easily as possible, and be as willing to overlook their mistakes as you would the mistakes of human beings.—Practical Farmer.

BILLIARDS IN COLLEGE.

"One of the religious papers is troubled to the extent of a column and one-eighth (leaded) because President Porter, of Yale, wants six billiard tables for the college. We have nothing to say about the intrinsic morality of the game. We do not intend to discuss the nice questions supposed to be involved, as to the degree of culture, mental and physical, which the game affords. We simply take the plain fact as President Porter takes it. Billiards will be played; there is no intrinsic moral delinquency in playing billiards; on the whole, the arguments for and against are nicely balanced; therefore—and here President Porter's logic shines out—as billiards will be played, it is better that they be played without injurious accompaniments than where gambling, intoxication, and evil company are very likely to accompany them. President Porter has done wisely."—Hartford Churchman.

The arguments against billiards are:

1. They were originally, and by the statute law of Illinois still are, implements of gambling. It is twenty-five dollars fine to make or sell them, and that law has been enforced not very long since in a few cases. Colleges should not defy the laws.

2. The reasons which induced the enactment of laws against billiards are not now weaker than when the laws were passed. They are the tools and tempters of idlers, loafers, gamblers, blacklegs and "men about town," now as when they originated in France.

3. Their associations are bad; and when groves were associated with idol worship in the popular mind, God forbade his people to plant trees, beautiful and innocent trees, near his altars. And the first Congregational Puritans rejected vestments because they had been abused to purposes of idolatry. Why should Yale, originally a Puritan college, violate this plain and just principle, by adopting billiards, which twin with cards, drinking, loafing, and gambling. Is President Porter wiser than God?

4. The idea of diminishing saloon-billiard-playing by putting billiards in colleges is weak and absurd in theory, and contradicted by all experience, in cards, dancing, lotteries and secret societies. In vices, inoculation is no preventive. The virus always produces and aggravates the disease.

THE KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS.

Bro. Hodge, our Centennial agent, has sent some instructive figures on the Knights of Pythias, who lately held a national (or international) meeting in Philadelphia. This meeting is styled the "Supreme Lodge of the World" with a modesty that would put a heathen Chinese to the blush. Before this serene body a "Supreme keeper of Records and Seals" reported, showing that the order now has 98,276 members; initiated during the last year, 11,376; admitted by card, 966; reinstated, 1,080; withdrawn, 1,647; suspended, 12,809; deceased, 834. That is, the order has lost nearly 2,000 members (1978) during the year. This we must call relatively a very fair record. When such an organization loses over 15,000 members a year it is in the way of benefiting mankind, and will best do so when utterly disbanded. The receipts of the Grand Lodges have been $72,913.24; expenditures, $60,-193.72; amount on hand, $18,897.88. The Grand Lodges, it must be recollected, are not supposed to do any charitable work; this $60,000 is just what it professes to be, expenses of their useless State meetings. The subordinate lodges do not show a more satisfactory record. They have collected from their members $888,062.14; have paid for relieving members $191,666.18; for families of members, $7,279.61; for education of orphans, $1,121.84, in all, $200,-067.63. The burial of the dead is not included as it is a mere advertising dodge in most cases, and frequently the secret lodges are at no cost for it. So we have less than one-fourth, about 22 per cent., of the funds used for the purposes of benevolence. At an annual average cost of about $10 per member, what real good are these men doing with their accumulation of funds and expense of time passed in their lodge room. This is the mere utilitarian view, there is another which might well make a conscientious man pause and ponder, before setting foot in the ways of secretism.

Some idea of the distribution of this order may be gained from the reports of different States. Pennsylvania has 430 lodges and a membership of 39,318; New York is second, with 110 lodges and 6,065 members; New Jersey has 106 lodges and 6,131 members; Maryland 91 lodges and 6,780 members; Ohio next, with 94 lodges and 5,788 members.

The whole institution is but a bolster of Freemasonry, from whose ranks it sprung during the latter part of the Rebellion. It is a snare and deception from the initiation to the end.

THE ILLINOIS STATE MEETING.

This Convention must be put down as another advance in the reform, and well maintains the position Illinois has taken among the foremost of the States. The delegates were not so numerous but more widely distributed than at any former meeting, nearly all parts of the State being represented. Perfect harmony prevailed in all the meetings, outside Masonic circles, and the expositions of Mr. Ronayne were attended by crowded and enthusiastic audiences. Of course the presence and counsel of General Agent and Secretary Stoddard were missed; and it had been arranged that Prof. C. A. Blanchard should attend, but sickness prevented.

The local daily press gives a fair idea of the influence of the meeting in their reports. We copy from the Jacksonville Journal of the 5th inst.

The Fourth Annual Convention of the "Illinois State Association of Christians Opposed to Secret Societies" is now being held in Strawn's Opera House in this city. Edmond Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, is the leading spirit, but a considerable number of other earnest gentlemen are present and participating in the deliberations of the Convention. All appear very conscientious and sincere in the discharge of what they seem to consider a duty—expose the workings of secret societies, seek to prevent their growth and accomplish their final overthrow.

Last night Mr. Ronayne, in the garb of the degree which he attained in Masonry, delivered an interesting address and conducted a Masonic initiation into the first degree. He is an easy and graceful speaker, full of Irish wit and vivacity; he put his audience in sympathy with himself, and made even members of the fraternity laugh at his remarks and characterizations. The Opera House was well filled.

From the same paper is taken the following report of the meetings which will supplement the State Agent's letter.

The report of the committee on political action, which was in favor of the nomination of a full State ticket of the American party, was adopted.

The heavy, continuous storm of Tuesday evening prevented a crowd to witness the public initiation in second or fellow-craft degree, but what was lacking in numbers was made up by the enthusiasm of the audience, which in point of numbers was much more than an average one, considering the weather.

WEDNESDAY.

The report of the treasurer of the association was read which showed the receipts and disbursement to be $404.85, besides several hundred dollars collected for the Carpenter Publishing House Fund.

A few pledges of money in support of the State work were then taken, after which Charles G. Webb, of Springfield, gave a purported account of his initiation and experience in Masonry. He was followed by Edmond Ronayne, of Chicago, who thought there were great inconsistencies in professedly Protestant Freemasonry; claiming that Masonry had prayers for the dead, etc. He was followed by Rev. John Spaulding, of this city, who gave an account of his initiation and experience in the order many years ago in Vermont. The session Wednesday afternoon was occupied by the reports of various committees, with action on the same.

Resolutions were adopted expressive of a determination to use every effort to rid both church and state of the corrupting influence of the secret orders.

A resolution was passed denouncing the late Masonic mob at Streator and demanding protection in the exercise of the right of free speech. All of the day sessions were preceded by a prayer-meeting of half an hour.

Streator was fixed on as the place for the next annual convention of the Association.

THE CLOSING SESSION

in Strawn's Hall, where all the meetings were held, was one of the largest of the series, the hall being crowded, and Mr. Ronayne again and again had to check the demonstrations of applause.

—Rev. E. G. Cooper, State Lecturer for Missouri sends a brief account of the Chillicothe meeting, which is of interest in connection with the longer reports under "Reform News":

The representation equaled our expectation. A full State ticket were put in nomination, electors and a State lecturer. The best of interest was manifested by those attending the lectures and business meeting. Reports of the truthfulness of the expose were as numerous as street corners, and frequently a threat by irresponsible persons. The working of the third or sublime degree of Master Mason can only be seen in all its hideousness by a practical exhibition as given by E. Ronayne. The fraternities were met by an argument for which they had no offset, except the Streator argument. With this they approached us, as is usually the case under the covert of secrecy, and darkness. The boys entrusted with this part of the crafty work of the night workers, were secreted behind a fence, from which retreat they let fly a volley of Masonic argument well coating the editor of the American Freeman with their Masonic compliments. Mr. Stoddard also, carried away an appreciation of his services. Myself, Ronayne, Stewart, Allen and others, being in the company, escaped. These honors we suppose still await us, and will perhaps be attended to in due time.

THE SECEDER'S LIST.—Friend Woodward of Cincinnati urges the importance of adding to the seceder's list constantly. Almost every week men are coming out openly from the lodge and denouncing it. Get their names and forward them to us. He writes:

In making up my book, "How to defeat Masonic scoundrelism within the Court House," I relied in part upon your published list of seceders. This morning I have received the following postal from Rev. J. K. Speer of Indianapolis: "Please strike my name from the list of Anti-masons published in your late book. I see it in the Indiana lists. How it came there I know not. I look upon Masonry as being a good thing in its place. Signed, J. K. Speer, Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 28th, 1876." I have notified the gentleman, his name will be dropped from future edition, and of its public appearance in columns of Cynosure. Let me now urge the importance to the friends of our cause of sending forward for publication as large lists of seceders from every State in the Union as possible. I am getting letters almost daily from parties who are complaining of being swindled in law suits by Masons. It is time to stop the game. Respectfully,

J. H. H. WOODWARD.

CORRECTION.—In the affidavit of Mr. Ronayne, published Aug. 31st, the words "Grand Institutions of the United States," should be, Grand JURISDICTIONS of the U. S. Please notice and have it correct when reprinted.

They are supposed to have come to India 1,000 years ago. They dress like the Hindoos, use the Hindoo language, and know but little about Hebrew. They observe the Sabbath day strictly, and follow the Levitical code, but they associate but little with the Jews, owing to the difference of costume and language.

The Home Circle.

The Lord's Prayer.

[The following beautiful paraphrase is credited to M. Pierre Bernard.]

Our Father—
By right of creation,
By bountiful provision,
By gracious adoption;
Who art in heaven—
The throne of thy glory,
The portion of thy children,
The temple of thy angels,
Hallowed be thy name—
By the thoughts of our hearts,
By the words of our lips,
By the works of our hands.
Thy kingdom come—
Of Providence to defend us,
Of grace to refine us,
Of glory to crown us,
Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven—
Towards us without resistance,
By us without compulsion,
Universally without exception,
Eternally without declension.
Give us this day our daily bread—
Of necessity for our bodies,
Of eternal life for our souls.
And forgive us our trespasses—
Against the commands of thy law,
Against the grace of thy Gospel;
As we forgive those that trespass against us—
By defaming our characters,
By embezzling our property,
By abusing our person;
And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil—
Of overwhelming afflictions,
Of worldly enticements,
Of Satan's devices,
Of error's seduction,
Of sinful affections:
For thine is the kingdom, the power and the glory forever—
Thy kingdom governs all,
Thy power subdues all,
Thy glory is above all.
Amen.
As it is in thy purpose,
So it is in thy promises,
So be it in our prayers,
So it shall be to thy praise.

Making the Church Nothing.

The very idea of Christian consecration implies personal separation. It is difficult to conceive how there can be a true personal relationship to the spiritual family on earth without it. "Come out from among them and be ye separate, saith the Lord." "He that is not with me is against me." And the very idea of a church as Christ's visible representative in the world involves organization and congregation for the solemn worship of God. To this end there should be identification with some body of true believers. Such are not made Christians by being, in this sense, in the church; that is the error we have just exposed; but they are in the church because they are Christians, and are willing to share, if need be, the offense of the cross. We take it that every man who desires his influence to be aggressive will identify with some organization, whether the force to be exercised be physical, mental or moral. We owe it to Christ and we owe it to ourselves. It does not answer to say we are Christians at home; unless it can be shown that duty ends with home. Nor does it do to say there are those outside all visible organizations who are fruit-bearing Christians. A modern thinker has said: "A cherry tree may be a good cherry tree in the public highway. But the boar out of the woods will whet his tusks upon its trunk; and the boys will beat down its half-ripened fruit with clubs and stones, and as its broken and battered branches sway helplessly in the wind, every passer-by utters the conviction that it would be better for itself and all for whom good cherries are intended, if it were over the fence and within the enclosure." There are thousands of good men who answer to this cherry tree. Their hearts are with the people of God, but they are on the world's side of the fence. There may be rare exceptions, but we have never yet met one of these unchurched pious people (and as a class they are of a noble type) who could explain his anomalous position or satisfy the demands of his own reason. Some contend that they can be as good out of church as in it. The sufficient answer is that never having tried they do not know it to be so, while the experience of thousands who have tried is against them. Others tell us they are better than those in the church. It may be they are, but they forget that they are not to be their judges, and that this is the very position of high Phariseeism: "I am holier than thou!" Others still, more abstract in their reasonings, tell us they have a right to stand aloof if they so choose. Let us see if they have. Admit the right to one, and inevitably you admit it to all. If one may exercise it, so may all. And if all should do so, then is there an end of visible organization, and Christ would have neither name nor place among the identifiable things of the world. And it comes to this sharp point: Every friend of Christ who is unchurched is a revolutionist, and, however unwittingly, sets an example which makes the church nothing! Alas for the error of those who make the church nothing!

The mean between extremes carries truth and consistent example. The Master gave a striking illustration of the relations when he said: "I am the door: by me if any man enter in he shall be saved, and shall go in and out and find pasture." The native element and structural material of the church is in the "world." The analogue of a sheep fold is most apt. Salvation is of Christ and not of the church. But the church is the shepherd's fold. It is a folly to neglect this advantage of protection and comfort. We may possibly do without the fold and friendly aid of the Shepherd's crook, but it is a risk. Our adversary, the devil, as a roaring lion goeth about. The floods of this world's temptations pour down their torrents, and footfalls and snares are in the mountain thickets. A friendly crook and a cheery voice are something in the struggle. We are saved by faith and not by creeds—by Christ and not the church—by a holy life and not by ordinances; but he who thinks that creeds and churches and ordinances can be lightly esteemed will find by an experience for which he will dearly pay that while his sufficiency is of God, nevertheless he will reach the mount of heaven by pressing the rounds of the ladder furnished by the "communion of saints" and the means of grace.—Methodist Protestant.

Each in His Own Way.

All great works are done by serving God with what we have in hand. Moses was keeping sheep in Midian. God sent him to save Israel, but he shrank from the undertaking. We sympathize with Jethro's herdsman, alone, a stranger, owning not a lamb that he watched. He had nothing but his shepherd's rod cut out of a thicket, the mere crabstick with which he guided his sheep. Any day he might throw it away and cut a better one. And God said, What is that in thine hand? With this rod, with this stick, thou shalt save Israel, and so it proved.

What is that in thine hand, Shamgar? An ox-goad, with which I urge my lazy beast. Use it for God, and Sha gar's ox-goad defeats the Philistines. What is that in thine hand, David? My sling with which I keep the wolves from the sheep. Yet with that sling he slew Goliath, whom an army dare not meet. What is that in thine hand, disciple? Nothing but five barley loaves and two little fishes. Bring them to me, give them to God, and the multitude is fed. What is that in thine hand, poor widow? Only two mites. Give them to God; and behold, the fame of your riches fills the world. What hast thou, weeping woman? An alabaster box of ointment. Give it to God. Break it and pour it upon thy Saviour's head, and its sweet perfume is a fragrance in the church till now. What hast thou, Dorcas? My needle. Use it for God, and those coats and garments keep multiplying and are clothing the naked still.

You are a manufacturer, or a merchant, or a mechanic, or a man of leisure, or a student, or a sewing-woman. God wants each one of you to serve him where you are. You have your business, use it for God. Order it in a godly manner. Do not allow any wickedness in it. Give godly wages; preach Jesus to your clerks, not by a long face, but by being like him, doing good. Use your profits for God, feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, visiting the sick, comforting the wretched, spreading the Gospel far and wide. What a field you have to glorify God in, just where you are! If you have nothing else, use your tools for him; he can glorify himself with them as easily as he could with a shepherd's stick; an ox-goad, a sling, or two mites.

A poor girl who had nothing but a sewing-machine, used it to aid a feeble church; all her earnings above her needs were given toward building a house of worship, and in a year she paid more than others a hundred times richer than she. So you can do if you will. Think of the widow with her two mites; the woman with the alabaster box, and Doreas and her garments, you can do as much and have as great a reward.—Dr. Buckland in the Bible Student.

He is Able.

God is able of these stones to raise up seed to Abraham.

Able to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him.

What he has promised he is able to perform.

Able to make all grace abound toward you, that you, having all sufficiency in all things, may abound in every good work.

I commend you to God and to the word of his grace, who is able to build you up and to give you an inheritance among all them that are sanctified.

Able to keep that which I have committed unto him.

Able to keep you from falling, and present you faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy.

Able to succor them that are tempted.

Able to keep all whom the Father hath given him, so that he will not lose one.

Able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think.

Believe ye that he is able to do this?

A Broken Dish.

Joe was the village idiot, and like many an unfortunate of his class, often surprised people by his shrewd sayings. He had an odd habit of calling at the neighbors towards sundown, where he would sit by the kitchen fire an hour at a time, muttering in his foolish, harmless way. He came to our house the other night when mother was busy preparing tea. In one of her journeys from the dining room she dropped a china bowl, breaking it in a dozen pieces.

This little act seemed to give Joe infinite delight. He rubbed his hands over the stove, and chattered and chuckled more like some animal than a human being. Then looking up with a silly leer, he said: "Folks is like dishes mostly; you can't handle such kind rough," pointing to the ruin on the floor. "Ain't good for much when they're broken, and they break mighty easy." Rolling his eyes towards the more common ware ranged on the kitchen shelves, he continued: "That's the sort for use! They're the people to do the work in the world! Not so nice and purty as t'other, but you don't have to treat 'em so tender." Poor Joe! I wonder if his mind were not like delicate porcelain, which some careless hand had let fall in early life, hopelessly shattering it.

Mother, with that rare sympathy belonging only to matured motherhood, humored his fancy by saying: "Well, Joe, you know all kinds of dishes are needed at a feast. There is a greater Supper than this to take place by and by, when the Master comes to sit down at the table He will want something besides the china and silver. It won't make so much difference then what we are, if only we bring the food He expects. The Lord never looks for 'strong meat' in a vessel which can carry only milk."

Joe looked at her with his vacant stare, showing that he but dimly understood her meaning, though he seemed to comprehend Scriptural ideas easier than any others. Does this verify the words of the prophet, that "a way-faring man, though a fool, shall not err therein?"

Watching the fragments as they were brushed into the dust-pan, he burst forth again. "Ha! ha! Guess He'll take care of the pieces! Things don't get broken in His hands, though. He knows the diff'rence 'tween tin and chiny!"

Half-witted words, perhaps, but hiding a meaning full of truth and pathos. Are we not, as Christians, responsible for some of the broken vessels in the Lord's treasure-house? Though there may be but few, like Joe, whose minds are a complete wreck, are there not among us many sensitive, highly-organized natures, whom in our rude jostle we have given a jar they will feel for life. It may not have been in the shape of a harsh word or an unkind act, but simply in withholding the sympathy and encouragement we might have given, or even in the failure to recognize that they are of more delicate mold. To how many thirsting souls they might have carried the water of salvation had not their power been weakened!

We never place fragile glass upon the heated stove, but we do subject each other's characters and modes of action to the fire of scathing criticism or uncharitable remark, and then wonder that they do not stand the test. We carefully protect our porcelain from undue frost and cold, but leave many a soul shivering from indifference or neglect. I believe, with Joe, that the Son of Man will "gather up the fragments, that nothing be lost," and at the marriage supper of the Lamb we shall recognize many a broken vessel that here on earth we condemned as unfit for us, because failing to act in the way we judged best.

"Things never get broken in His hands!" Shall they in yours, Christian, when He has made you your brother's keeper?—Com.

J. T. Cooper, U. P., of Philadelphia, said in the National Convention at Pittsburgh, nine years ago last May, that it was proverbial in Philadelphia that when a man joined the Odd-fellows, he ceased to attend prayer-meeting. That has been our observation exactly. The truth is when one cannot find in Christ all that the soul desires, it is fearfully obvious that he has fallen away. The resort of multitudes of professing Christians to games and sports in themselves bad, and having a bad tendency, and the affiliation of many with secret combinations is sad evidence that the indwelling Christ has departed from their hearts. Is it not so?—Iowa Freeman.

A Lady Engineer.

Until it was mentioned in the personal column of the Philadelphia Press, that the steam engine which works the four looms and printing press in the Woman's Pavilion was being run by a woman, very few persons dreamed that they would find anything more interesting in the little brick addition to the beautiful structure than a blacksmithy representative of the masculine gender. Yesterday, however, the lady whose duty and honor it is to hold such an unusual position, was overrun with visitors, who gazed upon the strange, yet in this age not unexpected, spectacle with feelings half of amazement and half of admiration. There in a light brown, neatly trimmed dress, really dainty in its delicatete xture, and as smooth and clean as though the wearer were a flower-girl, instead of an engineer, could be seen a young, medium-sized lady, whose regular features, intelligent conversation, and refined manner proclaimed at once the presence of American nobleness and culture. The steam engine, with its undeniable heat and imaginary dust and smoke, together with its very palpable noise, was there in all its blackness and power, but in the place of the average engine-tender, with his dusky skin, matted hair, and dirty blue overalls, was to be seen a lady who could have passed directly from the engine-house into a drawing-room, and graced the occasion to perfection without change of dress or manner. In a conversation Miss Allison said that she had been brought up in a little place near St Catharines, in Ontario, and that from a child she had been a lover of machinery, and spent much of her time in the large saw and grist mills which her father then owned. These were run by engines of from two to hree hundred horse-power, and though she sometimes pretended to run them for an hour or two, she did not think any lady would have sufficient strength to perform all the work of managing such monsters. In answer to a question relative to the possibility of women running engines as a regular business, she stated that there were thousands of small engines in use in various parts of the country, and that there was no reason whatever why women should not be employed to manage them. The work was less tedious than almost any of the usual avocations adopted by women, and the engine required far less attention than any woman gives daily to a child under her care. For her part, she said that though this was her first practical experience, she found it less tiresome than any other work she had been called upon to perform since adverse fortune had made it necessary for her to earn her own living. In addition to the fact that the father of the lady owned large mills in which she spent much of her time, she received a thorough scientific education, and learned much from her brother, who made engineering a profession. She learned the method of operating the engine used at the Woman's Pavilion in a few moments, and now does all the work, from starting the fire in the morning to blowing off steam at night. The idea of having a woman in the engine-room originated with Mrs. Wright of the Ladies' Centennial Executive Committee, and there was, of course, much opposition to the project, one of the arguments used, not in the Committee, but by outsiders, being that the Committee would some day find the Pavilion blown to atoms, and it would then be discovered that the female engineer had lost herself in some interesting novel when she ought to have been watching the steam gauge. —Ex.

Burning a God in China.

You know the people in China have a great many gods. Some of them are images made of clay, or wood, or stone, or some metal, and are kept in large, beautiful temples. But there is one— a paper god— which we find in every home; and about this one I want to tell you.

It is called the "kitchen god," and is only a rude, bright-colored picture on coarse, thin paper, pasted up on the wall, inside a little shrine. There is always a shelf before it, with a pot of ashes standing upon it. The people do not pray to this god; but they worship it by lighting little sticks of incense, and setting them up in the pot of ashes, and, while the incense is burning, getting down on their hands and knees before the god, and knocking their heads on the ground two or three times. This they do morning and evening generally; but in some families they are very careless about it, and sometimes, for weeks together, do not worship at all. But if any one in the family is taken sick, or if any trouble comes, they are very apt to think it is because they have neglected the "kitchen god;" and so they begin to worship it again.

They think that this god watches over the family, and that he sees and hears what they do and say. The strangest thing about it I have not yet told you. Just before New-Year's there comes a day when, in every home, the "kitchen god" is taken down and burned up. The people say that they send their god up to heaven to report what they have done during the year. With him they burn little pieces of brown paper, cut to represent ladders, on which he is to go up. They know, of course, that they have done a great many wrong things which they do not want reported; so, the morning before the god is to be sent up, they bring an offering of molasses-candy, in balls, on a plate, and set it before him, leaving it there all day. The god cannot eat it of course; but they say it is to stick his lips together so that he cannot tell the wrong things they have done. In the evening, after they have burned him up, they eat the candy themselves. Then, after a few days, they buy a new god, and put it up in the place of the old one.

And these poor people do not know of any better way to get rid of their sins than this, because no one has ever told them of Jesus, who died to save us from our sins, and who is so willing to forgive us when we ask him. Would you not like to go and tell them about this dear Saviour, that they, too, may be forgiven and saved?—Missionary Echoes.

How Boy's Marbles are Made.

Almost all the "marbles" with which boys, everywhere, amuse themselves, in season and out of season, on sidewalks and in sandy spots, are made at Oberstein, Germany. There are large agate quarries and mills in that neighborhood, and the refuse is turned to good account in providing the small stone balls for experts to "knuckle" with. The stone is broken into small cubes by blows of a light hammer. These small blocks of stone are thrown, by the shovel-full, into the hopper of a small mill, formed of a bed-stone, having its surface grooved with concentric furrows. Above this is the "runner," which is of some hard wood, having a level face on its lower surface. The upper block is made to revolve rapidly, water being delivered freely upon the grooves of the bedstone, where the marbles are being rounded. It takes about fifteen minutes to finish a half-bushel of good "marbles," all ready for the boy's knuckles. One mill will turn one hundred and sixty thousand "marbles" per week. The hardest "crackers," as the boys call them, are made by a slower process, somewhat analogous, however, to the other.—Scientific Monthly.

Is Your Note Good?

A Boston lawyer was called on a short time ago by a boy, who enquired if he had any waste paper to sell. The lawyer had a crisp, keen way of asking questions, and is, moreover, a methodical man. So pulling out a large drawer, he exhibited his stock of waste paper.

"Will you give me two shillings for that?"

The boy looked at the paper doubtingly a moment, and offered fifteen-pence.

"Done," said the lawyer, and the paper was quickly transferred to the bag by the boy, whose eyes sparkled as he lifted the weighty mass.

Not till it was safely stowed away did he announce that he had no money.

"No money! How do you expect to buy paper without money?"

Not prepared to state exactly his plan of operations, the boy made no reply.

"Do you consider your note good?" asked the lawyer.

"Yes, sir."

"Very well; if you say your note's good, I'd just as soon have it as the money; but if it isn't good I don't want it."

The boy affirmed that he considered it good; whereupon the lawyer wrote a note for fifteen-pence, which the boy signed legibly, and lifting the bag of papers, trudged off.

Soon after dinner the little fellow returned, and, producing the money, announced that he had come to pay his note.

"Well," said the lawyer, "this is the first time I ever knew a note to be taken up the day it was given. A boy that will do that is entitled to note and money too;" and giving him both, sent him on his way with a smiling face and a happy heart.

The boy's note represented his honor. A boy who thus keeps his honor bright, however poor he may be in worldly things, is an heir to an inheritance which no riches can buy—the choice promises of God.

SEPTEMBER,

OCTOBER

—AND—

NOVEMBER.

ARE THE THREE MONTHS OF THE CAMPAIGN OF 1876.

Commencing with our first issue in September we intend to devote a whole page or more of the Cynosure to the subject which should be near every Christian patriot's heart, THE POLITICS OF OUR COUNTRY.

The campaign is now fully opened. The next two months will be full of work for the coming election and the third, November, of tidings of the result of the great campaign. While we do not intend to ignore any political news which will interest intelligent patriots our special attention will be given to the interests of

In 1832 the Anti-masons cast seven electoral votes for Hon. Wm. Wirt. This record will be handed down to future generations.

THE AMERICAN PARTY NOMINATIONS FOR 1876.

FOR PRESIDENT
JAMES B. WALKER,
OF ILLINOIS.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT
DONALD KIRKPATRICK,
OF NEW YORK.

The platform was revised and adopted at Pittsburgh, Pa., in June, 1875. It contains the following live issues:

1st. Christianity against infidelity and heathenism.

2d. A proper observance of the Sabbath.

3d Prohibition of intoxicating liquors as a beverage.

4th. The withdrawal of Masonic charters and prohibition of Masonic oaths.

5th. Civil Rights.

6th. Arbitration better than war.

7th. The Bible in schools.

8th. Monopolies discountenanced.

9th. A return to specie payments.

10th. Maintenance of public credit: protection of loyal citizens; justice to Indians.

11th. A direct vote for President and Vice-president.

THE AMERICAN PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage, is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. The charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discountenanced.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency, and a return to specie payment as soon as practicable.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And finally we demand for the American people the abolition of the Electoral Colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE.

Ezra A. Cook, Chairman; Linus Chittenden, J. S. Hickman, Daniel Brown, O. F. Lumry, Wm. B. Lloyd, Edmond Ronayne, Jesse B. Blank, J. M. Snyder.

JOHN FINNEY, Mansfield, Ohio, writes: I want to get up a flag with the likenesses of Walker and Kirkpatriek on it, with their names below in large letters. I hope that Ohio will do her duty this fall towards swelling our vote for the best men in the nation as our candidatst for the highest office in the giftes our nation. * * Senator Sherman, in his speech a few days ago, begged that the Walker Party would not defeat Hayes, of Ohio."

We hope to have Walker and Kirkpatrick pictures out in about two weeks.

In 1840 7,059 votes were cast for Birney, Abolitionist candidate for President. Connecticut, Illinois, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and Vermont (twelve States) at that time uttered their testimony, through their ballots against slavery. Four years later the abolitionists east for the same Presidential candidate 62,300 votes, nearly nine times as many. Indiana added her protest to that of the above mentioned States.

PROSPECTS OF THE AMERICAN PARTY IN THE DIFFERENT STATES.

Let us take the States in alphabetical order and look at the prospect.

Alabama.—The anti-secret cause has one or two earnest workers there but they will not reach the voting point this year.

Arkansas.—Not yet heard from on this subject.

California is preparing an electorical ticket and talks some about a State ticket. We expect from this State at least 200 votes.

Connecticut.—Has an electoral ticket and we believe will east at least one hundred votes.

Delaware is not waked up on this subject.

Florida probably will not be heard from.

Georgia will doubtless be silent.

Illinois has a State ticket and an electorial ticket in the field. In the hot election of 1860 she gave Lincoln nearly 12,000 majority. In 1872 the Republican majority was 57,000. She can and ought to give ten thousand votes of this majority to Walker and Kirkpatrick and even then Hayes would run no risk of losing the election. We believe the votes should be given if he did however. But we put Illinois down for five thousand. Will every patriot in Illinois who reads this article help make this number good.

Indiana has a State ticket and an electoral ticket in nomination. The Republicans would hardly miss two or three thousand votes from their majorities. We estimate her Anti-masonic votes at 2,000.

Iowa has an electoral ticket partially made out and will, we hope, put a State ticket in nomination. Her Republican majority in '72 was 60,370. We put her down for 1,000 Anti-masonic votes, hoping that she will double the number.

Kansas has an electoral ticket and will poll 100 votes it is estimated.

Kentucky has not been heard from.

Louisiana has not been heard from.

Maine in '72 gave a Republican majority of 32,335. In 1860 for Lincoln 36,118 majority over Douglas besides polling over 6,000 for Breckenridge and 2,000 for Bell, and yet a warm friend of the American Party writes: "If there was no danger of the Democrats securing the election with the division in the Republican party I would say by all means vote the American ticket. In view of the danger I think we had better lay by on the Presidential election for this term. * * If I am wrong I wish to know it." We believe that our brother takes a wrong view of the case and that the Anti-masonic voters in Maine would do more towards promoting an honest, just government by voting the American Party ticket than any other. We hope they will be guided into the truth concerning this subject.

Maryland is not yet heard from.

Massachusetts we are assured will cast a few votes for the American Party ticket; we put her down for one hundred. We ask friends who live there is this a correct estimate?

Michigan is taking measures to secure an electoral ticket and a State ticket is talked of. We estimate her American vote at 500.

Minnesota has a few earnest, honest and intelligent workers and we look to her for at least 100.

Mississippi will poll twenty-five votes we think. She has just sent us one enthusiastic letter and we hope will do much better than this.

Missouri we estimate at 1,000, and ask Mr. G. W. Needles for his opinion.

Nebraska it is estimated will poll twenty-five votes. She has not been heard from.

Nevada has not been heard from.

New Hampshire gave nearly 12,000 majority for Lincoln in 1860, besides over 2,000 for Breckenridge and 400 for Bell. In 1872 she gave 5,744 majority for the Republican party; and yet friends there feel as they do in Maine.

New Jersey has not been heard from.

New York we estimate at 2,000 votes. Will she do more? An electoral ticket is being prepared.

North Carolina may cast a few votes, but she is hardly educated up to the voting point.

Ohio has a full elcctoral ticket and will cast it is estimated 4,000 votes. We hope more.

Oregon will cast 100 probably. She has not been heard from.

Pennsylvania will probably poll 1,000 votes. She has not yet secured an electoral ticket. W. B. Bertels, Wilkesbarre, Pa., is chairman of State Central Committee and may be addressed by persons interested.

Rhode Island has not been heard from.

Tennessee will poll a few votes. We take this opportunity to say to friends there, what will you do?

Texas has not been heard from.

Vermont will cast 100 votes we hope if not more.

Virginia we put down for 50.

West Virginia for twenty-five.

Wisconsin will probably poll 200 votes. Her electoral ticket is about half completed.

Fifteen States will probably have electoral tickets in the field and votes for Walker and Kirkpatrick be cast in twenty States; 20,000 votes will probably be polled for the American Party ticket.

Masonry must be Removed before Politics are Right.

Amboy, Ill., Aug. 20th, 1876.

Editor Cynosure:—As others are showing how we should vote, whether we should cast the Anti-masonic ticket or otherwise, I would also show mine opinion.

From the best information I can get I see no objection to Hayes and Wheeler as candidates, but my objections lie against the party to which they belong, for both the Democratic and Republican parties are ruled and run in the interests of Masonry, and all the butcheries of negroes, and the placing their murderers in Congress and other official stations of profit and power, is the direct result of Masonic control over the Republican party. Thus when the rebel armies laid down their arms there appeared in the Chicago Tribune a call for a Masonic Convention to be composed of delegates from the North and the South, to meet in Cincinnati on a day named, to agree on terms of reconstruction of the rebellious States. The result of this convention was not published, yet any one may know what it was by what has followed, as murder and treason are no violation of Masonic law. So none of the rebels were hung or punished, but were first, pardoned; secondly, enfranchised; thirdly elected to office, both legislative and executive, and now control Congress and most of the Southern States. And now the Republican leaders are calling lustily to all temperance men and anti-secrecy men to vote the Republican ticket and save the country from rebel rule, (which I admit would be a great national calamity). But I say let them call upon their gods. Masonry is the direct foe of religion, of temperance and of every moral reform, and must be removed before we can hope for any permanent good.

Permit me here to give a sample of its effects on temperance and religion.

Not long ago there was a movement in the city of Amboy for a union temperance meeting. All Christians of all denominations were asked to unite and form an open society to oppose intemperance. When the effort was made to organize, it was proposed that we should have some recognizance of God. One old fogy proposed that, if we have a recognizance of God, that we should know what God, and that it should be the God of the Bible, the Lord Jesus Christ. This was like dropping a bomb-shell into the camp. The M. E. minister who was taking a leading part in the eetings, at once opposed the mention of the name of Jesus Christ, and the discussion ran so high that the Rev. brother (the M. E.) lost his temper; declared that it would be a death-blow to the cause to introduce the name of Christ as there were so many who did not believe in Christ, and that he would rather there should be no organization than to admit that name; and so urged his case till the meeting broke up and the movement failed. Now I don't suppose that that minister was conscious of enmity to the name of Jesus Christ, but the enmity was there. The fact was he had been so trained in the lodges that it was bad policy to own Christ before men, that he stepped into the forefront of the hottest of the battle, and led the hosts of the haters of the only Name by which we can be saved.

Hiel Lewis.

Why Every one should Vote the American Reform Ticket.

First. Every man should act, and vote from principle.

Second. It cannot make any difference to Reformers what the name of the party is that rules, if Masonry is the governing principle of the party, for they will favor all other Masons at the expense of outsiders; for in the higher degrees of Masonry they are sworn to help or protect each other right or wrong. So we need not expect justice between them and us while they rule.

Third. The great cry raised by Radicals, that if we vote for Walker it will elect Tilden, is a Masonic trick; for if every Radical in the State would stay away from the polls Hayes would be elected just as soon as if they all voted for him; for we vote for Electors, and not for President. On the other hand the cry of the Bourbon leaders is the same Masonic trick, for if ten thousand Democrats voted for Walker, it would not change the election in favor of Hayes. So let every Reformer carefully examine these things, and act independently, just as he would in other matters. Then he will have done his duty, and not till then. Let us talk, pray, and vote understandingly, and our principles will eventually prove victorious.—Am. Freeman.

Don't Care.

You don't care for politics? You ought to care. It is your "Don't care" more than anything else that has brought politics into disrepute and the nation in danger. For

I. You are a trustee. There is no such thing as universal suffrage. Women, children, lunatics, criminals and unnaturalized foreigners do not vote. Only about one in every ten of the whole population does vote. You represent ten people in your community. If you send a man to Congress and he is too busy making money to care for politics you count him recreant. If you don't care for politics you are equally recreant. You are a representative. It is your duty to care.

II. You owe something to posterity. What would you say of a man in 1776 who did not care for politics? A more devastating army invades the country now. The plague of domestic flies is worse than a plague of foreign locusts. The office seekers are more dangerous than redcoats. Dry rot is worse than bombardment. If you are to hand down the inheritance of the fathers to the children, you must care. Indifference is treason—of a mild sort, but deadly.

III. If higher motives do not effect you, self-interest should. What has paralyzed industry; stopped the wheels of manufactories; left half the nation barren and unproductive; left us a money without stable value and a future without a certainty; created universal distrust and suspicion; and filled the columns of our daily papers with scandal, half is slander, the other half truth? "Don't care" has done it. So long as substantial men "don't care" who administer the government, or on what principle it is done; so long taxes will be high, and corruption great, and mismanagement profitable, and reform spasmodic. The reform must begin, not at Washington, but in the hearts of men all over the country who "don't care."

IV. You cannot do anything? Have you ever tried? You can go to primary elections. You may be beaten at the first venture; you deserve to be if you stay beaten. Put even defeat may be a prelude to victory. The presence of men of character, of wealth, of influence, in the primary meetings will make itself felt.

V. You can resolutely refuse to vote for bad men because they are put on your ticket. You can break away from party leaders; and when you do, party leaders will have to consult you and such as you, or fail. You can write and sign a declaration of independence on your own account. The office holders and office seekers are in an insignificant minority. Look around you any Sabbath—how many are there in church? Stand on the sidewalk and look at the throng in any city street—how many hungry for office? Go through a railway car and take a census—the vast majority are honest and disinterested as yourself. And you cannot do anything? Nonsense. You can do everything. The independent voters, the men who care for country more than party, and for party only as it serves the country, can control politics any time they choose. It is "don't care" that makes them humble servants of the politicians whom they effect to despise. Wherever patriotism in the many is stronger than love of pelf in the few, the country will be redeemed. Its greatest national curse is "don't care." That is its old man of the sea; and you are the one to help throw him over.—Christian Weekly.

The American Party,

ITS OBJECT, ORGANIZATION, PLATFORM AND CANDIDATES.

Some of the ablest men in the nation have pronounced our platform the best that has been presented to the American people for the past fifty years Our Candidates are men of acknowledged ability and honesty, and if every voter in the United States could read this our "POLITICAL TRACT," our Candidates could undoubtedly be elected. Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Freemasonry.

GERMAN CYNOSUCE TRACT A.

Six Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason.

By Rev. A. GROLE, Pastor, German M. E. Church, Worchester, Mass

This is our first German Tract, and it is a good one; it ought to have a large circulation. A 4 page tract, Price 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1,000.

FREE TRACTS.

A Tract Fund for the Free Distribution of Tracts

HAS BEEN SECURED AND SHOULD NEVER BE EXHAUSTED. A friend has pledged this fund a dollar for every other dollar received, so EVERY NEW SUBSCRIPTION TO THE TRACT FUND COUNTS DOUBLE, and thus $10.00 pays for 20,000 pages of tracts.

The distribution of these tracts has already saved hundreds of young men from the lodge, but there is a great lack of funds to supply the constantly increasing demand for Free Tracts.

During the year ending July 1st, 1875 a little less than 150.000 pages of Cynosnre Tracts were gratuitously sent out, mostly in very small lots. The present demand is fully 100.000 pages per month. but funds are lacking to meet it.

Many of our most earnest workers in this cause of God are poor men, who would be glad to circulate thousands of pages of Antimasonic literature if they could have them free.

SHALL WE NOT HAVE AN INEXHAUSTIBLE TRACT FUND

"THE ANTI-MASONS SCRAPBOOK."

Contains 24 Cynosnre Tracts, bound together and is just the thing to select from. Price 20cents. See advertisement page 15.

Enoch Honeywell Esq., pays for an unlimited number of his tract addressed "TO THE YOUNG MEN OF AMERICA." It is an excelent tract, bearing the printed endorsement of Executive Committee of the National Christian Association. He has furnished the public over 150.000 pages of these tracts during the past year.

THE WISCONSIN STATE MEETING.

It is announced by the Secretary that the annual convention of the Wisconsin State Christian Association will be held in Delavan, Walworth Co., October 11th to 13th. The General Secretary of the N. C. A., Rev. J. P. Stoddard, and Past Master Ronayne are invited and will probably attend. Let immediate steps be taken by every local association or reform church to send a delegation; and let the questions to be settled at that meeting be discussed as much as possible beforehand through every available channel.

—Mr. Ronayne has received letters inviting him to visit various places in Ohio, Oberlin, Berea, Pataskala, Newark, Lamertine among the number. He will fill these appointments, the Lord willing, in October, and will set the exact day for each course of lectures as early as possible; meantime every preparation possible should be made so that no unnecessary delays shall occur.

—Agent and Secretary Stoddard after a very interesting visit to the Iowa Friends yearly meeting, spent two or three days in this city and started last Friday for Plainfield, Ind., to attend the yearly meeting of Friends in that State. He then returns to Iowa and meets Mr. Ronayne at Albion on the 25th.

—Past Master Ronayne has arranged for a series of important meetings in Iowa, beginning at Ames, on the 19th. He expects to be at State Center on the 22nd and 23d, Albion 25th and 26th; then after visiting some other points he will hold expositions in Marshalltown, Oskaloosa, and Washington during the first of October.

Topics of the Time.

While England is denounced for holding a sovereign between her eye and the awful scene of the Turkish atrocities in Servia and Bulgaria, it is well to inquire whether America has any better reason than distance for remonstance or even interference. Although the officers of government are probably too busy just now in wire-pulling for the next election to hear the piteous cries of outraged women and innocent babes appealing to humanity everywhere to arise against the scruples of political etiquette and save them, yet something is being done among us. A number of clergymen in New York city have been making a quiet effort to get some public expression against the Turkish outrages, with a view of ultimately enlisting the government in behalf of the Christian population of Servia. This effort may accomplish another end. The Pope has made positive declarations in favor of the Moslem cause. It would not tend to strengthen the bond between America and Rome should we as earnestly aid the long oppressed Sclave, and with Rome it is best that America should be unfriendly.

The Republican press is astonished, angry and bulstering at the apparent meeting of extremes in some parts of the political battle this year. Charles Francis Adams has been nominated for Governor of Massachusetts by the Democrats. Of Mr. Adams it is almost needless to speak. His antecedents for two generations, and his own long and honorable public career without a tarnish are recommendation enough. By whomsoever elected such men are the salvation of our nation. Mr. Adams is his own platform and whatever may be the character of other men or candidates in the Democratic party, if elected he is elected simply as Mr. Adams. His letter of acceptance is like that addressed to the Cincinnati convention four years ago. He is not an office-seeker, nor will he disregard the call of a majority of his fellow-citizens who may choose him to responsible positions. On the other hand the Republicans in Massachusetts have been log-rolled until the infamous Ben Butler has been chosen as their standard-bearer for Congress in the Essex district and Knight Templar Loring is in his glory again.

Another case is in the 4th Congressional District of Illinois which has for four years under Republican rule sent a drunken Freemason to Congress—Stephen A. Hurlbut of Belvidere, a prominent actor in the Judge Whitney case. Gen. J. A. Farnsworth, a Union veteran, and about the only man in Congress who could manage the pugnacious Ben Butler, had been the representative from that district, but he was honest enough to denounce the tricks and frauds of party rule and the Masonic fiat went forth against him. Hurlbut has been unloaded this fall by the Republicans of the district after are a great struggle and the bolting of the Hurlbut men. But such candidates as Adams and Farnsworth it is safe for Americans to elect, not as Republicans or Democrats, but for the country. Questions of Southern oppression and crime, of finance, of the tariff, of prohibitory laws, are safe in their hands. They will not sell their convictions for perquisites of any kind; and the objection that they are asssociated with bad men and bad principles by accepting the Democratic nomination is only an excuse. The best candidates of the Republican party have associations no better.

The apathy of Protestant Christians on the great question of the world-wide lodge idolatry is bringing into apparent antagonism two social and religious powers that really by nature and practice belong together—Romanism and Freemasonry. Lord Ripon, though at its head was filled with loathing at the hypocrisy and paganism of the lodge, and dropped off to the only religious system that was known to openly be opposed to it. So in Brazil, priest and lodge are in a perpetual quarrel, but it is the testimony of the missionary Vanorden that the Freemasons are at heart as opposed to evangelical religion as to Rome. In Italy, disgusted at papal forms that lead not to Christ and peace prominent men are found in the lodge, and the Italian government is largely manned by Freemasons. The minister of the Interior is their great favorite and was lately at the first on the list of candidates for election of members of the Grand Orient, the Grand Lodge of Italy; the president of Victor Emanuel's Cabinet is a Freemason of the highest degree; and the government itself has lately become the purchaser of the infidel and Masonic library of Bixio, a revolutionary eader.

ELIJAH.—1 KINGS XIX. 14.

BY A. S. FISK.

Elijah, man of God; I love thy solemn mien,
Thou standest there before them all, thy people and thy King.
Shall thy weak hand turn back this strong, voluptious tide?
Dost thou alone plead for thy God; and is there none beside?
The priests of Baal there, four hundred fifty men,
In favor well secured, with princely gifts to them;
Their raiment soft, and fair, their food like king and queen;
Elijah with a hairy robe, and leathern girth is seen.
The prophets of the groves, these count four hundred more;
By princely bounty fed, and from the royal store.

"Prepare the sacrifice, upon thy gods go call;
Go cut yourselves with knives, and before Baal fall.
He who shall hear this day, and answer us with fire;
Let Him be Israel's God, provoke no more His ire."
The people, there they stand,—God's word neglected long,
Still lingers in their memory, a half-forgotten song.
Oh, will they hear and turn? Is mercy yet for them?
Will they forsake unrighteous ways for Heaven's diadem?
Which will they now prefer, earth's pleasure, and her ease,
Or hide themselves in caves, to serve the Lord whom they displease?

There comes at length the eve, the western sky is red;
Unanswered Baal's prayers; useless the blood they shed.
Before God's altar now Elijah stands and prays;
And lo! devouring fire consumes, bullock an altar blaze.
The presence of the Lord, ah! who shall tell its power;
The conscious guilt of every heart, confessed in that dread hour.

"The Lord He is the God," the myriad voices cry;
And Carmel's woody heights give echo in reply;
And Baal's prophets then are slain beside the brook;
Will they indeed return to God, whose council they forsook?
Alas! the prophet seer, he knows their ways too well;
With head between his knees, upon the earth he fell,
Before to-morrow's sun shall tinge that mount with fire,
His head is forfeited, his life will they require.
Oh, prophet seer, thy human heart is weak to comprehend;
Thy work shall last; it shall not fail; this shall not be the end;
Long ages since, the plan of God a niche prepared for thee;
Long ages hence, in unknown tongues thy faithful words shall be.
But for thy heart, a higher thought, a triumph waits thee still,
With joy to suffer or to do, because it is God's will.
Ah! mercy scorned and passed; judgment remaineth now;
Hazael o'er Syria reigns; a crown on John's brow.
Aye, weep ye prophets, weep, for mercy scorned and passed,
O'er human passions uncontrolled, for judgment dire and fast.

And is there naught to us in stories long since told?
Shall mercy be forever ours, though sin be swift and bold?
Beware, fair land, beware! Beware of Israel's cup;
God is not mocked, though sin abound. Take mercy's offer up,
Ere judgment's glittering sword whetted and sharp, shall be,
Ere Sodom raiseth up her voice condemning thee.

More light is the undying watchword of Freemasonry, and yet how many ministers perjure themselves by a lie when they say it is their desire to have and receive all the light and knowledge they can obtain! About one in a hundred tell the truth on this subject, if we judge from actual observation and the experience of others. A man hears that Masonry is a good thing to belong to on account of supposed financial or other benefits not otherwise to be obtained, and so he straightway gets some member to put in his petition. He is elected and receives the degrees, and lies all the way through them.—Freemason.

Freemasonry and Romanism Compared and Examined.—II.

BY P. M. R.

Fifth. Freemasonry uses prayers for the dead.

Romanism, as we all know, inculcates prayers for the dead as one of its leading doctrines.

To the majority of readers, even of old Anti-masons, it will doubtless sound very strange that Masonry should teach as one of its divine principles the use of prayers for the dead, and it will appear still more singular that Protestant ministers proverbial for this denunciation of Romish error should associate themselves with and even swear twenty-eight times on their bare, bended knees to maintain and support forever the very same erroneous principles in Masonry which they so vehemently condemn in Romanism. Yet such is the fact. Hear what Masonry says in its Burial Service, after the coffin is lowered into the grave. "Unto the grave we resign the body of our deceased friend there to remain until the general resurrection in favorable expectation that his immortal soul may then partake of joys which have been prepared for the righteous from the beginning of the world. AND MAY ALMIGHTY GOD of his infinite goodness and the grand tribunal of unbiased justice EXTEND HIS MERCY TOWARD HIM." The language here italicised as clearly indicates the belief in a purgatory or a middle state of departed spirits as if that doctrine were promulgated by authority of a resolution, or by law of the Supreme Council of the 33° and the world may be challenged to produce a Catholic prayer book containing a more emphatic prayer for the dead than the one above quoted from Webb's Monitor of Freemasonry, page 111, a book universally acknowledged as one of the authorities on American Freemasonry, in fact the production of him who is the reputed father of the Masonic system in this country. But that no shadow of doubt may exist on the subject, I will now quote the language of a living author, being no less a person than the celebrated Albert G. Mackey, Past Grand Master, Past Grand High Priest, etc., etc., the most prolific Masonic writer that ever lived, and one who is to-day universally acknowledged in every Grand Lodge jurisdiction in the United States as being pre-eminently above and beyond any other Masonic writer on earth both as a jurist, a historian, and a teacher of Freemasonry. I quote from "Mackey's Masonic Ritualist," Clark and Maynard, New York, publishers, 1873, page 238, "Unto the grave we have resigned the body of our deceased brother, there to remain until the general resurrection in favorable expectation that his immortal soul may then partake of the joys which have been prepared for the righteous from the beginning of the world. AND MAY ALMIGHTY GOD of his infinite goodness at the grand tribunal of unbiased judgment EXTEND HIS MERCY TOWARD HIM." The reader will observe that the language used here by Mackey is, if anything, more forcible than that quoted from Thos. Smith Webb, but both, undoubted high Masonic authors unequivocally teach the doctrine of a middle state and prayers for the dead.

And now, I would ask, how can a minister of an Evangelical Protestant church, how can any professing Christian, in fact, adhere to, support and even swear to maintain a system that thus promulgates doctrines and practices which he knows to be false and which he dare not teach either from his pulpit, the Sunday-school, or the class-meeting? And yet men are found who will do this, who are doing it almost daily, and men, ministers, and other church members who will unblushingly utter the most villainous falsehoods in order to give strength and increased support to this vile system of infamy and sin.

Of course it is unnecessary to enter here upon any lengthened discussion of this erroneous doctrine of prayers for the dead, it being simply my purpose to illustrate the marked coincidence between Romanism and Freemasonry, and at the same time to point out the willful inconsistency, if not down-right hypocrisy of Masonic ministers and other members of our Protestant churches who are adhering Freemasons.

But what says the Word of God on this subject? Does the Bible teach prayers for the dead and an intermediate state of departed spirits? We enquire of Paul—he says, "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle be dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands eternal in the heavens." 2 Cor. v. 1. "I am in a strait betwixt two, having a desire to depart and to be with Christ which is far better." Phil. i. 23. There was no middle place for him; he did not intend to stop at any half-way house on his way to heaven where Christ sitteth at the right hand of God. With Paul, as with every believer, "to be absent from the body is to be present with the Lord." 2 Cor. v. 8. Let us ask John, the beloved disciple, what is his belief in the matter and his answer is emphatic and unmistakable, "If we walk in the light as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another and the blood of Jesus Christ, his Son, cleanseth us from all sin." 1 John i. 7. No sins to be cleansed by purgatorial operations in the hereafter, and hence no prayers or penances for the dead necessary. All our prayers must be offered here, all our sins must be cleansed here, on this earth and while living we must be made regenerate and prepared for those celestial mansions which our Divine Redeemer has promised he has gone to prepare for us. Now let us ask the angel, one of the residents of heaven, who was specially commissioned to unfold to the eyes of John that glorious panoramic vision of the trials and triumphs of the church of Christ, let us ask him what he knows of a middle state and prayers for the dead. Here is John's account of their conversation. "And one of the elders answered, saying unto me, What are these which are arrayed in white robes and whence came they? And I said unto him, Sir, thou knowest. (Now surely he knew if any one did.) And he said to me these are they which came out of great tribulation and have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. Therefore are they before the throne of God and serve him day and night in his temple." Rev. vii., 13, 14. They came out of no middle place, and neither did they undergo any post mortem purgations, but having "come out of a great tribulation" (for all who live godly shall see persecution) "they washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." And last of all, let us ask Jesus himself, if there is really such a thing as a middle state for departed souls, or any necessity for prayers for the dead, and he gives us for answer, "The beggar died and was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom. The rich man also died and was buried, and in hell he lifted up his eyes;" and to the dying thief, "This day thou shalt be with me in paradise." Only two classes mentioned everywhere in God's Word, believers and unbelievers, righteous and unrighteous; only two roads for them on which to travel to eternity, the broad way and narrow way, and only two places for all to arrive at after death, either heaven or hell. There is however a purgatory mentioned in the Bible. I have already stated what it is, but St. Paul puts it in plainer language, and this is the only purgatory which he or any of the apostles or any of the early Christians knew or ever heard of. He says, "Who (Christ) being the brightness of his glory and the express image of his person and upholding all things by the word of his power, when he had by himself PURGED OUR SINS sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high." Heb. i. 1. The Douay version has it "when he had by himself made purgation of our sins." This is the only purgatory and the only middle state of departed souls to be found in the whole Word of God, namely the redemption obtained through the life, passion, death and resurrection of Jesus Christ.

How vain, then, nay how sinful and iniquitous is it for either Freemasonry or Romanism to teach a different doctrine or to pretend that prayers offered at the grave for the departed Mason, or masses offered in the chapel for the departed Romanist can be in any way effectual in relieving the soul from the bondage of sin or procuring for it any of the joys of the celestial world! "This is the accepted time and now is the day of salvation."

Lutheran General Council Delegates and Declarations.

From the Philadelphia Lutheran of the 17th ult., it appears that G. W. Overmyer, an active and earnest Freemason of high degrees, and at present acting High Priest of Lima chapter No. 49, R. A. M., has this year again been elected by the Council District Synod, of Ohio, at its late session in Greensburg, Pa., as delegate to represent its interests on the floor of the General Council in October, prox. at Bethlehem, Pa. Since his return home from Council Dist. Synod, as delegate to that body a few weeks ago, this Masonic brother has attended a meeting of Knights Templar "for drill at Put-in-Bay," where, no doubt, after consultation, instructions were given as to the best mode of procedure for Masons in order to control the various churches and lay "custom-house" and other corner-stones, etc., etc.

That Masonic District of Ohio seems determined that a High Priest of a Masonic lodge shall represent, at its approaching session, "the highest ecclesiastical body of the Lutheran church in this country."

Perhaps it may be good for hierarchical bodies to exchange delegates, though one be a "pure Theism" and the other Christian. This point might be made to agree with "the exceptions" as do the other two points, "mixed communion" and "exchange of pulpits with errorists." How long this Achan in the church is to be tolerated remains to be seen.

The following from the Allen Co. Democrat of the 24th, ult., speaks for itself as a Masonic Council effusion:

A COMPLIMENT TO JUDGE OVERMYER.

Judge Overmyer, of this place, was elected by the Ev. Lutheran District Synod, of Ohio, to represent the interest of said body at the next meeting of the General Council of the Lutheran church in North America, which is called to convene at Bethlehem, Penn., on the 10th of October, 1876. The General Council is the hignest ecclesiastical body of the Lutheran church in this country, and is composed of delegates from the different synods over which it presides. The business transacted is usually of a general ecclesiastical character. We understand the Judge proposes to attend the Convention at Bethlehem, accompanied by his good wife.

In connection with the above I will quote the declarations of the General Council on SECRET SOCIETIES.

Any and all societies for moral and religious ends which do not rest on the supreme authority of God's Word, as contained in the Old and New Testaments, which do not recognize the Lord Jesus Christ as the true God and the only Mediator between God and men, which teach doctrines or have usages or forms of worship condemned in God's Word and in the confessions of his church which assume to themselves what God has given to his church and its ministers, which require undefined obligations, to be assumed by oath, are unchristian, and we solemnly warn our ministers and members against all fellowship with or connivance at associations which have this character. All connection with infidel and immoral associations we consider as requiring the exercise of prompt and decisive discipline, and after faithful and patient monition and teaching from God's Word, the cutting off the persistent and obstinate offender from the communion of the church until he abandons them and shows a true repentance."—See General Council Minutes of 1868, page 22, 23.

On page 25 may be found the following additional declaration: "We declare that we consider secret societies, such as Freemasons, Odd-fellows, etc., as anti-Christian and soul-endangering, and earnestly warn against them."

The Masonic district of Ohio (Council Dist.) has solemnly and repeatedly declared a hearty endorsement of the above declarations. And now, what shall we think of the men who in one breath solemnly, and in the name of the Lord, condemn a thing as "unchristian and soul-endangering," and in the next endorse that same thing by a public recognition of it in one of its highest officers, a Masonic High Priest. Such is Masonry and its cat-paws. Truly the colloquium of Lutheran Synods approacheth slowly. What terrible wounds the Lord is receiving in the house of his friends. "How long, O Lord, how long?" BETA.

STATE AGENT'S REPORT.

AT THE JACKSONVILLE CONVENTION.

MR. PRESIDENT AND BRETHREN: Another year of toil and conflict has closed, and we meet again to review the past and to make our estimate of what remains to be done.

Through the blessing of God I have been permitted during the ten months since we last met, to deliver about 150 lectures in 26 counties of Illinois, including three weeks spent in Iowa. I have spent in the service of the Association 265 days and traveled about 7000 miles. This has involved an expense as follows:

Salary 265 days at $2,	$530.00
Railroad fare,	166.00
Postage and stationary,	5.65
Meals and lodging,	18.30
Other expenses,	2.00
Total expenses,	$722.65
I have collected for the general purposes of the Association,	$199.25
For the Publishing House,	420.00
Cynosure commission,	5.40
Total collections,	$624.65

I have besides distributed a considerable amount of tracts and papers and sold a large number of Anti-masonic publications.

I have little to suggest on the subject of finance except to say that the experiment of a financial agent as well as lecturer, which has been so successfully tried in Michigan, is worthy of a trial in this State.

It may be proper in this connection to notice some of the various obstacles to our work and to point out some of the hopeful indications. Among the former I notice:

First. Torpor of the public conscience on this subject. How manifest this is, and especially in the church and the ministry, is apparent to all. Serpent-like, the lodge has a power of fascination that few are able to withstand, and this malign power is felt alike in the social circle, the pulpit and the press. Satan cries out as of old, "Let us alone, what have we to do with thee. Hast thou come to torment us before the time?" Sad as this indifference is, it is manifestly giving way. Conscience begins to have a voice. Slowly but surely the conviction fastens on the public mind that this question like all others, must be fairly met, and fairly settled on its actual merits, and that discussion cannot and will not be suppressed. Akin to this public indifference is the determination of secretists, abundantly manifest, to resort to any means whereby they may prevent the truth from coming before the people. Freemasonry, like popery and slavery, loves darkness rather than light, and hesitates at no violence which will suppress the truth. The breaking up of a meeting at Rossville by a mob of Masons and their tools; the suppression of free speech at Streator by mob violence and intimidations; and the mobbing of our General Agent at Chillicothe, Mo., but illustrates a power for evil which will doubtless become more and more manifest as this discussion goes on and drives Freemasonry to the wall. I share not in the opinion that the days of martyrdom are all in the past. I think they are in the immediate future.

In all instances like those referred to, the inspiring influence comes from the lodge; and its most respectable members are those who have the greatest responsibility.

A second obstacle to the progress of this reform is the demoralization that comes from the conscious resistance of truth.

Resistance of moral obligation always perverts the conscience and hardens the heart, and this is especially true when it implies wilful falsehood. Every intelligent Mason knows perfectly well that Freemasonry has been fully published to the world, and yet he is bound by his Masonic obligation to pretend that it has never been revealed, and that those great and good men, David Bernard, Nathaniel Colver, Chas. G. Finney and Bishop Hamline are liars and slanderers, and unworthy of being believed; to affirm that they have committed perjury, would be to admit that Masonry has been revealed, but they meanly insinuate that these men were too cowardly to reveal Masonry and have not done so, but have invented a lie about it. This is the practical language of the Masons who dare not positively affirm anything evil of the great and good men who have nobly testified against this giant system of iniquity.

Masonic ministers, while making this lying pretense, have been and still are, living in church fellowship with multitudes of seceding Masons whom they virtually charge with lying and slander, and yet they never remonstrate with them for any violation of either Masonic or Christian obligation. So utterly does Masonry eat out and destroy the Christian consistency and self-respect of its devotees! How terribly must such wickedness react on the heart from which it springs; and in view of the prevalence of Masonry and of this kind of Masonic lying, it is not strange that there should be a general decline in morals, that men should "take heed one of another, and trust not in any brother," and that insecurity and defalcation should so largely characterize our financial operations. The fact that Masonry owes its security to its seemingly incredible abominations, hiding itself behind its own enormities, fully justifies us in applying to its votaries the language of the ancient prophet, "Because ye say we have made a covenant with death, and with hell we are at agreement; when the overflowing scourge shall pass through, it shall not come unto us, for we have made lies our refuge, and under falsehood have we hid ourselves. Therefore, thus saith the Lord God. Behold I lay in Zion for a foundation, a stone, a tiedtr corner stone, a sure foundation. He that believeth shall not make haste. Judgment will also lay to the line, and righteousness to the plummet, and the hail shall sweep away the refuge of lies and the waters shall overflow the hiding place." Isa. xxviii., 15–17.

From the contemplation of so dark a picture, we turn to the many hopeful signs of progress in this reform. I notice first the very general concession that Freemasonry is not ancient, and that King Solomon and the Saints John were as ignorant and innocent of Masonry as they were of the whiskey rings or the Ku-Klux Klans. This concession is of great importance since it follows that Masonry must depend for its authority not on its Divine origin or the influence of great names, but upon what it is and what it does. So, too, with the influence of great names. It is coming to be understood that while Washington, Franklin and Lafayette had a nominal connection with the order—a connection that did amount t endorsement or active sympathy—other great men, Adams, Marshall, Wirt, Webster, Stevens, Seward, Sumner, and others were its earnest opponents. Another sign of progress is the concession that men dare investigate Masonry. Its pretended mysteries are no longer sacred in the eyes of the people. The right to enquire whether this or any other institution is in accordance with the public welfare is being claimed and conceded. The Divine rights of kings, the sacredness of property in slaves and the awful mysteries of Masonry, will have to stand alike divested of all pretended claims to infallibility and strictly responsible to public opinion and criticism.

Another encouraging feature of this reform is that it begins to be conceded that all men have the right of private judgment, and can never be bound to disobey the law of God as written in their consciences. Masonry claims that the Mason is amenable not to his sense of right, but to the Masonic obligation as interpreted by the lodge. Having duped him into taking the obligation with the assurance that it was not to interfere with his duty to his God, his country, his neighbor, or himself, he is coolly told that the obligation is sacred and irrevocable, and that no qualms of conscience can authorize him to discard those "indispensable virtues of a Mason, silence and secrecy."

It now begins to be conceded, even among Masons, that there is a higher law than a Masonic covenant; and that the Mason who deems his Masonic obligation to be inconsistent with his duty to God, is bound to discard that obligation. It begins to be admitted, even in Masonic circles, that the men who have disclosed Masonry from Christian conviction, are justified in so doing. Such an admission, however, by whomsoever made, is a practical repudiation of Masonry; and when it becomes general, and come it will, Masonic obligation will be but a rope of sand, utterly powerless to enslave its victims.

And lastly we can see that, amidst abounding iniquity, there are many hopeful indications of an awakening of the public conscience. The breaking up of the whiskey rings, and the partial punishment of the guilty parties, the defeat of ring politicians, and the nomination of candidates by both great political parties of more than ordinary respectability, the universal demand for honest men, with clean hands, for official positions, the great and blessed revivals of religion under the labors of Moody, Hammond and others, and the earnest, well-directed efforts of the different associations for the promotion of holiness, all indicate that He who was manifested that he might destroy the works of the devil, shall see of the travail of his soul and be satisfied; and that the kingdoms of this earth shall become the kingdom of Christ, and he shall reign forever and ever.

Religious Intelligence.

—The Northwestern Christian Advocate is responsible for the statement that at a National camp meeting for the Promotion of Holiness, recently held near Milwaukee. Guards were stationed at the gates on Sunday to collect entrance fees from those who entered, and that a refreshment stand was kept busy all day selling candy, nuts, apples and lemonade, to aid in paying expenses of the meeting. This reads like a libel, or a description of some of the picnic camp meetings now so popular.

—Mr. Read, the American Minister in Athens, Greece, has obtained from the Government a revocation of the decree prohibiting the sale and circulation of the Bible and the American and British Bible Societies' publications in Greece.

—The Presbyteries of the Presbyterian church in the North will before long begin to vote upon the overtures in relation to the basis of representation sent down to them by the General Assembly. The first overture substitutes fifty ministers for twenty-four as the basis. The second provides one representative for every twenty ministers in a Presbytery. The adoption of the second plan would, it is said, reduce the number of ministers of the General Assembly to about 300.

—It is said that the leading Orthodox pastors of New York city are at present nearly all English or Canadian. The leading Baptists, Armitage and McArthur, are Canadians; Hall is an Irishman; Taylor is English; Hamilton is Scotch; Ormiston, of the Dutch Church is Canadian; the new minister of the Fourteenth Street church is Canadian; and if Dr. Storrs will not accept the Brick Church call, there will be an English minister in that famous pulpit.

—The first Waldensean Church in this country has just been formed in Missouri by a feeble band of Waldenses, who had settled first in South America, but were harrassed out of that country by the constant wars and revolutions going on among the half-civilized Roman Catholic inhabitants. Should this frugal and thrifty band succeed, as they doubtless will do, in Missouri, the pent-up valleys inhabited by the Waldenses in Italy will doubtless soon send swarms of good Christian men, women and children to extend the settlement. Such an immigration should be encouraged.—Witness.

News of the Week.

It is said that Gen. Sherman has gone to Fort Laramie to meet Gen. Crook, with whom he will arrange for an active campaign against the Indians during the coming winter. This means that military pride is nettled at being out-witted by a half-breed chief and so the useless, murderous strife will be kept up.

—Returns from Maine give the Republicans 15,000 majority, a considerable increase.

—Reports from the vicinity of Eagle Lake, Colorado county, Texas, tell of a fearful state of affairs. Scores of negroes are driven from their homes and during August some dozen were killed and a white man, an ex-Sheriff; all by the White Leagues.

—Attorney-general Taft has finally ordered the release of all the imprisoned whisky ring thieves confined here except Rehm. Whether the reasons are sufficient to satisfy justice is a serious question. The whole matter seems to have been mere bargain and sale between the Masonic ring thieves and the Masonic government attorneys. All were promised large immunity and many were let off scot free.

The yellow fever is prevailing at Savannah with its usual terrible effects. Out of twenty-five deaths reported in one day last week, twenty-two were caused by yellow fever. Great numbers of citizens have left the city, and others are to follow. Physicians are overworked, but are doing their full duty, and nobly attending to patients of all classes. Contributions are solicited to aid the Benevolent Association in their work of relieving distress among the sick.—Gen. Crook, marching toward the Black Hills, fell in with a straggling Indian village last week which was routed with a small loss on either side and a large quantity of supplies captured which were greatly needed, as the troops were on quarter rations. On Tuesday the Indians at the various agencies along the Upper Missouri were to be disarmed, and their ponies to be taken from them by the military. The belief is expressed in military circles that the Indians will quietly submit to this proceeding on the part of the Government. Others who know much about Indian character fear there will be serious trouble.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—Reuter's Telegraphic Company has a dispatch from Belgrade, stating that an agreement to suspend hostilities for 10 days has been signed. A special from Berlin says: "Simultaneously with the delivery of a reply to the Powers containing peace conditions, the Porte issued orders on its own initiative for an immediate cessation of all hostilities, on the assumption that Servia and Montenegro would issue similar instructions. The powers received the Porte's reply favorably, and opened negotiations immediately for further joint action. The Porte has confidentially notified the Powers of its firm determination to redress the grievances of the Christians. It is also stated that the British government has instructed its agents in Bosina and Herzegovina to urge the insurgents to cease hostilities.

Reform News.

FRIENDS YEARLY MEETING IN IOWA.

Returning from Missouri by way of Washington and Oskaloosa, Ia., I found at the latter city a large gathering of Friends met in their yearly meeting, and spent a few days quite profitably among them. Their discipline was to undergo revision and some of the friends of our reform were desirous that something should be said on the subject before the clause referring to members of Friends' meeting joining secret societies was considered. Accordingly permission was asked for me to address the meeting, and after one or two unsuccessful efforts, the friends succeeded in fixing the time at 3 o'clock, p. m., on the 11th inst. The majority of those in attendance were evidently in favor of the appointment, and the apparent effort of some who disapproved, to prevent any discussion, only served to deepen the interest and prepare the way for a strong impression and a very successful meeting.

The meeting preceding my appointment, was protracted somewhat beyond the allotted time, but when I began my lecture, the large room was filled to overflowing, and all remained quiet until the close. I felt that it was an occasion for gratitude and thanksgiving to God, and a time for earnest, honest testimony against the secret orders, and believe that, by the help of God, I was enabled to open the eyes of some who had hitherto apprehended little danger from the lodge. I spoke mostly of Blue Lodge Masonry, giving a synopsis of the three degrees with such explanations and comments as seemed proper and the time would permit, alluding briefly to our reform work and its necessity.

At the close many came forward with volunteer expressions of sympathy bidding me "God-speed" in the work. There were present a number of prominent ministers from different States, and one from Maine was especially desirous that I should visit and speak in that part of the country, where the young men are being drawn into the lodges in large numbers.

Aside from the yearly meeting of friends in Oskaloosa, I found many objects of interest. The city itself is one of no mean proportions for an inland town. Besides the numerous churches and fine buildings for public schools, there are two colleges located here, which brings together a large number of young people from abroad. I spoke twice in the United Presbyterian church, where I preached on Sabbath, and shall long remember the kindness of the pastor, Rev. R. McAyeal, and his family, who generously furnished me with a home during my stay. It was here, too, that I met Rev. Mr. Vandever, editor of the Iowa Freeman, for the first time, and had the pleasure of commending his paper to the favorable notice of friends. Bro. V. has the pluck and energy necessary to make the Freeman a grand success, and if others, who are already and who should embark in this enterprise, are equally diligent, a failure will be impossible. I would gladly speak of many whom I met and who greatly cheered me with kind words and acts, but must desist, after saying that if any of our friends have occasion to stop at Oskaloosa, I would advise them, by all means, to put up at the "Burnet House," where they will be well cared for by a warm friend of our cause, and upon reasonable terms. Before leaving Oskaloosa, I purchased a ticket to Indianapolis via Chicago and return, and so the good people may expect me back, accompanied by Edmond Ronayne, inside of forty days. J. P. STODDARD.

THE ILLINOIS STATE MEETING.

Some particulars of the Jacksonville convention from the Secretary's report will be of interest in addition to what has already appeared.

Rev. J. P. Richards, Vice-president, occupied the chair at the opening in the absence of Bishop Dickson, and after the election of officers for the present year, J. C. Graham, of Mercer Co., presided during the remainder of the session, Pres. Allen being absent.

The next anniversary gathering was voted to be held in Streator, the time of meeting to be fixed by agreement of the President, Recording Secretary and Lecturers.

The convention adopted the following

GENERAL RESOLUTIONS:

1. WHEREAS, Freemasonry and all kindred secret organizations are essentially anti-Christian, since Christ, as a Mediator, is ignored in all or nearly all of them;

Resolved, That we would gladly hail the day when all Christian denominations shall exclude from church fellowship the members of all secret orders whose rituals teach any system of religion other than the Christian system.

2. Resolved. That in this, the Centennial year of our Republic we lift our voice of warning and we desire to make it more emphatic than ever, that organized secretism is the greatest enemy to the proper execution of law, and to the very existence of our government.

3. Resolved, That we pledge ourselves to renewed efforts to elect to the responsible offices of state such men as are free from the bonds of the lodge, and that we will vote for the nominees of the American Party.

4. Resolved, That we regard the indiscriminate circulation of Antimasonic literature, such as books, tracts, &c., bearing upon the subject of secretism as of paramount importance, and that we especially endorse the Christian Cynosure, the organ of the N. C. A., as the most powerful lever to be used in the work of this reform and that we earnestly recommend its hearty support everywhere, and we pledge ourselves by every means in our power to augment its circulation.

5. WHEREAS, At an exposition of Freemasonry, given by Mr. Edmond Ronayne of Chicago, assisted by Rev. J. W. Gilbert and others, in the city of Streator, Ill., on the evening of July 31st, 1876, they were shamefully assaulted by a band of "lewd fellows of the baser sort," and minions of the lodge, for no offense but the exercise of free speeeh; and

WHEREAS, A similar indignity and assault were recently offered to our General Agent, Rev. J. P. Stoddard and Mr. E. Ronayne, in the town of Chillicothe, Missouri, by another band of the same sort; therefore

Resolved, That the right of free speech, in this nation is in danger, and if this sacred right is denied, the liberties which are our boast as Americans, will speedily come to an end.

Resolved, That it is the sense of this Association that the above mentioned assaults were both base and cowardly; and as American citizens, we demand protection by law, and call upon all honorable men to sustain us in this righteous demand.

6. Resolved, That we return a vote of thanks to the families of this city which have entertained the members of this convention; and especially to Bro. Samuel French for his kindness to and active part in sustaining this convention; also to the press for courteous and impartial reports of our proceedings.

7. Resolved, That we recommend to the finance committee and financial agent to raise, if possible, the sum of three thousand dollars in Illinois, to sustain a business agent and two State lecturers; and we recommend to the friends of the reform to complete as soon as possible the Carpenter fund.

7. Resolved, That we urge on all the friends of this reform, that as an indispensible element of success they extend the circulation of the Christian Cynosure and increase the tract fund of the N. C. A.

9. Resolved, That the thanks of this convention are due to the citizens of Jacksonville for their hospitality, to the daily press for their fair reports and to the Chapin brass band for music.

ON POLITICS.

WHEREAS, Freemasonry and kindred secret orders control the political action of both the leading political parties of the present day, and

WHEREAS, This Republic cannot long remain part Christian and part pagan, but must soon become all one or the other; and

WHEREAS, Christians should walk by faith, and not by sight; therefore

Resolved, That Christians should vote right as well as pray right; and

Resolved. That Christian right-doing, with faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, is the only sure road to the preservation and perpetuation of our civil and religious liberties.

Resolved, That it is the direct duty of the Christian voters here assembled to nominate a full State and electoral ticket to be supported this fall, and to appoint a State Central Committee of the American Party.

THE ILLINOIS AGENT MEETS MASONIC ARGUMENT IN GREENE CO.

WHITEHALL, Green Co., Ill., Sept. 12, 1876.

DEAR BRO. KELLOGG:—Bro's Stoddard and Ronayne will have to share their laurels with me, for I also have had the honor of being egged.

After the close of our Convention at Jacksonville, I came to this thriving village, and spoke in the Free Methodist church on the evenings of the 9th, 10th, and 11th of Sept. The attendance was good and a good impression was produced, but the wrath of the fraternity was greatly aroused. I may here say that this village has a population of about 1,300, and of these, 100 are Masons; so that about half the voters belong to the lodge, and of course they rule the churches, the press, and public opinion. On Sabbath evening I spoke on the "religion of Masonry," quoting largely from their own works. On concluding, a prominent Mason, church member and Sabbath-school superintendent, told me that I was an "infamous liar," a "despicable wretch," "unfit to live," and many such like expressions, and this was all that any one said in reply.

On Monday evening the rowdies outside were very noisy, but they failed to break up the meeting or seriously disturb us; but on coming out of the church I saw quite a crowd of roughs, and that they meant mischief. As I came into the street a lot of eggs broke around me, on the fence and sidewalk, but none hit me. I remarked that they must take better aim, and accordingly they threw again, and one hit me. A number of ladies were around me, and perhaps I am indebted to them for being treated no worse. And now may the Lord have mercy, not only on the poor tools of the lodge who threw the eggs, but on the ministers, church members, and respectable citizens who inspired the whole affair from hatred to the truth. Yours in the Lord,

H. H. HINMAN.

THE REFORM IN NEW HAMPSHIRE.

CENTER STAFFORD, N. H., Sept. 2, 1876.

The Cynosure brings to us "good news from a far country" every week, and it may do somebody good to know that a faithful and constantly increasing band of brethren in New Hampshire are praying and laboring for the overthrow of the lodge power. We labor under many difficulties, but not so many as our brethren in some places. The lodge controls the press and pulpit, to a great extent, but we have nothing to fear from open violence. Mr. Ronayne could work the Masonic degrees in any city or town in New Hampshire, without interruption; and as soon as we can raise the funds to pay expenses, he is just the man we want to break the prevailing apathy on the subject of Masonry. There is already strong reaction against the lodge. We are zealously distributing Anti-masonic books, sermons and tracts. Ronayne's book sells most rapidly. We are diligently sowing Gospel seed and do not doubt the harvest. We have recently lost and Maine has gained a valuable worker, Prof. J. F. Browne, who has removed to Lewiston, the seat of Bates College. Eld. Browne will no doubt do a good work among the students at Bates. He is an eloquent speaker, a zealous Christian, and bold as a lion in the cause of truth. May the Lord of the harvest raise up in New Hampshire some one to fill his place.

I lectured last Friday evening at Barnstead with encouraging success. An excellent spirit pervaded the meeting. At the close, the congregation arose and sang "All hail the power of Jesus' name," after which reform tracts were distributed and a good number of books sold. The harvest is great but the laborers are few. Eld. David Marks, mentioned in the last Cynosure, is now esteemed as one of the apostles and fathers of the Freewill Baptist denomination. The Masonic dirt thrown at him all brushed off long before he died. Our General Conference has sixteen times condemned Freemasonry and kindred societies. "While the husbandman slept, the enemy sowed tares." So with us, as a people, but God is able to deliver us. S. C. KIMBALL.

Correspondence.

OUR CENTENNIAL LETTER.

PHILADELPHIA. Sept. 2, 1876.

I had a call to-day from Wm Mosher of Stillwater, who was much pleased to have anti-secretism represented here. He cheerfully handed a dollar to the tract fund, an example which ought to have ten thousand imitators.

A Congregationalist minister from an Eastern city, said he had thirty to forty members who were also members of some of the secret societies, and regards the effect as certain that zeal for the church and personal piety diminish as the favor of or interest in the lodges increase.

Prof. Gregory, D. D., of the Presbyterian Union College fought the battles years ago at College and continues loyal to the flag of anti-secretism. He is the author of some admirable works on mental and moral science.

A Massachusetts gentleman persuasively set forth the good of Masonry, and landed in the admission that it really would save men, although he would rather have avoided that particular expression. So the Grand Lodge is not the heaven of the Christian.

A polished lawyer impeached Ronayne as a witness and claimed that Christ is acknowledged in the higher degrees of Masonry.

Let Christians first, patriots second, and every lover of true freedom, socially and individually, plainly express their sentiments; light their lamps and let them shine. There is no use for any bad temper, hundreds groan under the bondage and as one church member to-day said, "I have for years been both a Mason and a member of the church but if I had my time to go over again I would have nothing to do with Freemasonry.

They have caught a young man a member of a Baptist church as a craftsman, soon to be made a Master; he is in business and his father had advised him to join them. He listened attentively, but hope for him did not soar high when he put this question, "If Masons have done anything wrong,—I don't say they have, mind you,—but if they have, don't you think they have done a great deal of good too?" Thus it is! There needs line upon line. This young man reads Lev. v. 4; knows Christ's command against such oaths as Masons require; he knows the danger of sinning against light, and the loss by Esau, yet we see how strong his temptation must be to go through, and what a hero in Christ he would need to be to evercome in this dread encounter.

A young Unitarian accepted the Scripture declaration, concerning Christ's death and resurrection, and the institution of baptism and the supper representative of them, and readily agreed that Freemasonry could not be regarded a Christian institution, although claimed to be a religious one, because of prayer, etc., are in use in the lodge. That Mackey, the great Masonic authority, has so said is a trouble to many Masons.

Several young men have been encouraged and a visitor told me he saw one distributing tracts in a railway, and had the honor of having sarcasms cast at him. Such young men are the moral heroes in the war for the supremacy of Christ over anti-Christ but not by the sword of the Knight Templars nor such folly as they display.

Two gentlemen, one a Mason, the other an enquirer, who would not take the hints and frowns of his friend, but bought several pamphlets. I guess hope sank to zero, if the friend was one of the hopefuls.

Another, who might pass for a preacher, asked what good we expected to do? How soon we expected to break them all up, &c., in good-humoured irony; to which in similar strain I responded that the prospects were worse once, for when the Master was slain people thought his cause lost, yet it was then he conquered. Men have done the same for him ever since, mere appearances not being the law for such people.

Almost daily are young men here showing a keen interest in the question. The pole star must be known by the mariner if he would steer in safety to his port.

My informant was told by a brother minister that the latter could not have been continued in his place if he had not been a Mason. Such statements are common. My informant gave me his own name and address, but did not specify those of his Masonic ministerial brother.

There is ample scope for talk on political and social, as well as church and personal influence of the lodge, but one cannot do all and if the best music is got from the one string it is best to play on it. Paganini did good work with his.

A literary gentleman, supposing me from the East, gravely informed me that this matter had so worked on a man in the West that he had gone crazy about it. He wanted to speak before a Congregational convention and they would not listen to him. He was cracked! His name was—was – ah—he lived at Wheaton.

"Blanchard?" said I. "Yes, yes, that's his name," he said. I held up a Cynosure. "This is edited by him; I read it and don't think it has any such symptoms. It has the clear ring of sound principle and honest expression." I had seen him alive and well since the time he spoke of! He brought his bad eggs to the wrong market that time.

SEPT. 5th. Yesterday a Masonic hero of thirty-three degrees as he told me came bravely up; after strong assertions I challenged him to put them in writing. After consulting a brother Mason he ventured very cautiously to fizzle out his brave words that Christ is acknowledged in the lodge, and that to do so in prayer is in accordance with Masonic law, into the following letter:

"PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 4, 1876.

I believe I can go into any regular constituted lodge of Master Masons in the United States and use the name of Christ in prayer, in harmony with Masonic usage."

I withhold his name, but Bro. Freeman I believe got acquainted with him as a zealous defender of the observances of the mixed pagan and Jewish rites into which "Masonry divine" (so they sing of it) is so busy inveigling modern professing Christians. The last clause of the letter was added after remonstrance that he failed in recording his words or even sentiment, but even then he would not say Masonic law. His chum and himself went as far as they dared according to Masonic law, and farther too. It was evident they had strong misgivings as to recording any thing.

A bird of another color surprised me; an elderly lawyer from New York, in company with a young lady. He was a Mason,—'twas "all humbug," and as it was an evident pleasure for him to fire off in this style I asked a specimen of penmanship which resulted thus;

"I have taken sixteen degrees in Masonry and wish I had my money back, as I regard it absurd."

I withhold his name also meantime, although he didn't appear the style of man who is afraid to stand up to his colors. He was not a member of any church.

A gentleman of mild and courteous manner, is a different specimen; after he had given an exposition of Masonic teaching and its beneficial tendency I requested him also to favor me with his record. After hesitation and nervousness he managed to sign with his name, residence and State as follows:

"Freemasonry is a religion, and if its rules are followed out well, lead its members to heaven. I prefer the words – to the Grand Lodge above."

It ought to be terrible to every believer in Christ, that in this age and country, in this glorious Centennial year, and literally alongside of specimens of the Bible in two hundred of the languages of the world, we should have Americans signing their dependence for life eternal on this strange interloper which is worshipped as "Divine," under the name of Freemasonry! of course the Masons deny or affirm as suits their hearers. It is enough to make Christians shed scalding tears, and become alarmed lest judgment once more may hereafter overwhelm this fair county. What shall the next twenty-five years reveal on this subject?

Yes, Freemasonry is a religion, but not the religion of Christ. Mackey one of their great authorities says, "All the ceremonies of our order are prefaced and terminated with prayer because Masonry is a religious institution."

Freemasonry then is a religious institution. This is claimed by them. We agree with them, and as Christians are bound by every claim of Christ over them, to protest against it as an institution not of Christ, but organized in defiance of his authority, and protest against its worship as false, and as much accureed as the errors denounced by the Apostle in his Galatian letter.

Allow me here to say that Freemasons are exceedingly variable and plausible, for example: When we refer to the introduction of circumcision into the church and its awful censure by the Apostle, they reply, "But we don't introduce any of our ceremonies into any of the churches!" Dear innocents! No, they forget, and like to have Christians forget, that the bodies of Christians are God's temple, or ought to be. When any Christian goes into a Masonic lodge or temple and worships there he as truly profanes God's temple, if his body is God's temple, as did the erring members of Galatia or of Corinth.

SEP. 6th.—A curious illustration of Masonic cheek has been afforded this morning. A gentleman of smooth manners began to instruct your deluded representative in the truth concerning Morgan. He had not been killed as had been alleged. He himself knew a man who had seen him in Spain. It was a purely political dodge for which Morgan had been well paid to keep out of the way, etc.

It was unfortunate for his narrative and equanimity that a "History of the abduction and murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan" appeared like Hamlet's ghost before him at this time. Valance, etc., "all wrong," he cried and cut.

He had made some exquisitely assured statements to which I politely requested his pen and ink, but his word was enough. "Scarcely," I said, "for other Masons would contradict him as he had them, and therefore as I wished to show authority for my statements his letter would oblige me." But he declined to leave his distinguished name.

One man to-day would have suited him for he declared that "he found the pagan rites first rate."

The Rev. Dr. James Chrystal of Brooklyn is an Episcopal writer on Church Discipline &c., and in sympathy with us, so also a clergyman of same church in Baltimore.

Bro. Coyner has handed me fourteen copies of the Carson sermon for distribution, an earnest supporter of the cause. Bro. A. L. Post, always at the post of duty as President, &c., of the Association in Montrose, Pa., gave a call and good account of the work. Bro. Smith of Willimantic, Conn., also called.

The Rev. ——— of Indiana (Pres.) bought a book, and is an earnest outspoken and discreet advocate of the cause; regards it as a truism that a man cannot be both an ardent Christian and Mason at the same time.

In no part of this Exhibition is there a more striking contrast presented to the intelligent Christian than in the sight of the handsome case of Masonic books with emblems of deity, at nearly a right angle and within a few feet of the passage way between it and the Bible case of 200 various languages, published by the American and British and Foreign Bible Societies. How strange that trophies should thus be seen over darkness and paganism in the one case, and of the inroads of Masonry, borrowed from Jewish and pagan rites and ceremonies, upon Christian worship in the other! Surely the sight of such danger, the more dangerous because of its smiles and false assurances, should arouse Christians from their slumber and induce them to nobler effort and self-sacrifice in their Redeemer's service. If they shall lull themselves into a false security and shut their eyes to the dangers which threaten their liberty, personal, social, civil and religious, we see nothing else for it but to learn once more a bitter lesson in the school of experience.

What difference is there in the despotic principle upon which Masonry and Romanism rest? These are antagonists in competition for the control of these United States.

It is no reply to say that Masonry is only for social purposes; as well may it be said that Christianity is only for these purposes, and point in proof to the tea meetings and pic-nics and excursions which are so common. No, Freemasonry is a religion, but is not the religion of Christ. It has a brotherhood, but not the brotherhood of Christians—that, in the Masonic vocabulary, would be a sectarianism!

True Christians differ in opinion regarding the will of their Lord, and Masons complacently admit differences among themselves also. But while the Christian points to Christ as his Lord and Master, to whom does the Mason point? Listen to the echo! to whom? to whom?

T. HODGE.

CAN WE SAVE THE REPUBLIC?

The York, Pa., Daily of Sept. 8th says: "The Crown Prince of Germany spoke as follows to the recent great Masonic festival at the Hague: "Nationalities have created frontiers; Freemasonry desires charity, tolerance, and liberty, without distinction of frontiers. I am happy on this day, which I shall never forget, to be able to raise my voice in Holland, to testify my adhesion to the principles of the order, and to express the hope that, in the struggle engaged in for the free development of the people and the liberty of the human mind, the final victory will remain with the order."

Now, the Crown Prince delivers himself of an immense falsehood, when he tells the world that "Freemasonry desires charity, tolerance, and liberty, etc." It is a well-established fact that Freemasonry is an uncharitable, intolerant and despotic system of degree caste, well adapted to suit rich rogues in their efforts to subvert the liberty of the people and to enrich the few at the expense of the many.

As Freemasonry is a "royal art" that is full of royal titles and royal ideas and principles, it is not difficult to see why the German Prince is so eager to praise it. He makes a great mistake, however, when he thinks the people are stupid enough to be fooled by a doublefaced Crown Prince. And right here it may be well to recall the fact that the silly Prince of Wales is another great admirer of Masonic principles, and especially of that great bawdy principle of the sly order, which excepts only the "wife, mother, sister or daughter" of Freemasons.

Americans who desire to perpetuate our free institutians must not forget that these unprincipled aristocrats have now, in the United States, five hundred thousand sworn friends, who are all under penalty of death, to aid them in the "royal art." There can be no doubt that Freemasons are sworn monarchists; for the Royal Arch oath, with its "murder and treason not excepted," fully explains the late rebellion against the free government and free institutions of the people of the United States. The Prince of Wales and the German royalist know what they are doing, when they talk and act in favor of Freemasonry and its cat-paw societies.

If the Democrats, Republicans and Christians of the United States continue to vote into all the offices of church and state the sworn enemies of civil and religious liberty, they may as well give up all hopes of reform and progress, and prepare themselves for their impending doom. E. J. CHALFANT.

MASONIC PRETENSIONS.

We have seen a statement in a newspaper favoring Masonry, that there were twenty thousand Masons present at the funeral of Benjamin Franklin, which took place in Philadelphia in 1791.

Now in the year 1790 there were only about forty-two thousand people in Philadelphia, the county included. There was no railroad or steam-boat travel in those days; and is it probable that there were as many Masons assembled in Philadelphia at a funeral as would equal nearly one-half the number of its entire population, women and children included?

Even at the present day we have never heard of twenty thousand Masons coming together on any occasion except once in New York city, recently, where there are a million of inhabitants.

Is it likely that this statement of such a large number of Masons being present at Benjamin Franklin's funeral is true? Is it not like all the other statements made by Masons, who "know not what they speak, nor whereof they affirm?"

Of course, Masons expect to derive great credit to "their order," by claiming the illustrious Franklin as one of their number; but this twenty thousand business is going it rather strong. NO FICTION.

OUR MAIL.

J. L. Condon, Martz, Ind., writes:

"I sent one dollar some time in June for Morgan's Expositions. They never came to hand. A Mason is deputy post master. It would be like the craft not to deliver such matter. I spoke about it often. He says they never came. I am heartily in sympathy with the reform and its political movement. I can pray heartily for the success of the cause and I think we ought to vote as we pray. We may not succeed in electing a President this time, but we can start the ball rolling and make a showing that will tell on the future of this government."

Daniel Varney, Fond du Lac, Wis., writes:

"The cause you are engaged in is the cause of God and that he may keep you steadfast in your duty to him is the desire of my heart"

J. P. Stoddard writes from Albany, Mo.:

"Pres. Blanchard and C. A. Blanchard are held in grateful remembrance by the people here. The work goes forward and victory is sure in the end."

J. C. Graham, Viola, Ill., writes:

"I am committed heart and soul to support the American Party, platform and ticket, by my influence and vote and earnestly in my prayers."

J. F. Wilcox, Goodland, Ind., writes:

"I approve of Anti-masons showing bright in the political field."

A. L. Morrison, Sarahsville, Noble Co., O., writes:

"I am 84 years old. Was born an abolitionist and anti-secretist and stayed so. When Christ comes to the world the second time I would not be locked up in a secret lodge for the whole world. I have been preaching anti secrecy for nearly half a century."

M. J. Duryea, So. Jefferson, Hillsdale Co., Mich., writes:

"Do you intend to publish Moody an Sankey's sermons (one or more at each number) as soon as they commence their meetings in Chicago? Please answer through the Cynosure."

We intend to devote two or three columns of our paper weekly to Mr. Moody's sermons while he preaches in this city.

J. L. Smith, Gloversville, N. Y., writes:

"Will you tell me whether Hayes and Wheeler are Freemasons or not. I am not very well posted about them."

Hayes is not a Freemason; he, however, belongs to the Odd-fellows. We cannot say as to Mr. Wheeler's connection with secrecy.

John Torrans, Manistee, Mich., writes:

"This city is full of organizations. There is a blue light and a red light hung out for Masonry; there are Odd-fellows and Good Templars, a working man's union, a grange and a German society called the Leiderkrans, whatever that may be. I have been telling some of the people here I should vote for Walker and Kirkpatrick and they say I will lose my vote. I told them I believed not; if I did I would find it again. No man could lose a vote on such a platform. I think it would be a good plan to publish all the platforms in your paper with yours at the head of the list. . . A good lecture or two would stir the people up some to a sense of their duty. The worst feature I find is that the churches are controlled by those sanctimonious secretists who have taken oaths enough to send them to the warmest country on record. . . I think it my duty to cast my lot in with the people of God at all times."

We intend to publish the five platforms in our political department sometime during the next month.

The question asked in our columns a short time since by Mr. Smith Love, "Is it right for ministers of the Gospel to play croquet?" is answered thus by Hiel Lewis Amboy, Ill.:

"I think it would not be a hard job to show that croquet is sinful from the text, 'Ye are not your own,' etc., as time and influence belong to God."

John Zeigler also says:

"It is not right for ministers or Christians to be spending their time at it."

D. B. Turney, Vera, Ill., writes:

"I make it a point to read aloud to my congregation Ronayne's affidavit, as published in the Cynosure of Aug. 31st If the convention at Jacksonville would nominate Edmond Ronayne for governor of Illinois, it would be a great satisfaction to me to support him."

We have no doubt Mr. Turney will be as glad to support Pres. Allen, as we could hardly have found a more desirable candidate.

Rev. Jos. Pixley, Hudson, Lenawee Co., Mich., sends the name of a new subscriber and writes:

"This gentleman was acquainted with Morgan and was on the bank of the lake when Mrs. Morgan came to identify her husband's body."

Alonzo Collins, Union City, Branch Co., Mich., writes:

"I wish some Anti-masonic lecturer would come to our place this fall. Elder Barlow was with us last fall, but the weather and going was awful and but few attended, but much good I think was done. So I think if we could have some one before the going was bad the whole community would turn out and many subscribers could be obtained for the Cynosure. The Masons are strong here and there are also many strong Anti-masons."

Is there not some lecturer reading the above who can attend to this matter? But friends use your home talent to the best advantage. Get some one in your own town to speak. Let the young folks have discussions and write and read essays on the subject.

J. S. Smith, Cannonville, Delaware Co., N. Y., writes:

"With general interests of such vast magnitude as are pending in the present presidential canvass I should not dare to waste my ballot on any side issue whatever. The present duty seems to be to avert the present danger, and then attend to those more remote evils which surround us."

It is the general interests and the present danger that seems to us to make it our present duty to cast our votes for Walker and Kirkpatrick.

The Sabbath School

LESSON FOR OCT. 1.—STEPHEN'S DEFENSE.

SCRIPTURE.—Acts vii. 1-19. Commit vs. 1-7.

1 Then said the high priest, Are these things so?

2 And he said, Men, brethren, and fathers, hearken: The God of glory appeared unto our father Abraham, when he was in Mesopotamia, before he dwelt in Charran.

3 And said unto him, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and come into the land which I shall shew thee.

4 Then came he out of the land of the Chaldeans, and dwelt in Charran. and from thence, when his father was dead, he removed him into this land, wherein ye now dwell.

5 And he gave him none inheritance in it no, not so much as to set his foot on: yet he promised that he would give it to him for a possession, and to his seed after him, when as yet he had no child.

6 And God spake on this wise, That his seed should sojourn in a strange land and that they should bring them into bondage, and entreat them evil four hundred years.

7 And the nation to whom they shall be in bondage will I judge, said God: and after that shall they come forth and serve me in this place.

8 And he gave him the covenant of circumcision: and so Abraham begat Isaac, and circumcised him the eighth day; and Isaac begat Jacob; and Jacob begat the twelve patriarchs.

9 And the patriarchs, moved with envy, sold Joseph into Egypt: but God was with him,

10 And delivered him out of all his afflictions, and gave him favour and wisdom in the sight of Pharaoh king of Egypt; and he made him governor over Egypt and all his house.

11 Now there came a dearth over all the land of Egypt and Canaan, and great affliction: and our fathers found no sustenance.

12 But when Jacob heard that there was corn in Egypt, he sent out our fathers first.

13 And at the second time Joseph was made known to his brethren: and Joseph's kindred was made known unto Pharaoh.

14 Then sent Joseph, and called his father Jacob to him, and all his kindred, three score and fifteen souls.

15 So Jacob went down into Egypt, and died, he, and our fathers,

16 And were carried over into Sychem, and laid in the sepulchre that Abraham bought for a sum of money of the sons of Emmor, the father of Sychem.

17 But when the time of the promise drew nigh, which God had sworn to Abraham, the people grew and multiplied in Egypt.

18 Till another king arose, which knew not Joseph.

19 The same dealt subtlely with our kindred, and evil entreated our fathers, so that they cast out their young children, to the end they might not live.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Whose are the fathers, and of whom, as concerning the flesh, Christ came, who is over all, God blessed for ever. Amen.—Rom. ix. 5.

The accusation to which Stephen answered is in verse 14 of the preceding chapter, and was brought by "false witnesses."

The plan of Stephen's argument seems to be that from the prophecies and the nature of the old dispensation Jesus Christ was the "end of the law;" that the old worthies, whose lives were "hid with Christ in God," by a like faith with the Apostles, were persecuted and harassed on account of that faith. Read in connection with the lesson Deut. xxxii. 7-14; Ps. cv.; Gal. iii. and iv., and Heb. xiii. 8-22.

PRAY FOR CHICAGO.

Let every Christian remember in pray to God the meetings to be held in this city this autumn. Oh, that this great city might turn unto God as Rochester, N. Y. did, under the labors of Rev. C. G. Finney. There seems to be a general looking to God for his blessing among the more spiritual ones here and the cry: "Oh Lord revive thy work," is never in vain.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 21, 1876.

FIFTY YEARS.

THE SEMI-CENTENNIAL OF THE MORGAN ABDUCTION AND MURDER.

On the 19th of September, 1826, the deep Niagara closed over the most renowned victim of Masonic vengeance. And, as if from his blood, sprang up like gigantic forms, Truth and Justice and outraged Freedom, and their dreadful shadow filled the land. Their shouts rang in the political arena, and, like the still, small voice, their whispers to the conscience more powerfully disturbed the slumbering churches. No great movement in our land ever begun in such mystery and terror. None so quickly and powerfully enlisted its thousands of adherents in the churches and at the polls. None so quickly and utterly overthrew such a combination, so boastingly powerful in numbers and the bonds of its membership.

The story of the few days from the 10th to the 19th of September, 1826, is one of the most thrilling in our history. An intelligent and peaceable man, not the rich prize of banditti, nor the secret emissary of a hostile power, nor a violator of his nation's laws,—but a quiet, industrious and honest citizen, was siezed; borne forcibly from his home; thrust from prison into a close and guarded conveyance, and into prison again; and finally dragged out to a miserable death.

The succeeding events were as stirring as the tragedy had been dark and dreadful. The western counties, and then the whole State of New York was aroused. A foresworn Governor was forced by public opinion into a seeming effort to arrest and punish the perpetrators. The Legislature, more free, ordered investigations and trials; when it was found that the murderous league had seized upon the whole machinery of justice, and from Governor Clinton down to county sheriff Eli Bruce, the whole gang hung desperately together, to shield and clear the murderers. From the spontaneous uprising of an honest people against such a hellish conspiracy, came the Anti-masonic party, in which such names as John Quincy Adams, Daniel Webster, Thaddeus Stevens, Seward, Weed, Rush, Sumner, Fillmore, Wirt, Southwick and Ritner became associated.

Though first showing its power in politics, the reform was soon felt, though more feebly, in the churches. The Baptists of New York, and Congregationalists of New England were more thoroughly aroused in the good work of purification than were other Christian bodies, and the efforts and writings of such men as Bernard, Stearns, Colver and Marks, of the former, and of Finney, Stewart, Thacher and Ide, of the latter, will never lose their power on the convictions of men.

Though abandoned by nine-tenths of its members and so driven from men that it was generally unknown, the lodge was too useful for the enemy of God and men, in finishing his dark designs, to be given up. Like his Eden visit, he has crawled back to the seats of power. But the same great principles are arraged against him and must overcome.

The history of the first uprising against the lodge is most appropriately recalled in this Centennial year of the nation and semi-centennial of its history. In future numbers of the Cynosure this will be attempted in a way to render it attractive and useful in the present revival of Anti-masonry.

THE SOUTHERN WAR CLAIMS.

Under this captain, The Southern Cross, Roman Catholic organ for the South published at Savannah, Georgia, boldly demands that we shall pay damages for subduing the slavery rebellion; which, as the slaveholders were the aggressors and assailants, was but defending our own throats and bosoms from their daggers and muskets. If the Jesuits, who run the church of Rome and control its press, have any well-defined aim, they would seem to hope to excite another war against the North. One is almost aghast to look over the columns of this Southern Cross, and muse on the mountains of bitter hate, burning, savage malignity, and cool impudent falsehood which load its columns. Following are specimens of the Cross of Sept. 9th:

"When Sherman made his infamous fame, by marching to the sea, when no one could oppose him, he left behind him a desolate track of wasted homes, burning towns, devastated farms, plundered institutions, and starving women and children. What amount of money, coin or rag, would repay the people of the South for the harm done to their country, during this one march of this soulless vandal?"

Again the writer says of Sherman: "The general of the army deemed that he was gaining for himself immortality, and so he was, but it was an immortality of execration and undying hate." Yet if there had been the ghost of a chance for Gen. Sherman, whose wife is a deluded devotee of the priests, to be elected to the Presidency, that "soulless vandal" would have received every Roman Catholic vote. Such is the harlot facility of "the man of sin;" that, while one set of these priests write as above, to exasperate and win the ex-rebel whites; another set are roping in the poor ignorant blacks; assuring them that the Pope was always on their side, and their only shelter for time and eternity is their mock-holy church; and, meantime all through the North, the partners of this gang of secret sworn confederates, who boast that their church is semper et ubique eadem, (always and everywhere the same) are claiming those very Federal victories of Sherman and the rest, as won by loyal sons of their church! We all remember how the stars and stripes floated over the palace of Archbishop Hughes of New York, as the proof of his loyalty to the Union during the hottest of the war, and his sanction of the "devastations" for which his Southern Cross claims pay, amounting to more than our national debt! Well does Jeremiah (iii. 3) describe such false religionists as having "a whore's forehead," and incapable of shame. No creatures on earth can equal in shamelessness the priests of a false religion.

TUSCULUM COLLEGE.

This institution is in Greene Co., Home P. O., East Tennessee. Many years ago a young man by the name of Feemster traveled on foot, with pack on back, two hundred miles to get his education at this college. He broke from the body of the Presbyterian church on the question of slavery and reform; started a church and academy in Lowndes county, Mississippi; reared an excellent family, and stood like a prophet of God amid the moral desolations of the region, against slavery, against secret societies, against the rebellion; and though but a step from threatened matyrdom during his public life, died in peace among his friends after the war was over. His son, Rev. Paul Feemster, a graduate of Chicago Theol. Seminary, is now a Professor, and Gomer A. Jones, A. B., a son-in-law of the Elder Feemster, is teacher of French and German in that college where the sainted father-in-law was educated. His daughter, Mrs. Sarah Feemster Jones, is teacher of music. The last two are graduates of Wheaton College. We would say to every parent in the ex-slave states who read the Cynosure, send your children to Tusculum College. Write for catalogues to Prof. P. S. Feemster, Home, Greene Co., East Tennessee.

The Christian Republic, a small monthly, is edited by Messrs. Feemster and Jones, and afforded to subscribers at the price of 75 cents peyear. Both the paper and the College are precisely those "weak things which God has chosen to confound the mighty," and the children of the men now at Tusculum, will probably see that college become a moral light-house of that whole mountain region. The young men and women there educated will become leaders of Southern mind. The Spirit of God dwells with the truth of God. And as the principles of the college become known and popular, the best families of the Southern States will cluster around it. The church will become strong, the local community thriving and intelligent, and it may yet become the Athens of the South. It is to-day one of the best schools for youth in the country, all things considered. Its present Faculty are, Rev. W. S. Doak, A. M., President and Professor of Mental and Moral Science; W. A. Kite, A. B., Professor of Mathematics; Rev. P. S. Feemster, A. M., Professor of Greek; J. G. McFerrin, A. B., Professor of Latin and English Languages; Dr. M. S. Doak, Professor of Physiology; G. A. Jones, A. B., Instructor in French and German and vocal music; Miss Maggie Moore, Teacher of Primary Department; Mrs. S. E. F. Jones, Teacher of Instrumental Music.

CHEEK.—H. W. BEECHER'S PAPER.

H. W. Beecher's publisher is out with circulars in behalf of his paper. This paper was run for years under the supervision of Oliver Johnson, who swore in the Beecher trials that he did not believe in the future endless punishment of the wicked; and that he did believe he had received messages from spirits; that is to say, he was a Universalist and Spiritualist. Mr. Johnson also stated to us that he did not believe that Christ wrought the miracles which the New Testament says he did. The idea and pretense of a "Christian" paper in such hands is merely monstrous. That Christians can take such a paper is equally so.

The circular before us informs the public that this paper "has seriously felt the great commercial depression;" has now secured Lyman Abbott, from the Christian Weekly of the American Tract Society, whose principle is to publish only such tracts as no persons called evangelical will object to. On this principle it mutilated authors, and refused to the last to print tracts against slavery; and it also refuses to publish tracts against secret societies. This Mr. Abbott, says the circular, "will be associated with Mr. Beecher as editor."

But considering Mr. Beecher's influence on the family of Theodore Tilton, his years of friendly intimacy with Victoria Woodhull; his sanction of bigamy in marrying Mrs. McFarland to Richardson while her husband was alive and only separated from her by a stolen Indiana divorce; and considering his known libertinism in doctrine and morals, the following from the circular would seem to be either superlative effrontery or grim joke. The publisher informs the public that—

"Love in the household makes piety in the church and peace and prosperity in the community. The Christian Union will be characteristically a family paper, and will constantly endeavor to help the husband and wife, the parent and child, the master and servant to make the home on earth a true type of the home in heaven."

If the members of Christian churches in this country can swallow such stuff from such sources, the final apostacy which precedes "the day of the Lord" must be nigh. Let us hope that God will bring up some test by which such material may be sloughed off from the churches of Christ.

THE CENTENNIAL TRACT WORK.—Every one who carefully reads the Centennial letters in the Cynosure, will see the great importance of the work being done there. Not only are our leaflets thereby being sent to all parts of the world and thousands of persons learning of this great reform, but an almost constant discussion is daily held at our stand there, and thousands of secretists are shown the evils of the lodge, which they were previously ignorant of. We have just sent Mr. Hodge one hundred and sixteen thousand (116,000) pages of tracts, and we expect he will need as many more before Nov. 10th, the time of closing. How can you do more good with a dollar or five dollars than in aid of this work?

NEWSPAPERS AT THE CENTENNIAL.—Many of our readers and friends will miss the Cynosure while visiting the Centennial this year; but even there they can find a complete file in its proper place in Geo. P. Rowell's Newspaper Building. We advise them to spare an hour from sight-seeing and spend it in reading the interesting reform news now appearing in our columns.

The Special Correspondent of the London Times says it would be difficult to find an apter illustration of the big way in which the Americans do things than that furnished by the "Centennial Newspaper Building," in the Exhibition grounds. Here you may see any one, or, if you like, all of the 8,129 newspapers published regularly in the United States, and see them, one and all, for nothing! You are not only permitted as a favor to see them, but invited, nay, pressed, to confer the favor of entering the building and calling for what paper you like. It is about as cool and agreeable a place—quite apart from its literary attractions—as a visitor to the Exhibition could wish to be offered a chair in. He may at first wonder how, among 8,000 papers, among them such mighty sheets as the New York Herald, he is to get at the small, loved print of his home, thousands of miles away, it may be, over the Rocky Mountains. But the management is so simple that, by consulting the catalogue, or even without the aid of the catalogue, any one can at once find whatever paper he wants. They are pigeonholed on shelves in the alphabetical order of their States or Territories and their towns, the names of which are clearly labelled on the shelves. The proprietors of the Centennial Newspaper Building are advertising agents, the largest in all America—Messrs. G. P. Rowell & Co., of New York. Their enterprise will cost altogether about $20,000, including the building and the expenses of "running" it for six months. The 8,000 and odd American newspapers are declared, by the same authority, to exceed "the combined issues of all the other nations of the earth."

—The articles on the coincidences of Romanism and Freemasonry now appearing in our columns will fix the attention of all readers. The writer has had ample experience of both systems, and has carefully studied their contrasting features. The conclusions will be faithfully and clearly drawn. Will the readers of the Cynosure kindly show these articles to their friends, ministers, and others who are Freemasons, and urge upon them the duty as well as the necessity of thoroughly investigating this matter, and being convinced of wrong doing in their adhesion to Masonry, boldly and fearlessly to renounce their errors and so "have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness."

—A friend asks us to make out and publish a "complete" list "at once" of "all secular and religious papers that have published anti-secret articles." The most complete list we know of is "Rowell's Newspaper Directory" which fills a large volume, and would not be profitable reading should we print it. We promise, however, at the carliest opportunity to print a list of such journals as are heartily in favor of our reform, so far as our observation extends, and also those that profess sympathy with it and are more or less earnest in advocating its principles.

—Dr. R. A. McAyeal of Oskaloosa sends a ringing account of the Oskaloosa meetings, but too late for this week's paper. The Iowa Freeman speaks of Bro. Stoddard's address as "one of the grandest triumphs of oratory and logic to which we have ever listened." Several important changes were made in their Discipline by the Friends, and among them the door was emphatically closed against the lodge.

—The political department being overcrowded this week we make room for the State ticket on this page and promise its future insertion in proper form with an appeal by our earnest friend Kennedy, of the National Committee.

CALIFORNIA STATE TICKET.

Electors: 1st Dist., J. H. Purdy, San Francisco; 2d Dist., A. Musselman, Sacramento; 3d Dist., John Black, Lake Co.; 4th Dist., J. W. Sletson, Stanislaus Co.; At large: Phil. Beck, Yolo Co.; McKendree F. Bishop, Alemada, Alemada Co.

For Congress: 1st Dist., C. A. Merrill, San Francisco; 2d Dist., Levi Rodman, Sacramento; 3d Dist, N. W. Harrow, Lake Co.; 4th Dist., J. B. Watts, Stanislaus Co. For Comptroller: Benjamin Casey, Santa Barbara Co.

—The Highway of Holiness, an excellent little monthly published by several ministers of the United Brethren church, has an account of the Holiness convention held in Streator during the month of July. The meeting was under the charge of the Western Holiness Association, and Messrs. L. B. Kent and J. P. Brooks of the M. E. church were present. The former conducted the Holiness Convention in Wheaton last October of which we published at the time. "The preaching," says the account, "was pointed and clear. Bros. Kent and Brooks shunned not to declare the whole truth. They were bold to set forth the doctrine of entire sanctification, as opposed to the many popular sins of the day. Family card playing, croquet, going to theatres, circuses and shows, church festivals, tobacco using, and oath-bound secret societies, were shown no mercy. Bro. Kent told how holiness led him out of Odd-fellowship. Bro. Brooks stated that holiness saved him from Masonry." The good work of these brethren was signally blessed in Streator and the truth was glorified. May this good work find its laborers and fruits multiplying abundantly.

RONAYNE SUSTAINED.

JACKSONVILLE, Ill., Sept. 6, '76.

To the Public:—

I the undersigned hereby certify that I joined the society of Freemasons in Benton Co., Iowa, in the fall of 1867 and 1868, being initiated, passed and raised in St. Clair lodge No. 164, meeting at that place. I have witnessed the public exposures of Freemasonry by Past Master E. Ronayne of Chicago, and I desire to say that he gives the work of the degrees literally as I received them in the above lodge, and I certify that to the best of my recollection I have never seen these degrees worked better, and but seldom as well. CHARLES G. WEBB.

ALBANY, Mo., Sept. 1, 1876.

I witnessed the public initiation of a candidate into the first or Entered Apprentice degree of Freemasonry last night in Well's Hall, in Chillicothe, Missouri, by Past Master Edmond Ronayne of Chicago; and as I have not only been a Master Mason, but have been Worshipful Master of two lodges, I can certify that he works substantially as we did in the Missouri lodges, and he truly exposes all of the secrets with which I am acquainted. I am also well pleased with his comments and lectures, and I wish him great success in this glorious work.

I also saw the Master's degree worked by E. Ronayne on the night of August 31st, and certify that he exposes the secrets of this degree. He works this degree better than any lodge officer that I have seen in Missouri. Many could not believe that merchants, doctors, preachers, and lawyers would submit to personate their Grand Master Hiram Abiff in this tragic scene, but I assure you upon the word of an honest man that every one of them who is a Master Mason, has undergone the same tragic death, burial, and resurrection that was exhibited last night.

Storm and Sunshine.

Low hang the heavy clouds: the wind
  Grows cold and makes the flowers shiver:
Driv'n by the storm, the frightened brook
  Hastes madly onward to the river.
The birds, in terror, seek their nests,
  Each to his loved ones loudly calling;
The grass bends, trembling to the earth,
  And fast the dreary rain is falling.
This is a weary life at best:
  What is the use, my heart, of living?
'Tis vain to seek for peace and rest—
  The world is cold and unforgiving!

The sun is shining once again,
  With it a glorious rainbow bringing,
Sweet buds are op'ning into flowers,
  From ev'ry tree the birds are singing.
The brook is dancing in the light,
  The bees from rose to rose are straying;
The grass uplifts its many blades,
  With merry leaves the breeze is playing.
This world is cheery after all:
  There is some use, my heart, in living;
Though friends forsake, and shadows fall,
  The sun still shines, and God's forgiving!

Holiness Outside.

It is possible to make the "outside" clean, while impurity dwells within. But it is not possible to realize pureness of heart without a corresponding pureness of life. The grace of sanctification, while inwardly possessed and enjoyed, will indubitably show itself outwardly. A sanctified Christian will be found always separate from sin. Wicked associations are not entered into, nor are the so-called "recreations" that carnal Christians and ungodly sinners practice in common, participated in or countenanced. Gay and costly apparel is laid aside. Ornaments of gold, and flashy and foppish adornments, are put away. Business is placed upon a legitimate basis, and all its interests are managed in strictest conformity to holy principle. The cause of God is heartily supported by willing and generous contributions made from the increase that the Lord doth send. Gifts of charity are bestowed upon the needy, and the widow and the fatherless in their poverty and affliction are remembered as entitled to share in the abundance which the Lord hath given.

Such "fruits" come of the Lord's holy planting. Where they appear, holiness is. Where not seen, there can be no inward grace of holiness. Profession is good, as answering its end. But no volume of profession can atone for a defective and sining life. "Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them."

Beloved, "the foundation of the Lord standeth sure, having this seal, 'The Lord knoweth them that are his,' and 'Let every one that nameth the name of the Lord depart from iniquity.' "—Banner of Holiness.

The Lord's Prayer in Japanese.

The Illustrated Christian Weekly publishes a fac simile of the Lord's Prayer in Japanese, accompanied by the following interesting explanations of some of the peculiarities of the language, by E. W. Clarke:

It is a fac simile of Matthew vi. 9-13, in the Gospel recently issued by the Translation Committee at Yokohama, and is the fairest specimen of printing in Japanese that we have yet seen produced outside of "Dai-nippon." This plate was made in New York.

In glancing at the prayer some few of the characters will appear square and somewhat more compact than the rest, especially in the column on the right hand side where the Japanese would begin to read.

These are Chinese words which are introduced into the writings of Japan in the same way that Latin terms are frequently used in English.

Each Chinese word is explained by a few simple Japanese characters, written in small type on the right margin. This is necessary to enable the common reader to properly understand the meaning.

The Chinese literature has been studied as a classic for many centuries in Japan; but only the Samourai class, or two-sworded men, were permitted to become scholars, and they possessed, in a certain sense, the monopoly of learning.

The common people could only read and write the simpler forms of pure Japanese, and this language has remained up to the present time quite undeveloped.

When we wish to publish the Scriptures to the people, therefore, considerable difficulty arises from the lack of a suitable language which may be equally well understood by all.

If we translate the Bible with the frequent use of the Chinese character we place it entirely beyond the reach of the masses, though we elevate its literary standard in the eyes of the Samourai, and make it more worthy of scholarly respect.

But if we translate into the purely Japanese dialect it becomes simple but childish, and has little merit with the higher class; in fact, it is impossible to properly express spiritual truth in a language so immature and so filled with crude mythological terms as the Japanese.

We are therefore forced to strike a balance between the literary, or classic language, and the simple but insufficient Japanese vernacular. This is partly accomplished by using as few Chinese terms as possible, and then attempting to explain them in the margin so that common people may understand. Hence the use of the small letters to which we just referred.

The Japanese written language, in its pure form, is divided into the Hira-kata and Kata-kana, which differ from each other as script in English differs from ordinary print.

The Kata-kana letters are short, sharp, and quite distinct, and moveable type are much more easily made in this form. The Japanese alphabet of forty-seven characters is usually expressed in this way.

The peculiarity of the Hira-kana may be seen in the tail-like terminations of the words, which are strung together regardless of space and, apparently, of punctuation. For this reason the Lord's Prayer occupies more room, perhaps, than would be required in any other language.

Chinese characters only could easily be put within half the space, and English would hardly take up one-fourth.

We have before us at present a little work just prepared by the Bible Society for the Centennial, with specimens of Scripture in 164 languages or dialects.

The verse which is rendered in all these languages is John iii. 16: "God so loved the world," etc.

The Japanese version of this text occupies a complete page, while in nearly all the other languages four verses are easily placed on a page.

It therefore requires four times as much paper to give the Gospel to Japan as it does to the majority of people in the world.

Most of the characters in the specimen now presented are in the Hira-kana form, for though the Kata-kana might be easiest for moveable type, yet when the printing is done by means of wooden blocks, in which one page occupies the face of one block, it makes little difference to the engraver in which style of character he is required to cut.

In fact, we have frequently written even in English, upon thin paper of a particular size, and then sent it to the Japanese printer, who pasted it against the smooth block and then cut through the thin sheet and returned us half-a-dozen fac simile copies of what we had sent him. This has been the method of printing in Japan for a score of centuries.

We wish that the Lord's Prayer could be circulated in the country by thousands of copies, for it is a Gospel in itself, and we know of no better tract which might carry great blessings with it.

Nothing appears less understood to a Japanese mind than the nature and meaning of prayer. This "talking to God" is a great mystery, and we remember how frequently we were called upon in our Bible-class studies in the interior of the country to explain, or attempt to explain, how we could reasonably and hopefully look up to the invisible One and say, "Our Father which art in heaven."

We were once requested by some bright students to "please write a prayer" for them, and what could better meet their wants in this respect than that which came in response to the humble request of the early disciples, "Lord, teach us to pray."

The Influence of the Stage.

The following testimony on this subject is by Mrs. Fanny Kemble, and is given in the Atlantic Monthly for July:

Amid a tumultuous storm of applause, congratulation, tears, embraces, and a general joyous explosion of unutterable relief at the fortunate termination of my attempt, we went home. And so my life was determined, and I devoted myself to an avocation which I never liked or honored, and about the very nature of which I have never been able to come to any decided opinion. It is in vain that the undoubted specific gifts of great actors and actresses suggest that all gifts are given for rightful exercise, and not suppression; in vain that Shakespeare's plays urge their imperative claim to the most perfect illustration they can receive from historionic interpretation; a business which is incessant excitement and factitious emotion, unworthy of a woman.

At four different periods of my life, I have been constrained by circumstances to maintain myself by the exercise of my dramatic faculty; latterly, it is true, in a less painful and distasteful manner, by reading, instead of acting. But though I have never, I trust, been ungrateful for the power of thus helping myself and others, or forgetful of the obligation I was under to do my appointed work conscientiously in every respect, or unmindful of the precious good regard of so many kind hearts that it has won for me; though I have never lost one iota of my own intense delight in the act of rendering Shakespeare's creations; yet neither have I ever presented myself before an audience without a shrinking feeling of reluctance, or withdrawn from their presence without thinking the excitement I had undergone unhealthy, and the personal exhibition odious.

The Eye of Man in the Future.

Science, says the Medical Press and Circular, gives us interesting details about what the human eye has been and what it may become. The Vedas, of India, which are the most ancient written documents, attest that in times the most remote, but still recorded in history, only two colors were known, black and red. A very long time elapsed before the eye arrived at the perception of the color yellow, and a still longer time before green was distinguished; and it is remarkable that in the most ancient languages the terms which designated yellow insensibly passed to the signification of green. The Greeks had, according to the received opinion now, the perception of color very well developed; and yet authors of a more recent date assure us that in the time of Alexander, Greek painters had for fundamental colors only white, black, red and yellow. The words to designate blue and violet were wanting to the Greeks in the most ancient times of their history; they called these colors gray and black. It is thus that the colors of the rainbow were only distinguished gradually, and the great Aristotle only knew four of them. It is a well known fact that when the colors of the prism are photographed there remains outside the limits of the blue and violet in the spectrum a distinct impression, which our eyes do not recognize as a color. According to physiologists, a time will come when the human eye will be perfected, so as to discern this color as well as the others.

Children's Corner

Take All.

Take my life and let it be Consecrated, Lord, to thee

Take my hands, and let them move
At the impulse of thy love.

Take my feet, and let them be
Swift and beautiful for thee.

Take my voice, and let me sing
Always, only, for my King.

Take my moments and my days
Let them flow in ceaseless praise.

Take my will, and make it thine;
It shall be no longer mine.

Take my heart, it is thine own!
It shall be thy royal throne.

Take my love; my Lord, I pour
At thy feet its treasure-store!

Take myself, and I will be,
Ever, only, all for thee.

Children's Centennial Letter.

Now I think our dear young readers may want to hear something about the Centennial. Philadelphia is behaving itself much better than when I first came. It turned round several times with me, so that north was south, and east, west. The cars, too, I have found out their tricks. In Chicago, which is the pattern city for the United States of course, a passenger waits on the same street for the return car to take him back the way he came, but in this place they run up one street and down another, so that, if you don't watch close, they turn you off into some out-of-the-way place, just to make you too late for your supper.

But come with me and we shall have a look at some things. We go, by a Girard avenue car, past the stone wall which encloses the fine Girard grounds and college, away on until we see the fine scenery of the Schuylkill (a Dutch word, pronounced Schoolkill) river. The scenery is very fine. No big hills in the eye of a Vermonter, or a Swiss, or a Scot, or a man who has seen the Rocky Mountains, but they are charming, covered with verdure, and as the crowded car tugs along, the scene is ever opening fresh delights.

We go into the main building at the end nearest the city. We first visit the Cynosure department, which, though small to the eye of the body, is a great power seen by the eye of the mind. It is a mental telescope and microscope combined. We shall let you see more into it as you grow older. It is the exposition of the exposition, an electric battery which, if touched by some men, prickles them all over and tickle others so that they laugh, while others get cross.

I must, however, tell you first about the main building, and afterwards about other things, for a year's printing of the newspapers would scarcely tell everything. The length of it is 1880 feet and the breadth 464. The ground enclosed for it and others is 236 acres, with a great variety of hill and dale, and wood and water and nice buildings in the most picturesque styles and places. We go across and out of the building and take a steam car which takes us around the grounds, and if you could see how hundreds of strangers stretch their necks and open their eyes! but you don't, for your own are too busy. Five of the buildings cover 48¾ acres. The art gallery is fire proof and cost one and one-half millions of dollars—365 feet long—you can remember that from the number of days in the year. There are also buildings for machinery and agricultural and horticultural display. The total cost is estimated at eight and a half millions of dollars. The buildings are of different colors to denote different objects, national, foreign, restaurants, etc., and each of the States has a house and grounds for its own display. More some other day. T. H.

How a Bird Flies.

The most prominent fact about a bird is a faculty in which it differs from every creature except the bat and insects,—its power of flying. For this purpose, the bird's arm ends in only one long slender finger, instead of a full hand. To this are attached the quills and small feathers (covers) on the upper side, which make up the wing. Observe how light all this is. In the first place, the bones are hollow, then the shafts of the feathers are hollow, and finally, the feathers themselves are made of the most delicate filaments, interlocking and clinging to one another with little grasping hooks of microscopic fineness. Well, how does a bird fly? It seems simple enough to describe, and yet it is a problem that the wisest in such matters have not worked out to everybody's satisfaction. This explanation, by the Duke of Argyle, appears to me to be the best; an open wing forms a hollow on its underside like an inverted saucer; when the wing is forced down, the upward pressure of the air caught under this concavity, lifts the bird up, much as you hoist yourself up between the parallel bars in a gymnasim. But he could never in this way get ahead, and the hardest question is still to be answered. Now, the front edge of the wing, formed of the bones and muscles of the fore-arm, is rigid and unyielding while the hinder margin is merely the soft flexible ends of the feathers; so when the wing is forced down, the air under it finding this margin yielding the easier would rush out here, and in so doing, would bend up the ends of the quills, pushing them forward out of the way which, of course, would tend to shove the bird ahead. This process, quickly repeated, results in the phenomenon of flight. —Scribner.

A Word to the Boys.

Boys, I do not purpose in these few words to preach you a sermon, but simply to have a talk with you, and shall endeavor to correct some erroneous ideas I know to be entertained by many young men and boys of our rural districts.

You sometimes think your rolicking farm life dull, monotonous and extremely laborious, and long for a situation as clerk in some kind of an establishment in the city. If I should tell you that your life on the farm is of the two much the easier, you would undoubtedly think it very strange. But I do say so; for such is the case. Could you but look in upon some of the clerks employed in many of our dry-goods establishments in our cities, and see the labor performed by them in their daily rounds, no words would be needed to convince you of this fact. Your labor is varied; 'tis walking, riding, driving and other changes, all of which are almost indispensable to a proper muscular development and good health, and very unlike the closely-confined, monotonous occupation of daily standing behind a counter or sitting at a desk from the rising sun till near midnight ere your labors are completed and rest comes.

But I hear some young man say, "I will go to the city and make my fortune, rise to honor and opulence, instead of staying here on the farm and working hard to make a little." Young man! banish that idea. When you do away with such thoughts you will have laid more certainly the stepping stone that leads to ambition's goal. Do not think because you were born on a farm that you surely will not rise to honor and independence. Remember what Pope says:

"Honor and fame from no condition rise,
Act well your part, there all the honor lies."

Ah! that's it, "Act well your part." Act it well on the old farm, and in times like these. when fortune smiles one moment and frowns the next, upon the farm is the place to stay, where you are comparatively safe from the ever-changing whirlwind and the contaminating influence of the metropolis.

Selected.

London.—The port of London has every day on its water 1000 ships and 9000 sailors. Upward of 120 persons are added to the population daily, or 40,000 yearly, a birth taking place every five minutes and a death every eight minutes. On an average 28 miles of streets are opened, and 9000 new houses built every year. In its postal districts there is a yearly delivery of 238,000,000 of letters. On the police register there are the names of 120,000 habitual criminals, increasing by many thousands every year.

Home and Farm.

Plain Diet.—This is what children ought on every account to be accustomed to from the first, it is vastly more for their present health and comfort than little nice things with which fond parents are so often apt to vitiate their appetites, and it will save them a deal of mortification in after life. If you make it a point to give them the best of everything; to pamper them with rich cakes, sweetmeats and sugar plums; if you allow them to say with a scowl, "I don't like this or that," "I can't eat that," and then go away and make them a little toast, or kill a chicken for their dainty palates—depend upon it you are doing a great injury, not only on the score of denying a full muscle and rosy cheek, but of forming one of the most inconvenient habits that they can carry along with them in after life. When they come to leave you they will not half the time find anything they can eat—and thus you will prepare them to go chafing and grumbling through life, the veriest slaves in the world. Mothers, listen and be warned in time, the time will come when you will repent seeing your sons and daughters make their homes miserable by complaint.

Wounds on Horses. Whenever an injury is inflicted or a wound made on a horse it should be attended to at once, or with as little delay as possible. If any dirt is in the wound, it should be well cleansed with a soft sponge and lukewarm water. Then with a proper needle (a curved surgeon's needle should be used) and stout silk twist, pass as many stitches through the edges of the wound as will draw them and hold them together. These stitches should not be made as in sewing cloth, but the thread is to be passed through the skin at points directly opposite to each other. The two ends of the thread should be tied into a secure knot after drawing the edges of the wound closely together. If the edges are ragged, some care must be exercised to bring the corresponding parts into their proper place. If swelling takes place, apply cold water until it is reduced, and avoid all irritating or spirituous applications unless they become necessary. Nature will generally perform the cure if assisted to make a proper start.

How to take care of a horse team.—The treatment of horses is an art, and but little understood generally, and where understood not always practiced, so that our horses are pretty well abused animals. This is not only wrong, but a loss, and a considerable one. Treat a horse well always, from colthood up, and it is remarkable how much labor may be got out of him. Treat him, first kindly; never overfeed him, particularly with grain. Have a warm, ventilated stable for him, soft and dry. Feed him regularly; keep him clean; and never overstrain him, not even once. He will then be a servant for you for a long time. You will get from a quarter to a third more time and labor out of him, and this the same horse already practiced and broke to your hand, not needing to be renewed in the young horse that is to supply, prematurely, his place.

Horses at Church.—Going to church on the Sabbath, and to evening meeting, or to lectures, may be productive of good to the hearer, but if during the service, his horse is standing uncovered or half-covered outside, we should contend that he needed a different sort of preaching than he had been accustomed to. Provide a good warm blanket, with proper straps and buckles, and do not rely upon an old worn-out robe, which will most likely blow off, and if it do not does not half cover the horse. The truest Christianity makes us mindful of beings beneath us, whether in station or intelligence.

SEPTEMBER, OCTOBER —AND— NOVEMBER

THE AMERICAN PARTY NOMINATIONS FOR 1876.

FOR PRESIDENT
JAMES B. WALKER,
OF ILLINOIS.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT
DONALD KIRKPATRICK,
OF NEW YORK.

The platform was revised and adopted at Pittsburgh, Pa., in June, 1875. It contains the following live issues:

1st. Christianity against infidelity and heathenism.
2d. A proper observance of the Sabbath.
3d Prohibition of intoxicating liquors as a beverage.
4th. The withdrawal of Masonic charters and prohibition of Masonic oaths.
5th. Civil Rights.
6th. Arbitration better than war.
7th. The Bible in schools.
8th. Monopolies discountenanced.
9th. A return to specie payments.
10th. Maintenance of public credit: protection of loyal citizens; justice to Indians.
11th. A direct vote for President and Vice-president.

THE AMERICAN PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage, is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. The charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discountenanced.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency, and a return to specie payment as soon as practicable.

THREE CHEERS FOR WALKER.

We publish this week the opinions of many friends concerning the American Party. They take different views of the subject and will help our readers to look all around it.

TICKETS.

As fast as orders for tickets come in we enter them up and intend to fill them about the middle of October.

Send on orders. Let every one attend to this matter promptly. Do not put off getting tickets until election day.

It takes money to pay for printing tickets, so when possible send money with your order for tickets. But send for all the tickets you can get men to use whether you can send money or not.

We print next week by request, the five political platforms; that of the American, the Republican, the Prohibition, the Democratic and the Independent Greenback parties. We put them all in the same paper so that our readers can easily compare one with another.

We have received a strong article from Hon. Seth M. Gates, Warsaw, N. Y., which will appear (the Lord willing) in our issue of October 5th.

THE AMERICAN PARTY.

NOTES FROM OUR LETTERS.

J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn., writes:

"I think Mr. Walker's letter of acceptance as given in the Cynosure of Feb. 3d would be one of the best campaign documents that the American Party can use. I would like to know the mind of others on this point. Cannot there be something done to bring the party platform before the Prohibition party in such a way as to have them adopt it, and vote with us? I say us for I intend to vote for the Christians, James B. Walker, and Kirkpatrick. I rejoice that the time has come when a Christian man is nominated for President of the United States. I handed the Cynosure to a Prohibitionist a few days ago and told him his party could not succeed while it was mixed up with lodge men. He read our platform and said he could accept every plank in it. He has since told me he was in the wrong party, and he should vote for Walker."

In regard to the Prohibition party uniting with us, and voting our ticket, will some one interested in that party give us information? Mr. Walker's letter of Acceptance, slightly abreviated, is found in the American Party political tract, No. 25, which every honest voter, who has not already seen it, should read during the coming month.

J. P. Richards, Bowensbury, Hancock Co., Ill., writes:

"I regard the American Party as the only correct political party in our country, and I intend to vote with that party until we elect."

Rev. F. R. Lord, Washington, Ill., writes:

"I shall vote for Walker and Kirkpatrick, Deo volente. Hitched to any part of this reform, I shall pull all I can. The enemy is strong in these parts, though I think on the decline. A number are favorable to the movement, but afraid to step to the front. Please send me a few tracts, No. 25, and also a few tickets."

Let all our friends and electors send for these tickets and tracts.

P. W. Taintor, Jacksonville, Ill., writes:

Just been reading Father Preston's letter, and reply. It appears to me that Mr. Walker is as good a Republican as Mr. Hayes, was in the field first. Republicans sacrifice no principle in voting for Mr. Walker except their secrecy. If they had rather lose, or throw the election into the hands of the Democrats rather than save their Republicanism mixed with Anti-masonry let them take the responsibility. We must live up to the old maxim. Trust in God and keep the powder dry."

Sam'l. H. Davidson, Hillsboro, Ind., writes:

"Political matters are getting very high here in this part of the State. Masonry will be triumphant in the election of either of the old parties."

John Clayton, Vanmeter, Iowa, writes:

"Of two evils I choose neither. I voted for J. Q. Adams in 1824, when he got only three votes in the county where I was raised, in N. C. Have been an abolitionist all my life, and have been a Prohibitionist for fifty years on the temperance question. I hold that it's much easier to do right than wrong, and much more pleasant."

C. G. Fait, Altamont, Kansas, writes:

"I endorse the platform of the American Party, and will not vote to sustain men either in church or State who are in sympathy with the popular secret orders of the day. therefore I hope this State will not be behind the older States in preparing and getting before the people a full reform ticket."

We have not received the electoral ticket for Kansas. If any one reading this will send it to us we will be glad to publish it.

Joseph Smith, Corinna, Maine, writes:

"Not one-eighth of the voters in this vicinity know there is an American Party, to say nothing about the principle that underlies it. How can soldiers in this enlightened land be made to fight except they know for what they fight? So it is in this case, the people are not informed as touching the matter under consideration. The masses here think Masonry a heaven-born institution, therefore dare say nothing against it. But no doubt it is from hell, and not from heaven, and yours is a mighty task to overthrow it. But I do not despair. I believe God is with us, and that we are in the very twilight of that day in the which the slimy monster will be sunk in the very depths of forgotten oblivion."

We hope this letter will inspire our readers with a determination to push forward this work with increased zeal.

J. P. Shattuck, E. Deering, Me., writes:

"In answer to the question proposed by you in regard to the electoral ticket, I am hardly prepared to judge of the wisdom of the suggestion, but will say the reform is needed, and I believe a broad basis to start from, in the end proves more successful. I am willing to do whatever I can towards the good end.and wish I could suggest others to you. I have talked with all classes of people, and find that except among the devotees of secrecy, there is a growing distrust of all secret societies."

J. S. Rice, N. Pownal, Maine, writes:

"I am ready to do all in my power to annihilate all oath-bound secret societies. I believe they are a curse to our country and to the world. I intend to do all I can for their extinction while I live, but I think we must act cautiously. The present is a critical time with our country. The Democrats are exerting themselves to the uttermost to win the day in the next Presidential election. If they should succeed I think it would be one of the greatest calamities that ever befel our country, if not the greatest. It will require the whole united strength of the Republican party to rescue the government from the ruthless hands of the South. If the South can go on as they do with their work of intimidation, oppression and murder under a Republican government, what will they not do if they get the government in their own hands? If there was no danger of the Democrats securing the election with the division in the Republican party I would say by all means vote the American ticket. In view of the danger, I think we had better lie by on the Presidential election for this term. Keep doing in every other particular, and by the time another four years comes round, by the blessing of God, which I believe we shall have with us, we shall be prepared for a wise and successful effort."

We consider this fear of giving the Democrats the victory, by voting the American ticket, groundless, and we think if our friends will sit down calmly with a New York Tribune Almanac, containing the returns of other elections in one hand, and a reasonable estimate of the Anti-masonic vote of 1876 in the other, we think they will agree with us.

J. W. Funk, Myersville, Frederick Co., Md., writes:

"Had I a vote it would be cast for Walker and Kirkpatrick."

S. C. Buck, Fenwick Station, Montcalm Co., Mich., writes:

"You may send me tickets so that I can vote on the right side. If no one else votes that ticket I will."

Wm. Wishart, Ontario, O., writes:

"It is probable that some of us in this region will not vote at all unless we vote for Walker, and I think there are many throughout our State who feel the same way."

Wm. Worth, Starksboro, Addison Co., Vt., writes:

"I will give you the Congressional districts of Vermont and should you be able to get a suitable ticket nominated I will vote that ticket if mine should be the only one cast for it in the State. What we very much want and really need is a lecturer to awaken what old Anti-masons there are living, and many others that dare not speak their feelings in relation to secret societies."

A. C. Read, West Salem, Ohio, writes:

There are quite a number in this section who would vote the American ticket this fall if we had the tickets. Are there any printed? Please inform me."

The tickets are not yet printed, but we have your name down for fifty, which we will forward as soon as ready.

F. F. French, Hardwick, Vt., writes:

"I am in favor of an electoral college in this State this fall. If there is anything I can do towards getting up a ticket, let me know."

If there are other persons in this State who are willing their names should be used on a ticket as electors, we would be glad to have them address us at this office.

Israel Shaw, Fall River, Wis., writes:

"I hope we shall not be swallowed up as the Liberty party was by the Democrats."

L. Sperry, Waupun, Wis., writes:

"Father Preston's reasons for not supporting Walker and Kirkpatrick would do for some folks but not for me. Just as I reasoned when I voted for Clay instead of Birney. I believe in getting on the platform and trusting in God for success."

S. A. Gilley, Durand, Pepin Co., Wis., writes:

"For some years I have been identified in principle and work with the issues made by the American party, and in this cause have ever counted it an honor to 'suffer with Christ.' I had already thought to do what I could to canvass this district for Walker and Kirkpatrick."

Joshua Parish, Delavan, Wis., writes:

"All that I have is on the side of the American party, my prayers, my name, and my vote."

Henry Amadon, Waupun, Wis., writes:

"I am anxious to know if we are to have an electoral ticket in Wisconsin, for I wish to vote for Walker and Kirkpatrick, and there are many others of like precious faith in this place. A vote cast for right principles is never lost, however small that vote may be. In 1844 I left the Democratic party and voted for James G. Birney. I was told that I had thrown away my vote, and was asked by a Democratic brother-in-law if I thought Birney would be elected, and what I thought my vote would amount to. I replied, 'John, that vote of mine will rock the nation.' Now I will ask if that vote of mine, with others, did not rock the nation until it rocked slavery out of it? And now, before I go hence I wish to give this nation another tip, until Masonry with all her offspring is rocked out of it. The cry of 'stay with the party this year,' has been ringing in my ears for the last forty years, and it has lost all of its charms to me. I propose to vote as I pray, and if need be say with Thomas H. Benton, 'solitary and alone I set this ball in motion.'"

The American Ticket and Platform Now and Forever.

BY REV. J. K. ALWOOD.

1. From the deadly antagonism existing between secretism and all righteous principles I am forced to the conclusion that no man has a right to hold any office in either church or state who is not opposed to secretism. The dividing line between right and wrong is too sharp for a man to stand on with an office on his head.

2. It is wrong for me to vote for a man to hold an office which he has no right to hold.

3. There is no evidence that R. B. Hayes is opposed to secretism; but there is conclusive evidence that he is a secretist; hence he has no right to hold any office in church or state.

4. Therefore it would be wrong for me to vote for him to hold any office; and an egregious sin to vote the awfully responsible office of President of these United States upon his head.

5. If it be true, as the venerable Isaac Preston says, that a few thousand anti-secrecy votes may turn the election, then it is true that the heaven-appointed time has come, in answer to many continuous, heart-yearning prayers, for the anti-secrecy army to make itself felt at the heart of this great nation. We have long and patiently sought the ear of our "fair land of Columbia" with our earnest pleadings. But we have plead in vain. She regards not our warning voice. She dances to the music of the clans who gripe for her vitals. She has been lulled to sleep by their syren songs. If now our God has bared her bosom so that we may lay our hand upon her heart and make her feel its weight; for the sake of truth, for the sake of righteousness, for the sake of our children, for the sake of the unborn millions, for the recovery of the faded glory of this Centennial year, for the sake of Christ's kingdom, let us strike the bloodless blow and make her indurate heart quiver and arouse her slumbering conscience. Can we ever sway a political influence at a time when it is impossible to make our existence felt? Common sense says no. If the time is at hand when we can make ourselves felt, who can assure us that the opportunity neglected will ever return? Can we innocently do what no man has a right to do, viz: vote for secretism? Can we innocently neglect what all men ought to do, viz: vote against the bloody monster that is cutting the arteries and sucking the heart's blood of our republic? I cannot understand the logic of anti-secrecy men and anti-secrecy religious papers, that think we must feed rattle snakes to kill copperheads. The truth is this nation must become sick at the stomach before it will disgorge the vile poison, secretism. No sinner ever yet repented until he became sick of his sins. No nation ever repented till it became sick of its sin. So it was with our nation in regard to slavery. The foul virus of secretism is exuding from every pore of this Republic. The Ku Klux, White League &c., &c., are the protectors and instigators of the scoundrels and scoundrelism which our faint-hearted Republican anti-secretists so much dread. If the time is at hand for the nation to feel that secretism and its consequences are intolerable, let us welcome the hour and bless God it has come so soon.

Review of Father Preston's Objections.

West Unity, O.

Dear K:—In the Cynosure of Sept. 7, is an article from our friend, Isaac Preston, which we wish to notice a little. We will begin with the following: "I freely admit that political organization and action in opposition to these oath-bound combinations is right and proper and necessary." Now if political action is necessary, then why not act?

In speaking of our ticket, he says: "And it was my intention previous to the Cincinnati convention to vote that ticket." What that convention revealed in favor of the Republican party or against the Democratic party sufficient to justify such a move, he fails to tell us.

Again, "If there was a possibility of electing our ticket, I would go in for it head and heart and soul, but this is impossible." And how long would we have to wait, if each of us waited until we got in the majority before he acted? What reformer ever acted on that principle and succeeded? To us it looks very much like putting our hands to the plow and looking back, or like rowing half-way across a very rapid and dangerous stream, and then rowing back to rest and take a new start.

We admit that thousands of our colored citizens have been deliberately murdered in cold blood, and we admit, too, that not a white man has ever been punished for one of these murders. And what is his remedy for all this? Why simply to keep the party in power that, Gallio-like, has cared for none of these things. The party that he admits has never brought one of these murderers to justice. We recollect how he denounced the present administration at our convention at Chicago last June, forgetting that up to that time General Hayes was one of its ablest defenders. He draws a very gloomy picture of what might happen if 250,000 Anti-masons should fail to vote the Republican ticket, admitting at the same time that Freemasonry is one of the sorest evil resting on the land, since slavery was abolished. But when did the Republican party, or its standard-bearer, General Hayes, ever say one word against this "sorest evil."

Suppose we admit with him that the great mass of the whites of the South are as inveterate rebels as they were in 1861, and as invulnerable to all moral influence on this subject as the fallen angels. We would ask, who removed the disability from these "inveterate rebels" and made them eligible to seats in Congress? Why Father Preston's Republican party, of course.

He not only denounces Freemasonry, but its entire progeny, including Odd-fellowship, of course. He speaks of another evil as next to

A Tract Fund for the Free Distribution of Tracts

HAS BEEN SECURED AND SHOULD NEVER BE EXHAUSTED. A friend has pledged this fund a dollar for every other dollar received, so EVERY NEW SUBSCRIPTION TO THE TRACT FUND COUNTS DOUBLE, and thus $10.00 pays for 20,000 pages of tracts.

The distribution of these tracts has already saved hundreds of young men from the lodge, but there is a great lack of funds to supply the constantly increasing demand for Free Tracts.

During the year ending July 1st, 1875 a little less than 150.000 pages of Cynosure Tracts were gratuitously sent out, mostly in very small lots. The present demand is fully 100.000 pages per month. but funds are lacking to meet it.

Many of our most earnest workers in this cause of God are poor men, who would be glad to circulate thousands of pages of Antimasonic literature if they could have them free.

these, but does not mention it by name, but we suppose it to be intemperance, and what is the record of the reformers that composed the Cincinnati convention on this subject? There was a reformer beforethat convention that had dared to beard this great lion in its den, and what was done with him? Why he was laid on the shelf. And yet the action of this convention took even Father Preston from our ranks—politically. And now shall 250,000 Anti-masons vote for such a party thereby saying, "Well done, good and faithful servant. If you have done wrong, we have failed to see it." What would they care for our opinions on secrecy, intemperance, or any other evil, if in the end, we gave them our votes; we would be laughed at, as we would deserve to be. On the other hand let 250,000 reformers cast their votes against these acts, and whichever party gets into power, rest assured, the warning will be heeded. J. G. MATTOON.

We are glad to state that the campaign clubs have commenced to come in. We hope they will continue to come thicker and faster. We thank those who have already sent in clubs.

Ferdinand Huber, Mt. Heron, O., sends a campaign club of six subscribers; James Laird, Wayne, Henry Co., Iowa; one of five. John Viall, Delavan, Ill., sends a campaign club of nine; J. P. Stoddard, one of six, and one subscription for a year. Hiram Summy, Pleasantville, Iowa, sends a club of seven at forty cents each. John Ward, Owaneco, Ill., sends a club of ten at forty cents.

James Kennedy, Los Gatos, Cal., sends a copy of the Cynosure to twenty-four different families in California and writes: "I think if a few friends in every State would adopt this plan it would arouse the people to action, and greatly increase the circulation of the Cynosure. If 100 friends would do this, t would send the Cynosure into 2,000 new families, and probably one half would become regular subscribers. Dr. Marsh, Elmwood, Ill. * * * "I send you also the following subscriptions (four) to the Cynosure which I wish to have continued until the close of the year when we hope to send you a rousing club (i. e. the very best we can do). The "best" last year was nearly fifty. In this Centennial year "hundreds" are in fashion.

Fifteen (instead of thirty-three persons as reported) of those who received the Cynosure through the kindness of the President of the Connecticut State Association have renewed their subscriptions. The former statement was a mistake.

DO YOU DISTRIBUTE TRACTS?

(This friend has the right view of this part of the work.)

"For many reasons that I will not now give you, I have concluded to give tracts, the tract work, and everything relating to the tract department of the great anti-secret reform my particular attention. I am going to have a new science called tractology, and I intend to study it up and down and x ways.

I believe that if you would give greater prominence to the tract department it would result in your getting more money for tract work. Perhaps if you would take a whole column for that "free tract" notice, and put it in larger type, it would bring in more dollars for tracts. The scattering of tracts brings subscribers, purchasers of books, money, friends, writers, workers, etc. They prepare the way for lectures; they stimulate all who are working in any other reform, and no one can imagine all the good they do. Few are aware of the great power of good tracts. "A word to the wise is sufficient." E. J. C.

THE WISCONSIN STATE MEETING.

It is announced by the Secretary that the annual convention of the Wisconsin State Christian Association will be held in Delavan, Walworth Co., October 11th to 13th. The General Secretary of the N. C. A., Rev. J. P. Stoddard, and Past Master Ronayne are invited and will probably attend. Let immediate steps be taken by every local association or reform church to send a delegation; and let the questions to be settled at that meeting be discussed as much as possible beforehand through every available channel.

—Mr. Ronayne has received letters inviting him to visit various places in Ohio, Oberlin, Berea, Pataskala, Newark, Lamertine among the number. He will fill these appointments, the Lord willing, in October, and will set the exact day for each course of lectures as early as possible; meantime every preparation possible should be made so that no unnecessary delays shall occur.

CONVENTION AT SANDY LAKE, MERCER CO., PENNSYLVANIA.

The Western Pennsylvania Christian Association will hold its first anniversary meeting in the Wesleyan Methodist Church at Sandy Lake, Mercer Co., Pa., commencing on Tuesday, October 31st, at 7 o'clock P. M., and continue over the two following days. Rev. A. M. Milligan, D.D., and Prof. J. R. W. Sloane, D.D., of Pittsburgh, and other distinguished speakers will be present and address the Convention.

Free entertainment will be provided for all who come. Let the friends of Christ come up to give help against the Masonic anti-Christ. Let the lovers of republican liberty rally for the overthrow of Masonic despotism. Let the friends of law and order come and plead for impartial justice against the sworn favoritism of the lodge. Gather from all over western Pennsylvania and may the Lord of Hosts be with us.

By order of the Executive Committee.
REV. C. F. HAWLEY, Cor. Sec.

In conducting the government of the world there are not only sovereigns and ministers, but SECRET SOCIETIES to be considered which have agents everywhere,—reckless agents, who countenance assassination and if necessary, can produce a massacre.—From a speech in Aylesbury, England, Sep. 20, by Disraeli, Lord Beaconsfield, late for the second time British Premier and leader of the "Tory" party.

Topics of the Time.

The city of Savannah is still ravaged by the yellow fever, the deaths last week averaging twenty-five or thirty daily. All the more wealthy people have fled from the plague stricken city, and of those remaining, more than one half of whom are poor negroes, almost one half are reported sick. To relieve this terrible state aid is being forwarded from different points in the North, and the need of such relief in bounteous measure is apparent. New York and Chicago, with other cities are hastening forward their contributions. The authorities of Savannah are doing all in their power to alleviate distress and purify the city; but the coming on of colder weather is regarded as the only sure means of abating the epidemic.

On the 18th inst. three men well known for their labors in religion and education departed this life. Bishop Edmund S. Janes, of the Methodist Episcopal church, died at his home in New York. He had suffered for years from a chronic disease which took a dangerous turn three weeks before his death. During the past quarter of a century he has filled many and important positions in evangelical enterprises and has impressed the Methodist church it is believed as much as any man since Bishop Asbury. On the same day Prof. E. S. Snell of Amherst College died. His valuable labors in connection with that institution will long be remembered by its friends and graduates, and in scores of other colleges also where his text-books in Natural Philosophy and Astronomy have been used for years. More widely known was Prof. Charles Davis, the eminent mathematician, a graduate of West Point in 1815; he has nearly ever since been connected with that institution in various capacities, being fourteen years Professor of Mathematics. He was the author of a full course of mathematical text-books, whose elementary portions have introduced millions of young Americans into the multitudinous activities of business and professional life.

If secret societies broke up the Union in 1861 they have now made it all right by patching it together, or; at least, that is the last great and glorious work the Odd-fellows have had in hand. Last Wednesday they captured Philadelphia and marched through her streets in triumph with blazing jewels and finery covering their persons. It was their Grand Lodge and visitors getting ready to reunite the disrupted States. Near the Exposition grounds they were addressed by four gentlemen representing respectively the East, South, West and North, who after their addresses were formally escorted to the central stand and there took each other by the hand, a visible type of brotherhood and union, while the bands played "Hail Columbia." Such demonstrations by secret fraternities stick the Union together about as well as shoemaker's wax. Through all our trials as a nation the lodges, vulture-like, hovered over watching for prey, no matter from which side it fell. The rights of humanity it ignored in the slave, and justice it set at naught from first to last in all the war. Organized secretism is organized disunion. It is rebellion against those true fraternal bands which bind society, which make the family the God-ordained unit of the human race; against those principles which make the nations the servants of the Most High.

A prominent railway official of this city, a Freemason and church member, made a singular confession a while since to a gentleman well known among the prominent advocates of our reform. Said he, "You know how it is about these obligations. Now, I must say that my Masonic obligation has done more to keep me from adultery than any pledge made to the church or religion." This acknowledgement is a rare illustration of the fact that idolatrous religions have more power over worldly minds than does the true.

Another case of this kind among theatrical circles has had a wide publicity lately. An actor named Stevenson cultivated such an intimacy with a Mrs. Lyon, also a member of the profession, that in this city and New York it was a subject of scandal and nearly led to a tragedy when the husband knew of it. Criminality it seems was prevented by a friend of the gentleman, a member of the same lodge, who says that he spoke to Stevenson "of his duties as a Mason in the premises, one of which was the oath that no Mason shall make any attempt to seduce the wife of another," and got him to break off his attentions. Now these cases prove nothing for Masonic virtue. Their Masonic oaths have only a very limited restriction. Beyond that it is not likely such men would have any limitation except fear of detection and popular rebuke. The Masonic oath acts in fact rather as a license than as a prohibition.

THE MAN OF MACEDONIA.

Acts xvi. 6–10.

"O for a vision and a voice to lead me,
To show me plainly where my work shall lie!
Look where I may, fresh hindrances impede me;
Vain and unanswered seems my earnest cry"

Hush! unbelieving one! But for thy blindness,
But for thine own impatience and self-will,
Thou wouldst see thy Master's loving kindness,
Who, by these hindrances is leading still.

He who of old, through Phrygia and Galatia,
Led the Apostle Paul, and blessed him there;
If he forbid to "preach the word in Asia,"
Must have prepared for thee a work elsewhere.

Courage and patience! Is the Master sleeping?
Has he no plan, no purposes of love?
What though awhile his counsel he is keeping?
It is maturing in the world above.

Wait on the Lord! In his right hand be hidden,
And go not forth in haste to strive alone:
Shun—like a sin!—the tempting word "forbidden:"
God's love for souls, be sure, exceeds thine own.

The Master cares! Why feel, or seem so lonely?
Nothing can interrupt true work for God:
Work may be changed; it cannot cease, if only
We are resolved to cleave unto the Lord.

None are good works for thee, but work appointed:
Ask to be filled with knowledge of his will,
Cost what it may! Why live a life disjointed?
One work throughout! God's pleasure to fulfil!

But if, indeed, some special work await thee,
Canst thou afford this waiting time to lose?
By each successive task God educates thee;
What if the iron be too blunt to use?

Can walls be builded with untempered mortar?
Or fish be caught in the unmended snare?
Must not the metal pass through fire and water,
If for the battle-field it would prepare!

O, thou unpolished shaft! Why leave the quiver?
O thou blind axe! What forest canst thou hew?
Unsharpened sword! canst thou the oppressed deliver?
Go back to thine own Maker's forge anew.

Submit thyself to God for preparation;
Seek not to teach thy Master and thy Lord!
Call it not "zeal." It is a base temptation,
Satan is pleased when man dictates to God.

Down with thy pride! With holy vengeance trample
On each self-flattering fancy that appears!
Did not the Lord himself for our example,
Lie hid in Nazareth for thirty years?

Wait the appointed time for work appointed,
Lest by the tempter's wiles thou be ensnared;
Fresh be the oil with which thou art anointed;
Let God prepare thee for the work prepared.

FREEMASONRY AND ROMANISM COMPARED AND EXAMINED.—III.

BY P. M. R.

Thus it is apparent that both Freemasonry and Romanism pretend to base the authority of their most important and fundamental doctrines on tradition — the former constantly referring to what is termed Masonic tradition in support of its false teaching and lying legends and the latter to ecclesiastical and apostolic tradition to prove the divine origin of those numerous dogmas and practices which have been invented and manufactured from time to time, and for which there seems to be no apparent necessity, unless it be to bring money into the treasury of the Church and to keep the common people in ignorance, that they might be thereby the more easily awed into compliance and ubmission.

But to define still more accurately the peculiar coincidence between Romanism and Freemasonry in this matter of tradition, I shall give the authoritative declarations of both systems as they are promulgated and set forth in the standard works of each. Romanism teaches as follows: "I most steadfastly admit and embrace apostolic and ecclesiastical tradition and all other OBSERVANCES and CONSTITUTIONS of the same Church.—Creed of Pope Pius IV., Art. 13.

Freemasonry imposes it edicts thus: "I furthermore solemnly promise and swear that I will conform to and abide by all the laws, rules and regulations of the Master Mason's degree * * * and that I will ever maintain and support the constitution, laws and edicts of the Grand Lodge under which the same shall be holden."—Master Mason's Obligation.

Here then both organizations rigidly enforce a strict compliance with and adherence to all the observances and constitutions, the laws and edicts peculiar to such system, and a wilful violation of this principle on the part of any of their members will consign the Romanist to hell for all eternity, while the Freemason by his contumacy or disobedience leaves himself not only liable to expulsion, but, if it can be safely accomplished, to a most barbarous and cruel death. But let us hear the voice of Rome still further. I copy from "A Manuel of the Catholic Religion," by Rev. Father F. X. Quenninger, D.D., Missionary of the Society of Jesus, and bearing the imprimature of the Rev. John Henry Luers, Bishop of Fort Wayne. On page 16 we read as follows:

Q. "How many sources are there from which we derive our knowledge in matters of faith?

A. In general there are two sources, namely: The Holy Scriptures and tradition."

And again on page 19: "Are the Holy Scriptures the only source and rule of faith? By no means; for first, they do not contain all that God has revealed, as they themselves bear witness by referring to oral tradition."

I would invite the special attention of Protestants in general, and more particularly of Masonic ministers to this distinctive feature of the Roman faith, and ask them how can they with any show of consistency protest against and condemn traditionary legends and false teaching in Romanism, while at the same time they themselves either openly adhere to and maintain or else passively acquiesce in the very self-same doctrine and traditionary legends in Freemasonry? Romanism rejects the Bible either in whole or in part, and puts what she calls ecclesiastical and apostolic tradition in its place, while Freemasonry authoritatively declares in Chase's Digest of Masonic Law, pages 207-8, "Blue Lodge Masonry (that is Ancient Craft Masonry) has nothing whatever to do with the Bible. It is not founded on the Bible; if it was it would not be Freemasonry; it would be something else." Now where is the difference between the teaching of Rome and the teaching of the Lodge on this subject?

But again, from the "Manuel of the Catholic Religion," page 22: "How do we come to know that portion of God's revelation which is not contained or found recorded in Holy Scripture? By means of oral transmission or tradition." And again on page 23: "Where are the traditions of the Church to be found? In the living ministry of the Church; in the writings of the holy fathers, and in the approved ecclesiastical writers of the first centuries of Christianity." Thus it is very evident that Romanism has no other foundation for its fundamental doctrines and cermonials but that which may be found in the so-called "traditions of the Church," while Freemasonry rests its claims solely on what is termed Masonic tradition, and like her twin sister Rome she unblushingly promulgates these legends and traditions as being equal to if not superior to the divine instruction of the Holy Ghost as contained in the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments. But the question may be asked, How far does Freemasonry really pretend to go in regard to its claims as being founded on tradition? Evangelical Protestants will hardly credit the assertion, but it is nevertheless a fact that Freemasonry through its accredited Grand Masters, Grand Orators, Grand Secretaries, Historians, Antiquarians, &c., claims to have been "the original religion of man," and that "it must ultimately be the sole religion of the human race," and yet that its only foundation for such an absurd and ridiculous assumption is altogether based and can only be supported by its so-called "Masonic tradition." This is about as nonsensical and silly as it is to assert that the various mummeries and empty forms of Rome were practiced by Paul or John or Peter in the infancy of the Christian Church, or that any person dying without having holy oil rubbed to certain parts of his body by the right hand thumb of a priest can never enter the kingdom of heaven. But what is the standard authority of Freemasonry on this subject? What does it claim for its traditions, and are they set forth as infallible guide-marks in matters of such vast importance. I will refer first to Mackey's Lexicon, page 491, under the word "TRADITIONS." "The legends and traditions of Freemasonry constitute a very considerable and important part of its ritual. In many instances these traditions have been corrupted by anachronisms and other errors which have naturally crept into them during a long series of oral transmissions." Now here is a pretty state of things — the "Masonic traditions" corrupt and erroneous, and yet these very same traditions are the only support of the entire system. What then is the Masonic student to do? How is the searcher after Masonic light, more light, and further light to distinguish between truth and falsehood, and thus arrive at a saving knowledge of that religion which so many of our church members now-a-days so shamelessly proclaim to be "good enough" for them? Albert G. Mackey, the Masonic pope, infallibly instructs them as follows, on page 492: "The intelligent Mason will always however be able after a little consideration to separate the substratum of truth from the superstructure of error which has been imposed upon it." This is Romanism exactly, "a substratum of truth," with a "superstructure of error imposed upon it," and this entire mass of substratum and superstructure cemented and bound together by ecclesiastic and Masonic tradition. And as Romanism only refers to the Bible and sanctions its circulation among its members in countries where Protestantism prevails, and where of course an opposite course would be detrimental to its interests, so Freemasonry in all professedly Christian nations makes great parade of the Bible, has it ostentatiously carried by the oldest Mason in all its processions, and has it spread upon its altars during lodge work, and while engaged in its pretended religious ceremonies, while at the same time both organizations can refer to tradition and to tradition only in proof of their numerous lying legends and unscriptural and anti-scriptural doctrines. But as Masonic tradition is thus confessedly false and erroneous according to Dr. Mackey, surely Freemasonry can lay claim to nothing more than merely as a means of social intercourse among its members, and its lodges mere free-and-easy convivial clubs having no reference whatever to religion or the inculcation of so-called religious truths upon its members. On this subject I shall quote from A. L. C. Pierson's "Traditions of Freemasonry," page 15, and will remark en passant that this same A. L. C. Pierson is "Past Grand Master, Past Grand High Priest, Grand Captain General of the Grand Encampment of the U. S. of A. and Sovereign Grand Inspector General of the 33d degree," and is also at this present writing the Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of Minnesota, and hence, as an authority as regards the aims, objects and claims of Freemasonry has scarcely an equal and no superior in the entire Masonic world. Hear what he says and let every reader of this article show it to his minister whether Mason or non-Mason, and if the minister be in connection with the lodge insist upon it that he show cause why he should not be branded as a hypocrite in claiming to be an evangelical Protestant while at the same time he swears to maintain and support doctrines identical in every particular with those of Rome. Pierson says, concerning Freemasonry: "Thus, without any reference to forms and modes of faith it (Freemasonry) furnishes a series of indirect evidences which silently operate to establish the great and general principles of religion and points to that triumphant system which was the object of all preceding dispensations and must ultimately be the sole religion of the human race, because it is the only religion in which the plan of salvation is clearly developed," and he presents his book "to the public in the hope that Masons from its perusal will be awakened to a higher appreciation of the institution and be induced to investigate its claims as a scientific society of known antiquity and also the claim of the writer that it was the original religion of man." Traditions of Freemasonry—preface page 9.

It would be useless to still further quote from Freemasonry regarding its traditions, as their name is legion and would only swell these articles to an inconvenient length. The main object sought is to compare the various coincidences of Freemasonry and Romanism as well with one another as with the word of God, and thus conclusively showing the falsehood of both and the utter inconsistency of professing Protestant Christians in rejecting and protesting against the doctrine of Rome as taught by her priests and bishops from Romish altars and pulpits, while they at the same time believe in, adhere to, and lie about the selfsame identical doctrines when taught by the Worshipful Masters and High Priests of Freemasonry from the oriental chairs of lodges and chapters. It may be mentioned, in one word, that if tradition, either Masonic, ecclesiastical or apostolic, be in pure harmony with the revealed will of God as contained in the books of the Old and New Testament then we have no use for it, but if this tradition contradicts the Bible then we are bound to reject it because we must obey God rather than man; so that in either case tradition is not to be accepted in matters relating to man's salvation and hence no professing Christian has any business to sanction by his presence his money, his name and his time the promulgation of a doctrine so pernicious and which has been so emphatically condemned by Jesus Christ and his apostles.

Seceded Masons.

The following among others, are believed to be good and valid reasons why the name and address of every outspoken seceded Mason in in this country, who is now living, should be promptly reported to the Cynosure office, for publication.

First: The largest possible amount of testimony to the viciousness of the Masonic institution, should be arrayed, to convince the outside public that it is vicious, and the names and address of seceders, in overwhelming numbers, will go far to realize that result.

Second: The Masonic fraternity boast a membership in the United States of nearly six hundred thousand men, and when any of the craft see the Cynosure list of seceders, they laugh and ask what does that meagre array of 150 names amount to against the united testimony of all the balance of the fraternity in favor of the institution? With the unthinking multitude, this appears to be a knock down, an ad captantum argument, a poser perfectly unanswerable by all who would do away with that institution. Therefore it behooves us for the good of our cause, to set vigorously at work and increase our list, until it becomes so formidable from the sheer force of numbers, as to be in every respect perfectly irresistible. This we can do and easily, for there are many thousands of seceders in the United States who would gladly lend their names as a testimony against the lodge, if apprised of the necessity for it. Let us, then, at once ferret them out and publish them to the world, that their good example may not be lost to mankind, and their light remain no longer hid under a bushel, doing neither God nor humanity any service. Let us make them available and serviceable, that their conduct may redound to the glory of God and the advantage of man.

Third: By showing an overwhelming number of fearless and resolute seceded Masons, it will encourage thousands of other Masons who secretly despise the institution, to come boldly out, renounce and denounce it, as of right they should do, and thus produce an effect upon the ouside public of a most salutary character, causing among them a freer expression of thought as to Masonry, and a more open, general and determined opposition to lodgeism and all its concomitant and attendant evils.

Fourth: By knowing the names and residences of seceded Masons in sufficiently large numbers, it will afford opportunity, as occasion requires, in most suits at law between Masons and non-Masons, to subpoena and produce those who may be wanted, in open Court, there to testify to the Masonic obligations and their extreme party character, as evidence material to the purpose of purging bench and panel of whatsoever pertains to the Masonic institution, and thus in some measure check the shameful subversion of justice now so frequent and glaring in all our Courts.

Fifth: A large and widely extended list will furnish the means, in many instances, for the introduction of the testimony of seceders directly in open Court, which is much the better, more effective, and cheaper mode of eliciting their evidence, than would be its introduction upon commissions to be issued by the Court, which in most cases would have to be the mode of its introduction where only a limited or circumscribed list of seceders is presented to select witnesses from.

Sixth: Masonry, by her forms and ceremonies of initiation, professes to make her initiates "free," the title bestowed upon them being "Free"—Masons. To effect this purpose, she must needs control the Courts and so far as possible execute in her own interest the laws of every government within whose jurisdiction she is permitted to exist. And, unless she can control the Courts, subvert justice, and relieve her initiates from the liabilities, penalties and rigors of the laws of every such government, she does not and cannot fulfill her part of the contract with them, because she does not and cannot make them "free" in a Masonic sense. To make them "free," Masonically speaking, she must maintain their immunity from punishment by, and their freedom from all accountability to, the laws of every government within whose jurisdiction they may chance to domicil. Therefore to sow the seeds of her dissolution in this country the Courts of the lund must be wrested from her grasp, and the first step in this direction is to paralyze her power therein. This can be done by purging bench and panel in all suits to be tried, wherein one of the parties at issue is a Mason and the other is not. In criminal causes, the State would of course occupy the position of the non-Mason, and it would be incumbent upon the parties prosecuting in the name of the State to see that both the commonwealth's Atttorney and the assistant counsel if any such there should be, performed their duty, by purging both bench and panel of every member of the craft should any thereon appear. And it must be patent to the most casual observer, that such purging, under existing laws, can only be accomplished by proving the Masonic obligations and showing the intense community of interest they create between Masons. To do this, the testimony of seceding Masons becomes imperatively necessary, for adhering Masons cannot in any particular be relied upon for such purpose—hence, should the seceder's Roll of Honor, for such is their list of names, when arrayed against the powers of darkness, become as extended as the azure vault of heaven, and their numbers numerous as the stars that bespangle and beautify the ocean of night. Shall this grand object be accomplished? Let every reader of the Cynosure, and there are certainly not less than 20,000 of them, respond yes, and constitute himself or herself a special committee of one to ascertain and report at least one seceder's name, if not more, until all shall be gathered together and their names be inscribed upon honor's fair escutcheon as an eternal protest against the innate wickedness, viciousness and turpitude inherent in the monster evil of modern times—grog-shop Freemasonry. Let every seceder who desires to discharge a portion of his duty towards God and his fellow man, report his own name to the Cynosure for publication. If all will but do their duty in this regard, we shall soon possess a list that instead of provoking mirth will blanch every cheek within the pale of Masonic fellowship. Let it so be. To reform the crafty Mason, there is but one way, and that is, to make his Masonry worthless to him, and to break the power of Masonry in our Courts is the first sure step in this direction. Let it be taken. Send in the names. Put your labor where it will do the most good.

He that Gathereth not with me Scattereth Abroad.

This crucial test was uttered by the Lord Jesus Christ. It is the enunciation of a great fundamental principle, underlying all reformatory measures. Ultimate success in them depends upon the conscientious and consistent conformity to its requirements. A principle which accurately tests the actions of men and measures. It nicely determines the motives of men. It excludes the idea of serving two masters. It admits of no half-way measures in reform. It knows no step-at-a-time policy, no neutral ground. Neutrality is indifference, indifference is opposition. It positively affirms that he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad. It accredits no expressed theory, unless carried out in a consistent practice. It exposes the fallacy of depending on the utterance of a theory, or paper testimony, as a cataplasm to allay or satisfy the conscientious scruples of some in regard to a wrong, to tickle the fancy of others, or captivate the ear of the unthinking listener, but fails to carry the theory out to its legitimate results or consequences. And it renders its judgment thereon with unerring accuracy—he scattereth.

All reforms, to be legitimately entitled to the name of reform, must be radical, must go to the root of the wrong. There must be no tampering; no temporizing; no compromising with those wrongs proposed to be reformed; neither can the reform be left to be settled and adjusted by majorities. This principle forbids us to propose, or to rest on any proposition short of full reform in the length, depth, breadth and height of the wrong, a full surrender on the part of the wrong doers, anything short of a full and stout resistance against the wrong in all its details, and in all its ramifications is—to scatter. The wrong must be wholly abandoned, or there is no reform. There is no gathering in part; it is either gathering in full, or scattering. Saul tried gathering in part in his treatment of the Amalekites, and the result was disgrace, humiliation and punishment. To do duty only in part is rebellion, and rebellion is as the sin of witchcraft. A step-at-a-time policy is stubbornness, and stubbornness is as iniquity and idolatry.

Hence in the temperance movement to propose any measure short of the annihilation of the importation, manufacturing and vending of intoxicants, is to compromise with the wrong-doers—is scattering—and to propose to settle that question by majorities at the ballot-box is atheistic in principle, substituting plans of human devising to work reform. It is an abandonment of the weapons selected and appointed by God himself for reforming wrong, and which are mighty through him, to the pulling down the strongholds of sin and sinful practices, and setting a precedent to wrong-doers, to establish a wrong by law, if they have the majority.

And so, too, in anti-secrecy reform, any measure short of the demand of eradication of secrecy, in God's name, and by his authority, from every organization or association, whether in church or state, is compromise; and compromise is surrender; and surrender is disobedience to the paramount requirements of the law of God. To propose to settle the question at the ballot-box is an admission in advance that majorities are morally right and paramount to the authority of God. It is a proposition to teach the fear of the Lord by the commandments of men. A settlement by mere human opinion. It is an agreement that so long as the wrong-doers shall have the majority, they shall have the moral right (there being no right, that is not morally right, neither a wrong that is not morally wrong) to perpetrate that wrong-doing.

At different times reference has been made in the Cynosure to remarks made by Mr. Moody, as against secretism, in his addresses in Brooklyn, New York and Philadelphia; but in the light of our text, his practice stands as against the reform—he scattereth. He is not laboring in behalf of any sect, hence the thousands of converts he reports and encourages to believe to be genuine cases of regeneration, are by him advised to attach themselves to whatever sect they may prefer, and per consequence the large majority of them are turned over, body and soul and spirit, to sects under the control of secretism, thus strengthening it, for in proportion to the number of members it can get into the different sects, is its success insured, and becomes more bold. As soon as a man attaches himself to any sect, he loses his individuality, and becomes an integral part of that sect. He adopts its theory and practice, its wrong-doing becomes his wrong-doing, it's sins his sins, and his whole influence is thrown with it, on whatever side of moral reform it may take, he swells its numbers and numbers give respectability and claim authority.

If Mr. Moody really believes secretism to be God-dishonoring, Christ-crucifying and soul-damaging (on what other ground can he condemn it?), he could never advise or consent that the influence of a single convert should be thrown to those sects which tolerate secretism among them, nor leave the young convert under the influence of such pernicious example. Nay, he would warn the converts of the danger arising from association with it in religious organizations, that it would be very natural to suppose that what had been admitted to the communion table, could not be morally wrong, and they would be the more easily betrayed into those dens of iniquity. A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump. While the mind of the young convert is softened under the influence of the Holy Spirit, is the most opportune moment to give it a bias in the right direction; it is the time to guide it to the side of morality. But just here Mr. Moody has misimproved one of the greatest opportunities to further reform, the cause of Christ, and of teaching, as but few, if any others have had, of teaching the necessity of separation from sin and sinners, in order to reflect back on the dark horizon of a sin-cursed world, by contrast of position, the beauty of holiness, and to exemplify the power of godliness. And he has done as thousands of others are doing who denounce secretism, seated himself, side by side, at the communion table, whenever the opportunity presented itself, with secretists, thus endorsing them as true and exemplary Christians, and practically saying to the world that connection with secretism casts no disgrace nor suspicion upon the moral character of the professor of the religion of Jesus. His practice neutralizes his teaching—he gathers not with the reforms; he scattereth.

Christians are the light of the world. It is through their practice that men are convinced of the reality of the religion of Jesus. Not by theory alone, but by a practice consistent with the theory announced by them, that others, seeing your good works, may glorify your Father who is in heaven. The theory must be distinct, radical, incisive and direct, and the practice must be equally so. Christian communion and fellowship must be withdrawn from every individual or organization that walketh not after the tradition received of us, says Paul, and the sect that admits or tolerates secretism within its folds, is itself disorderly and must be withdrawn from, for what the individual may not do, cannot be right for organizations to do. The axe must be laid at the root. The sects that admit or tolerate secretists in their communion, are not gathering with reform—they are scattering—they stand opposed to reform, and if opposed, then there must be no company with them, no not to eat, that they may be ashamed. Withdrawal from them is a Christian duty, a means ordained by God for reforming erring professors who may have fallen into corrupt practices. No turning the young converts over to them. No bidding them God-speed by your influence. No countenancing them by your presence. No assisting them by your money. If work must be done for Christ, it must be done according to the rules he has laid down to regulate the practice of his people, and by carrying those rules out to their legitimate results, leaving the consequences to God, who has promised to control them for his glory. CALIFORNIA STATE TICKETS.

LOS GATOS, Santa Clara Co., Cal., Sept. 11, 1876.

To the American Party of California, DEAR FRIENDS:—Our electoral ticket for the State of California is now made out and by the 10th day of October next I will be ready to supply every one with tickets. I want the friends in every election precinct in the State of California, from Siskiyou to San Diego, to write to me and I will send them tickets. If there is only one friend in the precinct, let him be sure and write me for the American ticket, and I will send him one. Then go early to the polls on the morning of the election and have our young American ticket placed in the "ballot box," remembering that it represents God and right, and so wields a mighty power for good. Our country, like Esau, has sold her birthright for a mess of pottage. She is chained and enslaved, but she must be disenchanted and rescued from the despotism of the lodge, king alcohol and the corrupt money power, and placed, regenerated and free, in the front rank of the nations of the earth. The new American cause is not exclusively our cause. It is the cause of God, humanity and country, and our mission is to accomplish this grand and blessed work. Let us rejoice, dear friends, that we have been counted worthy to be partakers in the labors and sufferings, as well as the joys and glories of this grand moral achievement.

FRIENDS YEARLY MEETING IN INDIANA.

Sept. 19, 1876.

Friends Yearly Meeting, at Plainfield, Ind., on the 15th to 21st was largely attended, the numbers running up into the thousands on "first day." Their spacious house, seating fifteen hundred, was literally packed, and stands which had been erected outside were surrounded by multitudes who were more or less interested in the plain, practical truths of the Gospel and stirring appeals that were made. It was a day of seed sowing and eternity alone can reveal "what the harvest shall be." The beautiful plat of twelve acres, in the center of which the plain brick structure stands, was literally covered with teams, carriages, and human beings, while outside were many unable to find room for their beasts within. The preaching was earnest and well adapted to the occasion and surroundings, and everything moved along in the usually decorous manner for which the Friends are noted. I spoke in the City Hall on Saturday evening to an apparently interested audience, and although the time of the Yearly Meeting was so fully taken up with other matters that it was not deemed advisable to give an hour to our reform work, many expressed their regrets and wished it might be otherwise. I hope the Friends are not afraid to grapple with this question, and that they will look to it that a few unworthy members who have crept in among them are not permitted to so far control the Yearly Meetings as to suppress all discussion, much against the wishes of a large majority of their most devoted members.

J. P. STODDARD.

THE CAUSE IN IOWA—THE OSKALOOSA MEETINGS.

OSKALOOSA, Iowa, Sept. 12, '76.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Something over a week ago Bro. Stoddard came here to present the cause before the Friends Yearly Meeting of Iowa, and to do any other work for the cause that could be done. The meeting convened on the 6th (Wednesday). The matter was presented, I believe on the next day and an effort made to grant Bro. Stoddard a hearing. The Friends are cautious, besides there was revealed quite an opposition upon the part of many to hear anything on the subject; some making one pretext and some another, but all coming, doubtless from a sympathy or an alliance with the "mystery of iniquity," secretism, and so the matter was postponed. There was a large number of the Friends, however, determined the question should be discussed, and especially as the rule of the society upon the subject of connexion of secret societies was to come before the meeting for discussion and decision as to whether it should be reaffirmed or modified. They urged Bro. Stoddard to wait patiently. This involved what seemed to be a waste of time upon the part of the General Agent, as his time is precious, and as other fields are "ripe and ready to the harvest." He could have obtained a hall or church elsewhere, and lectured under the auspices of other friends of the cause, but this was deemed under the circumstances, impolitic, as it might interfere with the favorable decision of the question in the Friends Meeting, since in this case the plea could be set up that as he was going to speak at any rate in another place, all who wished to hear could go and hear him there. So it was determined to leave the matter in the posture for the time being, of either speaking before the society and in their house, or not speaking in the city at all. "Hasten slowly" is sometimes a good proverb, and it proved to be so this time.

The friends of the cause talked it up, and it soon became the subject of general conversation, so that in a short time every Friend in attendance at the meeting was clearly upon one side or the other of the question, "Shall Stoddard be heard?" The question finally came up on seventh day (Saturday) morning and was decided by an overwhelming majority in the affirmative. Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock was the time set for the hearing.

The way was then clear, and upon invitation of other parties Bro. Stoddard agreed to speak that (Saturday) evening in the U. P. church, which he did to a very attentive audience. On Sabbath morning he preached a sermon of very great power before the U. P. congregation in which he showed in a very masterly manner the deceitful "wiles of the devil" as manifested in his schemes for the ruin of men and nations.

Monday afternoon came. The lecture was to be in the lower room of the building, a room that will seat some eight hundred people. The Friends were all congregated in the upper room listening to a very able address on the "Two Covenants," by a prominent Friend from England. Three o'clock came—a quarter past three, half past three, and still the address continued! It looked to some of us that there was "something in the wind." Bro. Stoddard was in his place waiting patiently (?) A number of friends of the cause were gathered about and waiting, but not with so much apparent patience. A faithful Friend was at hand who assured us that all would be right. Presently the meeting closed up stairs and the crowd commenced coming, and on it came until every seat was occupied and every corner of the building filled. There must have been one thousand people present. After waiting five days the opportunity came at last. The speaker rose to the full height of the occasion as if by inspiration. He commenced, and in two minutes had rivited the attention of the audience as the attention of one man. The pent-up fires of his earnest soul broke forth in a perfect torrent, and for nearly two hours he hurled the lightnings of God's truth upon and through the dark dens of secrecy and sin. I am satisfied that hundreds were convinced as never before of the ungodly and detestable character of the secret conclaves, and hundreds of others were fired with a new zeal against the "works of darkness."

Unrepentant secretists in the audience could easily be discerned. They TRIED to smile; they scowled, became nervous, twitched, got up and went out and came in again, and showed an uneasiness that revealed them to every observer. A brother told me he picked out several whom he did not know were Masons before. He twitted them afterwards about it, and found in every case he was right. Sin cannot endure the light.

When the lecture was over a lively interest was manifested in the speaker by many crowding around him, congratulating him, wishing he had spoken an hour longer, inviting him to visit other parts of the country, making inquiry for books and publications, &c., &c.

It was announced that he would speak again at 7½ o'clock in the U. P. church. When the hour arrived the house was filled with a mixed audience; many Friends being there and quite a number of the prominent Freemasons of the town. The speaker seemed fresh as ever, and held the audience an hour and a half, exhibiting in a very thorough manner the despotic character of the government of the lodge. I noticed when the grips, signs, passwords and mode of initiation were revealed the Masons were troubled. Some stared wildly, some attempted to smile, some scowled. and some looked at each other knowingly. An opportunity was given for reply, but none dared the attempt. A Hercules stood before them and they knew it!

Altogether Mr. Stoddard's visit terminated triumphantly for the cause of truth and light. Though more time was spent than was agreeable to him, yet it was time well spent, and I am sure will meet with the approval of the Master.

The matter of the proposed modification of the Friends' rule on the subject of connexion with secret societies came before the meeting the next morning, and the rule was reaffirmed by a large and almost unanimous vote.

All adhering Freemasons are to be dealt with, aad if unrepentant, suspended. Very many desired that all other secret societies should be included, and are confident this will be done at an early day. They know that when a man enters into any secret society he has lost his conscience on the subject, and is but one step out of the monstrous iniquity of Freemasonry.

Mr. Stoddard has rare qualifications for this work. In private and in the families where he puts up he is the unobtusive, genial Christian gentleman, whilst before his audience, and before his enemies he is the frank, clear-headed, logical, heroic and dauntless advocate. And then it seems to me he never wavers. He is an indefatigable worker. When his life's work is done he will emphatically "rest from his labors" and his "work will assuredly follow him." R. A. Mc AYEAL.

THE OWANECO EXPOSITION.

OWANECO, Ill., Sept. 18, '76.

DEAR CYNOSURE: We had Mr. Ronayne here August 8th to 11th. The evening of the 8th he gave us a lecture on Masonry; on the 9th he initiated a candidate in the first degree; the next evening the Fellowcraft, and next the Master Mason's degree. When it came to killing Hiram every one present was much amused, but not so much as when Hiram was caught in the canvass. As soon as Hiram was laid aside for a more decent burial, then could be heard hisses and groans, and "O shame, can it be possible that is Masonry?" Whereupon Mr. Ronayne pointedly told them that it was ancient craft Masonry as worked and practiced in the various lodges in the United States, and defied any man or Mason to show one single error on his part in the whole performance.

The expose of Masonry here has been a great good. It has silenced all the Masonic batteries. The name of Ronayne is not mentioned by any of the Masons in my presence. While he was here I heard some of them calling him a liar, a perjurer, villain and thief, etc.

I do not know whether there were any votes made here for the American party by Mr. Ronayne, but he certainly made some Cynosure subscribers and no candidates for the lodge. One man who had made application for membership concluded to wait until after the Millersville lectures before he would join; since that he says he has all of Freemasonry he wants. Mr. Ronayne is certainly a master hand at the business, for he deals terrible blows upon Masonry. We had a full house each evening and good order.

I think the friends of Mr. Ronayne should be careful not to needlessly expose him, as I am satisfied Masons owe him no good will.

OUR CENTENNIAL LETTER.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug., 31, 1876.

An intelligent Presbyterian who called to day said he had been for many years connected with the church and the lodge, and if he had to leave one or the other he would leave the church. A bystander said the same. Truly God has sent them strong delusion that they may believe a lie.

A lady tells me that the first Baptist church of New York, once Dr. Cones, afterwards presided over by Kingman Knott, the star pulpit preacher, and now by Dr. Anderson, will not receive to membership any adhering Freemason. Rev. Dr. Marlin of the fifteenth Presbyterian church is opposed to the lodge, and Rev. Geo. S. Frost of Detroit, Mich., believes in the Gospel as the grand cure for the world's evils. A polished sceptic who made an attack on Chrisiianity was well answered by my neighbor of the Bible Society who told him that even according to his own showing Christians were as well off as those who reject Christ, and if the Bible be true and Christianity a reality, they are infinitely better off, therefore it is safest to trust in Christ. A knot of interested listeners stood by.

These sceptics who refuse all evidence human or divine, except their own senses remind me of a blind man refusing to believe that there is such a thing as sun light because he cannot bear it.

SEPT. 8th. The discussions at our stand are often very warm, and sometimes amusing. An M. E. minister, a Mason, this morning said, "Freemasonry is not a religion." I asked him to put that statement on paper and sign his name to it, and he consented, and here is the fizzle: "I have never believed Freemasonry to be the Christian religion." "Oh," said I, "that's not the point." He stopped with part of his name written and went away. He said he was a Royal Arch Mason and a member of many other secret societies.

While talking with a young man who was trying to defend the institution, a young Lutheran tried to rouse his ire by calling his attention to an article in the Cynosure of the 26th of May, and a Mason coming up just then thought to help also by putting in a word, which is just what he ought not to have done, for he asserted positively that when Jews, or others who reject Christ are present the name of Christ must not be mentioned in the lodge. It was very neat indeed for the man had just admitted that if Christ was not acknowledged in the lodge it was an infidel institution, as was asserted in the Cynosure article, but he was sure it must be a Christian institution, for his uncle, a high Mason was a Christian. The Mason's testimony so opportunely given completely discomfited him. Among the many calls I remember those of J. R. Holland of Fairfield, Mich., Rev. A. P. Veil, City missionary, Waterbury, Conn., Rev. F. L. Walker, Oswego, Kansas, Rev. J. F. Furguson, (Baptist) Essex, Vt., Prof. Kimball, Rev. John Harper of Smithville, Ill., an old Cynosure subscriber who had a tilt with a Rev. Freemason, whom he handled admirably. Ira Green of Rossville, Ill., and Allen Lewis of Hoopston, Ill., who called to-day, each left fifty cents for the tract work.

The crowd to-day, owing to its being a twenty-five cent day (Saturday) has been immense. Over one hundred thousand are estimated to have visited the Exposition to-day. They save twenty-five cents on the admission fee it is true, but when there is such a jam they are not able to see more than half as much in a day, so it is not much of a speculation after all. The cry of fire! fire! cleared the building very quick this afternoon. The fire proved genuine, and several restaurants near by on Girard Ave. were consumed.

To-day while a Mason was boasting over the advantages of the order a Master Mason came up and put in his word in this style: "Masonry is not what it ought to be. I have not been in the lodge for ten years on account of the corruptions they are guilty of. Masonry is corrupting our courts of justice. Tweed has escaped through the aid of Freemasonry."

This was a terrible poser to the boaster.

SEPT. 11th. A Baptist minister from Michigan whose name I failed to get, called to-day, and expressed himself as in perfect unison with us n this reform. He said that Freemasonry creates a terrorism and fear of investigation in the community. "That's so, that's so," was echoed by listeners.

A Methodist minister from Maryland thanked the Lord for Masonry, it was such an aid to him. He said that he used the name of Christ in the lodge even when Jews were present. He was reminded of the difference between Masonic law and Masonic tolerance. He did not attempt to justify the horrible oaths of the order, yet he avowed his devout aspirations for the Royal Arch degree which he expected to take next winter. His standing as a Methodist minister was a great card in his hand, but a brother Methodist whose stand is near by combed him down in the most admirable, Anti-masonic style. The Masonic reverend certainly has learned something. He got more than he expected. For example, after admitting the high standing of Prest. Finney, and his undoubted veracity, he was confounded by hearing some of Finney's severest strictures read aloud to a crowd of eager listeners, who enjoyed his mortification.

SEPT. 14th. I send a few subscribers to-day. It is gratifying to have a Freemason occasionally showing his desire for "more light" from the luminary at Chicago. The fact is, Freemasonry has been "weighed in the balance and found wanting." The question: Is Freemasonry a religion? and if so what religion? still keeps uppermost and most readily arrests attention. The influence of the order in our courts of justice, also receives their attention, and there are hundreds of men belonging to the order who are heartily sick of it, because they see how justice is perverted by Masonic influence. In New York, I understand that the order is openly charged with aiding Tweed's escape, and it is said that such men as General Peck, of Brooklyn, have lately avowed sentiments quite in accordance with the sample letter of a brother Mason in New York, which I sent you, pronouncing Masonry absurd, or as another said, "all a humbug."

I have had many pleasant visits from friends lately, among them Rev. George Clark of Oberlin, Ohio, Rev. D. J. Ellsworth of Windsor, Conn., Rev. Dr. Muzzy, an old friend of Prest. Blanchard, and Rev. W. A. Primer. Yesterday Rev. V. R. Hotchkiss of Buffalo, bore cheerful testimony to the integrity and piety of the late Elder Bernard, the well-known author of "Light on Masonry." To-day I had a call from Charles B. Bernard, the son of Elder Bernard, who is here with his family from Cleveland, to visit the Centennial.

Among other young men who follow the good example of their fathers in their interest in our cause, I may mention the son of Rev. Dr. Creighead, the New York evangelist, and the son of Mr. Keel of Illinois, also a grand son of an aged hero in this cause, Mr. Cutler of Galena. Another who will doubtless fall with his face to the foe, is Rev. S. McArthur of New Concord, Ohio. But among the warmest friends and supporters of our cause are many noble women, whose influence for good cannot be overestimated. There was an inspiration in the quiet but firm expression of a middle aged Quakeress, to-day. Mrs. Culbertson, widow of one of the translators of the Bible into Chinese, called to-day. The translation was begun by Bridgman and Culbertson, but Mr. Bridgman died while engagen in the work and Mr. Culbertson finished it. Mrs. Culbertson was for nearly twenty years a resident of China. She, of course took a special interest in the stand of the Bible Society, as it exhibited Chinese Bibles, thus reminding her of the noble work of her departed companion, who had done so much to dispel heathen darkness in China.

It is one of the strange fallacies of the defenders of the lodge worship that the acknowledgement of a Creator is enough, and they think it a small matter to ignore Christ. The last parcel of tracts that I gave out to-day was to a Baptist, who said he intended to join the Masons.

THOS HODGE.

LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF THE REFORM.

YORK, Medina Co., O. }
Sept. 12, 1876. }

Editor Cynosure:—I regret to say that the anti-secret cause is not progressing here. It seems to have come to a dead lock. The cause of this is not to be found in the want of good material to work upon, or to the want of an individual consciousness, that the secret obligations and combinations are in their tendencies and influences injurious and wrong; but rather to this—a lack of disposition, or ability to think and act independently. Such being the case, a terrible responsibility is being placed upon the clergy. Their thoughts, whether right or wrong, are diffused, and their words outside the pulpit, are rejected, and often exert a pernicious influence. Eight or nine years ago, when Prest. Fairchild and Prof. Morgan gave several lectures here on the character of Masonry and secretism generally, the community was awake to the iniquitous system. Then we had but little difficulty in establishing a church rule against membership with secret associations. No member could be admitted in the Congregational church without passing the test of examination on that subject. The church's position was known, approved, and considered as settled by both the church and community. True it was the only church in the county (the United Brethren excepted) that had taken that position; but the cause was onward, and the public sentiment progressing against the secret orders.

This was the state of things when our beloved General Agent, Rev. J. P. Stoddard came first among us. His labors, and lectures, and preaching, and personal presence, and Christian deportment, had a telling influence for good. Previous to this so decided was the Anti-secret movement in the church, that a resident minister, otherwise acceptable, was promptly dismissed for the only reason that he began to use influences for overriding the standard rule on that subject.

Now how changed. The Congregationalists have another minister. He has been here three years. Before being engaged he was well informed of the position the church occupied, and told that the church could not think of engaging a minister who would disregard its standing rules. This he pledged himself not to do. Disregarding this pledge, the church is now accessible to the secret orders, and, as I learn, members of those orders have been received, and such are still admissible. What is still worse in its effects, this same minister has become Prest. of an Anti-secret society formed here some two years ago, which it is believed has not had a meeting since. Why this, unless more effectually to hold back agitation of the subject. However hidden men may wish to keep their purposes, words sometimes slip out and reveal them. So in this case. To explain why so little progress in the Anti-secret discussion—he is reported to have answered thus: "There is so mush talk about it here that the people are disgusted." Some wonder if Christ s preaching did not disgust the Scribes and Pharisees, and if Paul's piercing eloquence did not disgust Felix, and Nero, and the pagan hosts of Rome. Such words and actions have their effects, especially with those who do not stop to think for themselves. They are duplicated over and again, and those who use them are not far removed from the taking of blasphemous obligations, or the iniquitous farce of playing Hiram Abiff. The inducement of some supposed selfish benefit is only wanting.

Do ministers realize their responsibilities? Really our reform would progress much faster if they would take themselves out of the way. It is hard work to labor over their heads.

There seems to be an idea prevailing among the people I mean the religious people—that the ministers know it all—that they are about right—that any association decidedly wrong could not be approved by them—they would oppose it—much less would they carry themselves against those who do oppose it and still less would they be inclined to attach themselves to the secret orders, if bad as represented. So the people let the ministers do the thinking for them, and rest supinely without examination or serious thought. Really and truly it seems clear enough that if our theological schools will not, and cannot raise up a set of ministers to labor in reforms, the people must rise up and reform the schools and clergy, or our churches will go to corruption, and our country to ruin. More anon.

Yours truly, J. A. BINGHAM.

WHERE IS THE DIFFERENCE?

We clip from a newspaper the following story which is evidently designed to show a low order of morality among our colored population of the Southern States:

A SPECIMEN OF NEGRO RELIGION.

A worthy missionary clergyman from the North found his colored brethren and sisters quite forgetful of the moral law, and began to give them a series of practical discourses against lying and stealing. The congregation stood it for a Sunday or two, and then they revolted, one of the deacons being the spokesman, and addressed their preacher thus: "We like you bery much, and want to make it comf'ble for you; but de fac' is, you see, we don't like dis preachin' about lyin' and stealin'—we mus' hab our Sundays for 'ligion."

Now where is the difference, we would ask, between this negro congregation and a white congregation which does not wish to hear any thing said to them about Freemasonry? There are a great many congregations of white folks in the United States who never want to hear anything about the wicked, unchristian character of Freemasonry. They like to go to church on Sundays and have "machine religion" preached to them, but they could never abide a practical discourse, in exemplification of one out of hundreds of scriptural texts, which would condemn Freemasonry as plainly as the Decalogue condemns lying and stealing. Southern negroes are not the only people in the United States who are sensitive about having a sound, practical order of morality preached to them.

ECCE ORIENTI.

Dear Cynosure:—The above is the title of a strange sort of book which I have chanced to see. Of course it had an origin and an aim; but its contents and aim as well as its origin, seem to be veiled. Not in a foreign language, it yet is made to appear foreign. From its associations, and from other reasons, I am persuaded it is of Masonic origin and import. Will some one who is "posted" explain "Ecce Orienti?" I feel sure the Cynosure will make room for some one to do so.

OUR MAIL.

Geo. H. Williams, Putnam, Windham Co., Conn., writes:

"Will it not be well for the Cynosure to give a journal, a portion weekly of Morgan's abduction and murder, fifty years ago this month? (See Greene's Broken Seal, p. 71.) Here is a semi-centennial of shame to humble our national pride in this centennial year. 'Truth is stranger than fiction.' The events connected with the case of Morgan, if simply told in a journal, would do much good among the present readers of the Cynosure. I think it might draw many new readers to the paper and to the book."

We think this is an excellent suggestion and intend to profit by it.

A friend in Indiana writes:

"Having traveled lately over northwestern Indiana I can assure you that your paper is doing a good work. Several prominent men promised me to send for it. If any country on earth is in danger it is the United States. From what I know I can speak of corruption in courts of justice; perjury is the rule, honesty the exception. A prominent educator in Crown Point, and the pastor of the U. B Church in Hebron, Ind., both agreed to go to work in the cause. You will hear from them soon. I have fought Masonry a long time. Financially they have always worsted me. I could write a large book of their crimes that are known to me. 'God is moving on the waters.' Let us do our duty."

A. M. Milligan, Allegheny, Pa., writes:

"I am convinced that if we could show the community the tendency and the capabilities of the secret orders, not only those without but also many within the lodge would rise up and demand its banishment. The White Leagues, the Ku Klux and Molly Maguires are doing a great service to the country and the cause by revealing the legitimate and proper use for which they were invented and organized and it only requires that a resolute band of desperate characters shall attain the highest positions in any of the orders to turn every Mason, Odd-fellow and Good Templar into a conspirator, an accomplice of treason and murder, or turn him out of the order. And those are the classes of character which are even now drilling and manipulating the simple innocent dupes for their nefarious purposes. Hence the rings which under these various names are even now sucking the life blood, and in a thousand ways endangering the very existence of the Republic. It is a wise arrangement of Providence that one class of patriots are led to realize the enormity of one class of evils and assail it, while another have their attention turned to another evil and direct their batteries against it; and thus the various ranks of God's great army are all battling the common enemy, helping the common cause and serving our common Master."

L. Raymo, Unionville, Mo., writes:

"The cry is constantly going up, 'You are only making yourself enemies.' Such a religion as is enjoyed by the members of the cable tow' ought to be banished from our land and every other land. For several years I have not believed it possible for a man to be a Christian and a Mason, yet I notice other men do admit they can; but if it be true I confess I do not know of anything to keep a man from being a Christian. There is no difference between the professor and the world. They all lie and slander alike. I believe the only way to be a Christian is to do the will of God by both faith and works. I gave one old lady a copy of the deposition last night. This morning I asked her what she thought of it. She said, 'Why, Mr. Raymo, I can tell you more about Masonry than you know. I lived in Morgan's neighborhood when he was carried off, and saw the covered wagon that he was in.' She said other things that she knew the same as are publishe ."

S H. Skinner, Avalon, Livingston Co., Mo., writes:

"Ronayne and Stoddard left Chillicothe and Livingston Co., safe. Eggs were the arguments used by the opposition. Masonry mixed with the old pro slavery sentiment makes an awful mix."

J. C. Bartholomew, Ely, Linn Co., Ia. writes:

"I fully believe God will bless his cause, Anti-masonry."

I. N. Bear, Amboy, Ill., writes:

"We have a good many professed anti's here but they are completely cowed down. One who attended the Morgan trials, and was deputy sheriff at the time, and is conversant with the whole affair, is putting up what he calls a Masonic hall; and that in the most conspicuous part of the city of Amboy."

S. E. Pachard, Appleton, Wis., writes:

"I give the Cynosure to any one who will read it. It is quite a Masonic place around here."

J. K. Alwood, West Unity, O., writes:

"I want the Cynosure for myself and children. I am very thankful that they all have sense enough and honesty enough to like it."

LESSON FOR OCT. 15.—STEPHEN'S MARTYRDOM.

SCRIPTURE.—Acts vii. 51-60 Commit 54-60. Primary verses, 59, 60.

51 Ye stiffnecked and uncircumcised in heart and ears, ye do always resist the Holy Ghost: As your fathers did, so do ye.

52 Which of the prophets have not your fathers persecuted? and they have slain them which showed before of the coming of the Just One; of whom ye have now been the betrayers and the murderers:

53 Who have received the law by the disposition of angels, and have not kept it.

54 When they heard these things they were cut to the heart, and they gnashed on him with their teeth.

55 But he being full of the Holy Ghost, looked up steadfastly into heaven, and saw the glory of God, and Jesus standing on the right hand of God.

56 And said, Behold I see the heavens opened and the Son of man standing on the right hand of God.

57 Then they cried out with a loud voice, and stopped their ears, and ran upon him with one accord.

58 And cast him out of the city and stoned him: and the witnesses laid down their clothes at the feet of a young man whose name was Saul.

59 And they stoned Stephen, calling upon God, and saying, Lord Jesus, receive my spirit.

60 And he kneeled down, and cried with a loud voice, Lord, lay not this sin to their charge. And when he had said that he fell asleep.

In the vision vouchsafed to Stephen in his fearful extremity he received much comfort and consolation. He was conscious of no crime, and was in no wise guilty of blasphemy against Moses or the temple. He could with much confidence turn his thoughts heavenward. Surely to him the bitterness of death was past, and he was enabled to endure as seeing him who was invisible. Though in the power of his murderers, he is in the hand of God, and when heart and flesh failed, he recognized his favor who was the strength of his heart and portion forever, proving that "precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." Calmly he committed his spirit into the hand of Christ, and peacefully fell asleep in the hope of a blessed resurrection.

PRACTICAL LESSONS.

1 That seldom are sinners conscious of the character of their sins.

2 That the evil deeds of men will be overruled to the furtherance of the divine purposes. God makes the wrath of man to praise him.

3 That the people of God have the pledge of his grace to assist them in all life's troubles. Not suffer them to be tried above that which they are able, but as their day is so shall their strength be.

4 That true Christians may expect hope and triumph in death.

5 That it is proper to pray to Christ.

6 That all ought to seek preparation for death.

7 And that a peaceful and triumphant death is very desirable.—Evangelical Repository.

News and Notes.

AMUSING THE BABY.—It is a subject of marvel to most people that so many children die in infancy, but to an observing mind the wonder is that any children live to maturity. When you and I feel miserable we want to be left in quiet. Repose is the sweetest remedy for nervousness or other ills; but baby is trotted, bounced, toted, "ketchy ketchied," chucked under the chin, poked in its cheeks, or somebody's thumb is thrust into its toothless mouth, irrespective of a need of ablution, and then if a baby isn't happy it is reputed very irritable. Tickling the baby's feet, creeping the fingers like the motion of a mouse across its breast and up into its fat, sensitive neck-wrinkles, is another mode of amusing baby. Of course the child laughs, and the idiots who torment it forget that it is the same expression with which they reply to a similar process from the hand of some mischievous but torturing friend; and yet we all know that this laugh from a man is a hysterical outcry of nervous irritability. When the laugh ceases, weariness brings weeping, or a restless and unrefreshing sleep, followed by depression, and probably by indigestion and colic. Nothing should ever be done to startle a child—even a too frequent playing of bopeep, if violent, has been known to bring on St. Vitus' dance. All surprises are dangerous to the nervous system, just as all sudden atmospheric or dietetic changes are very unhealthy, and sometimes fatal. If music is lected to please the young child's ears, it should be gentle and soothing.—Sanitarian.

PERSONAL AND HOUSEHOLD HINTS.—If you are buying carpets for durability, choose small figures.

Benzine and common clay will clean marble.

If your flat-irons are rough, rub them with fine salt, and it will make them smooth.

Castor-oil is an excellent thing to soften leather.

Wood-ashes and common salt, made compact with water, will stop the cracks of a stove, and prevent the smoke from escaping.

To clean a brown porcelain kettle, boil peeled potatoes in it. The porcelain will be rendered nearly as white as when new.

To ascertain whether a bed be damp or not, after the bed is warmed put a glass globe between the sheets, and if the bed be damp, in a few minutes drops of water will appear on the inside of the glass.

A strong solution of carbolicacid and water, poured into holes, kills all the ants it touches, and the survivors immediately take themselves off.

A small piece of paper or linen, soaked with the spirits of turpentine, and put into a bureau or wardrobe for a single day, two or three times, is said to be a sufficient preservation against moths.

Lemon juice and glycerine will remove tan and freckles.

Lemon juice and glycerine will cleanse and soften the hands.

Lunar caustic, carefully applied, so as not to touch the skin, will destroy warts.

To obviate offensive perspiration, wash your feet with soap and diluted spirits of ammonia.

The juice of ripe tomatoes will remove the stain of walnuts from the hands without injury to the skin.—Phrenological Journal.

THE EAR.—The passage of the ear is closed by a thin membrane, especially adapted to be influenced by every impulse of the air, and with only the air to support it internally.

If any one designed to break or overstretch the membrane he could scarcely devise more efficient means than to bring the hand suddenly and forcibly down upon the passage of the ear, thus driving the air violently before it, with no possibility of its escape but by the membrane giving away. Many children are made deaf by being boxed on the ear in this way.

MANAGEMENT OF THE ORCHARD.—To realize the best results from an orchard, we should be careful in the selection of varieties; and a well drained location should be chosen on which to plant the trees. The distance between the rows should not be so small as to preclude the trees from obtaining their full bearing capacity, and to make it difficult to gather the apples. Neither should there be too much space. Twenty-four feet each way has been our practice of setting trees, and we find it a suitable distance. If the land is low and flat, the land between the rows should be plowed toward the tree, so as to have the "dead furrow" in the centre, and to allow the water to pass off freely. All the sprouts should be kept from the base of the trees, but we have not found it advisable to prune out the heads; as it lessens the capacity for fruitfulness and induces the growth of water sprouts.

All of the fallen fruit should be gathered and made into vinegar, as the profits of the orchard are considerably increased from this source. All fruit should be carefully hand-picked; and that intended for market should be assorted and put in clean packages. The commission men of Chicago assure us that apples in new barrels bring enough more to pay for the barrel, even if old ones could be had free of cost. Varieties that drop from the trees, such as Rome, Beauty, Standard and Domine, should be picked early. Winter fruit should be kept in a cool place, at a temperature of 40 degrees as near as can be done.

The demand for winter apples has not yet been supplied, and if we wish to obtain the best results and find a ready market for our apples, we should plant at least three-fourths of our orchards to winter varieties.

The orchards should be sheltered on the west and north by belts of rapid growing trees of desirable varieties. We advise the planting of white ash, American elm, sycamore and ash-leaf maple. Varieties of the willow are rapid growers, but the timber is of little value.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1876.

The Bible in Schools.

The Chicago Tribune of Sept. 22d contains a call on W. W. Patton D. D., to speak on the question of ejecting the Bible from American schools. The call is numerously signed and followed by a card from Dr. Patton appointing to speak on Sabbath afternoon, Sept. 24th at Farwell Hall. His speech will doubtless be published in Monday's papers, too late for a full notice in this number of the Cynosure. Our readers may expect a notice of his performance next week.

Mr. E. S. Wells took pains to circulate the call; the same gentleman who got up a secret temperance lodge, which was to overtop all the other secret temperance "orders." Mr. Wells' lodge (we do not know its name) occupied a room, (the first room occupied) in the first Farwell Hall. It was odious to Mr. Moody, and was, we believe, suffered to subside, as we lost sight and hearing of it after the fire. As to Dr. Patton, he seems to be the Dr. Saccheverell of the Bible question.

Saccheverell was a man of inferior parts, who, in the long struggle between prerogative and popular rights in England, became notorious by taking ground with the priests and bishops of that day, as Patton is endeavoring to take sides with infidels and Romish priests against the Bible in schools. His antecedents may help our readers to appreciate the weight and worth of his teachings.

1. He began his ministery an Oberlin sanctificationest, abolitionist, and ultra Puritan in the city of Boston.

2. He removed from Boston, where he left little impression, to make less in the Fourth church of Hartford, Connecticut, where he was on ill terms with the good Dr. Hawes, and sided with the theological extravagances of Dr. Bushnell, which he could neither comprehend nor teach.

3. From Hartford, he came to Chicago as pastor of the First Congregational church, which he left to be editor of the Advance; in which, as in his pastorate, he saved money steadily for himself, and sunk some one hundred thousand dollars of his employer's money.

By referring to his editorials in that paper one may find nothing but the restless self-conceit of an inferior nature with large ambition, who has turned a complete summerset from his early ideas. Thus he filled column after column of the predecessor of the Advance, with leathery articles about the atonement, which next to nobody read.

In the Advance, he disgusted good ministers by his sermon and editorials in censure of New England Puritans, and favoring worldly amusements for Christians.

He wrote column after column on the Sabbath, denying all law force in the Decalogue.

When St. Lousis adopted the French system of licensing whoredom and uncleanness, he declared himself not convinced of its propriety, but said in an editorial review of the report on that legalized fornication:

"Let the experiment proceed under the careful supervision of those who believe in it, till we shall see the best it has to offer," etc., etc. From this vile and impious ground he has never publicly receded.

He became so obnoxious as editor that the stock holders gave up their shares to Messrs. Marsh and Turner who took the paper on condition that Dr. Patton should not be its editor.

He is since crowning his singular career, by advocating the removal of the Bible from schools, putting no standard of moral law in its place. The object of those who have got up and circulated his call is manifest. If his Sunday Farwell Hall efforts shall show any symptoms of receding from his odious religious advocacy of irreligious schools, our readers shall next week have the benefit of it.

A Story of Fifty Years Ago.

In accordance with the purpose expressed last week we shall give in this and the two or three succeeding numbers the narrative of Morgan's abduction. To our younger readers it will be of thrilling interest, and to all it must ever be of serious concern, and not least to members of the Masonic lodge.

Giddin's Anti-masonic Almanac for 1833, contains a concise but sufficiently complete account of the transaction in Western New York during the nine days immediately following Sabbath, September 10th, 1826, which will be freely used. We shall in this number give a kind of introductory account, a sketch of Morgan's previous life, the threatening notices published in public journals, the attempt to burn Col. Miller's printing office in Batavia, New York, and the excitement manifested by the fraternity through all the region caused by the report of Morgan's exposition then being printed. The narrative is as follows:

William Morgan was born on the 7th day of August, 1774, in Culpepper county, Virginia. His occupation was that of a bricklayer and stone-mason. Having accumulated, by his industry, a sufficient fund, he commenced business, as a merchant, in Richmond, Virginia. It is said that he was a captain in a militia regiment, and that he was present at the battle of New Orleans, in January, 1815. He married Lucinda Pendleton, in October, 1819, who was left with two infant children at the time of his abduction. He removed from Virginia in the fall of 1821, and commenced the business of a brewer, near York, in Upper Canada. The destruction of his property by fire, soon after, reduced him to poverty. He removed to Rochester, in the State of New York, and resumed his original occupation. An inflammation of the eyes, contracted soon after, incapacitated him from labor, and rendered the pressure of poverty more severe. From Rochester he removed to Batavia, where he resided in the summer of 1826. William Morgan was a member of the Masonic fraternity, and had advanced as far as the degree of Royal Arch in the mysteries of that society. In the summer of 1826, it became known that he was preparing for publication a work in which the obligations, secret signs and ceremonies of Freemasenry, were to be made public. It was also understood that David C. Miller, an Entered Apprentice Mason, and a printer at Batavia, was engaged, or to be engaged, in printing the work. The knowledge of these facts excited great commotion among the members of the Masonic fraternity in that vicinity, and in a wide extent of surrounding country. There was great heat and intemperance of expression in relation to the expected work, and an open avowal, by members, that it should never see the light. Consultations were held among them, as to the course to be pursued in relation to the contemplated work; and it was understood, finally, to have been determined, that its publication was to be prevented, at all hazards. It would appear that there were several different and distinct projects devised to produce this result, which either were not attempted, or failed in their execution.

Measures were taken to injure the character of Morgan, and thus to shut him out from sympathy and credit. In the month of August, 1826, an advertisement was inserted in the Ontario Messenger, printed at Canandaigua, of which the following is a copy:

NOTICE AND CAUTION.

"If a man, calling himself Wm. Morgan, should intrude himself on the community, they should be on their guard, particularly the MASONIC FRATERNITY. Morgan was in this village in May last, and his conduct while here, and elsewhere, calls forth this notice. Any information in relation to Morgan, can be obtained by calling at the MASONIC HALL, in this village. Brethren and companions are particularly requested to observe, mark and govern themselves accordingly. ☞ Morgan is considered a swindler and a dangerous man. ☞ There are people in this village who would be happy to see this Captain Morgan. Canandaigua, August 9, 1826."

This notice was copied into many of the newspapers in the western counties of the State of New York, and particularly into two newspapers printed at Batavia.

In the month of August, 1826, a man representing that his name was Daniel Johns, and that he was a fur trader from Canada, came to Rochester, and spent most of his time in the warehouse of Edward Doyle, who had himself, about four years previous, removed from Canada, and who was a high officer in the Monroe Encampment. About the middle of August, he went to Batavia, and ingratiated himself so far with Morgan and Miller, by offers of pecuniary advances, that he was received into their confidence, and into a participation in the publication. He remained at Batavia about three weeks, and, surreptitiously possessing himself of a portion of the manuscript, suddenly left Batavia with the portion he had thus acquired, and carried it to Rochester. From thence the manuscript was sent, by a special messenger, to the city of New York, and laid before the General Grand Chapter of the United States, then in session in that city.

In July, 1826, Morgan was arrested on a civil suit at Batavia, and gave bail. On the 19th of August, 1876, Johnson Goodwill, Kelsey Stone and John Wilson, of Batavia, all Freemasons, and Daniel H. Dana, a constable of Pembroke, about fourteen miles distant, on ascertaining that neither of the heads of the families in the house where Morgan resided were at home, rushed into his room and seized his person, and all the papers which he was then engaged in arranging for the press. The arrest was made by virtue of a bail piece, and he was hurried to jail without time being given him to procure other bail. The sheriff was not to be found though he had been seen with the four men immediately before the arrest, and Morgan was detained in jail from Saturday until Monday following.

While he was so confined in jail, search was made at his lodgings, by virtue of some pretended process, for the papers which Morgan had been engaged in preparing, but without success.

Arrangements were made for the assembling at Batavia, on the night of the 8th of September, of members of the Masonic fraternity, from different and distant places. They came from Buffalo, Lockport, Canandaigua and Rochester, and expectations were entertained that there would also be a party from Canada. None of them arrived at Batavia until in the night, when they assembled to the number of forty, or fifty, or more. The object of this party was to suppress the publication of the work, by procuring the manuscript papers, and the printed sheets. For this purpose an attack upon the printing-office of Miller was contemplated, and it would seem, also, the forcible removal of Morgan from Batavia, to effect a separation between him and Miller. Eli Bruce, the sheriff of Niagara county, had been requested to prepare, and did actually prepare, a cell in the jail of that county, for the reception of Morgan, whose forcible abduction, by this band of midnight conspirators, was confidently expected. Colonel Edward Sawyer, of Canandaigua, headed or commanded this party; but they failed to effect their object, and dispersed a little before daylight the nevt morning.

It is supposed that they were deterred from their purpose, by a knowledge of the fact that Miller was aware of their intentions, and had prepared fire-arms and other ample means, to defend both his person and his property from the attacks of violence. Many of the persons composing this party are known to have been selected and delegated for the express purpose of going to Batavia to assist in suppressing the publication of Morgan's book; and perhaps the numbers composing this party, and the different and distant places from which they came, illustrate more forcibly than any other single fact, the extent of the combination to suppress the publication of the book.

About this time an article written by R. W. Haskins, of Buffalo, appeared in the Black Rock Gazette, a paper published forty miles distant from Batavia, of which the following is a copy:

"MR. SALISBURY,

Sir—I noticed in your last paper an inadvertent error, copied perhaps from other prints, respecting a wretch by the name of Morgan. The statement that Morgan is an expelled Mason is a mistake. He is not an expelled Mason, but an impostor, and a swindler, against the evil designs of whom the fraternity have amply provided. A MASON."

Sept. 7, 1826.

On the night of the 10th of September, Richard Howard, otherwise called Richard Chippersfield, who worked at Buffalo for the same Mr. Haskins who wrote the foregoing paragraph, attempted, with several others whose names are not known, to set fire to the printing office of Miller, in Batavia. The sides of the building, and the outside stairs leading to the office, had been literally sprinkled with spirits of turpentine; and straw, and cotton-balls, saturated with the same combustible, had been provided. It burned fiercely and brightly upon the first application of the lamp, and had it not been instantly discovered by an individual who was accidentally a witness of it, the office must have been speedily consumed, and the lives of ten persons, then asleep in the two buildings, possibly made a sacrifice.

—Our publishers have taken a stand in the Inter-State Exhibition, which is now holding its annual fair in this city. Mr. Rufus Stratton has volunteered to attend it, distributing tracts and selling books and conversing with visitors. Thousands will thus be reached and informed of our work who will scatter tracts and facts through this State, Iowa, Wisconsin and Indiana, and help roll on the ball.

—The General Agent and Secretary started for Iowa again on Friday evening to take part in the several meetings to be held in that State. Mr. Ronayne will accompany or follow him with his masterly expositions.

—We trust the Wisconsin friends are making every effort possible to make their coming State meeting a great success. Let friends of the reform correspond with the officers of the State Association suggesting measures to be disscussed, especially the State agency. Shall that work be taken up again?

—The Illinois agent has gone for a brief space into Wisconsin, not especially on a lecture tour, though he will no doubt improve any openings. He has become pretty thoroughly initiated in Masonry, that is, in its method of dealing with men who are truthful about its follies and wickedness, and will be better able this winter to push on the war. Bro. Hinman will probably attend the State meeting in Delevan, Oct. 11th to 13th.

—Rev. E. W. Wheeler, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church of Edwardsville, N. Y., a reformed Mason, is contributing a series of articles on the lodge to the American Wesleyan.

—Rev. J. L. Barlow, State Lecturer for Michigan has been visiting western New York. We expect soon to hear his battle cry echoing across the Lake again and shall listen to hear the walls of the Jericho lodges thunder to the plains of the Peninsular State.

—Bro. Stratton of the Wesleyan makes a good point in an editorial reviewing a denunciation of the Freemasons of the Pennsylvania coal regions—the Mollie Maguires—in the North Western Christian Advocate of this city. He puts it to the editor why the same is not said of the lodges in all our towns whose principles and practices are no better proportionally than the murderous gangs of Pennsylvania. Will the Advocate reply?

—Some of Pres. C. H. Fowler's seed-sowing in the institution at Evanston, Ill., is bearing its proper fruit. His labor in stocking the University with secret societies helped them to a flourishing growth. Lately the students have been getting ready to take part in the oratorical contest between the colleges of various States, when it was found that the secret fraternities had managed in their accustomed disreputable manner to get their favorites nominated to the disgust of a large proportion of the students.

—In connection with the above the position taken by President Robinson of Brown University, in his annual report to the trustees will be hailed with rejoicing. He asserts that during the last two years the open societies have contained a large proportion of the character and the intelligence of the college, and that the secret organizations are objectionable for other reasons than their secrecy. These objections he classifies: 1. Their expensiveness. One of the largest items in the present rate of college expenses, as compared with former years, is found in these societies. 2. They foster a spirit of clannishness. 3. They lead, in the management of class affairs, to habits of intrigue, and to the practice of the low arts of the politician. 4. They intensify peculiarities of taste and habit, till these harden into fixed defects of character. 5. They interfere with college work. The trustees passed a resolution declaring secret societies hostile to the best interests of the University.

Religious Intelligence

—The first story and basement of the new Wesleyan Publishing House at Syracuse, N. Y., are finished in a substantial manner, and the work proceeds steadily but without hastening into debt.

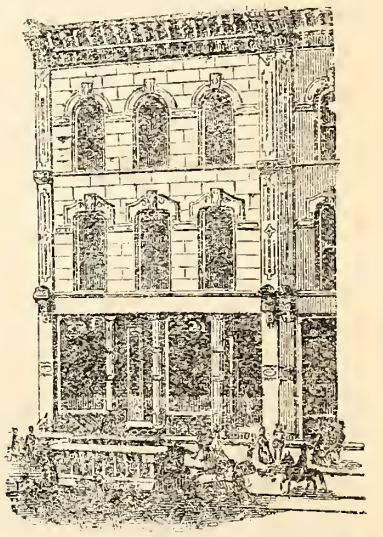
—Mr. Moody received a check from a friend in Greenfield, Mass., as a compensation for his services there last week. He returned it, with the request that he might be allowed to labor in Greenfield for the pleasure it afforded him.

—A controversary over the use of the Bible in public schools has arisen in New South Wales. Strong opposition has been shown to the daily reading of it.

—Rev. Geo. C. Needham, the Evangelist, preached Sunday evening last to a large crowd in the Atlas Hotel, fronting the Centennial buildings. He purposes preaching in the same place during each Sunday in September. At least 5,000 persons will be accommodated in the large hall of the hotel.

—Signor Gavazzi affirms that the Gospel is spreading in Italy, two-thirds of the children in the Evangelical schools belonging to Roman Catholic parents, and the principal text book used being the Bible.

—The General Evangelist, Wardner, of the Wesleyan Methodist church has been laboring with marked success among the churches of that denomination in western Tennessee. Meetings held at Purdy, McNairy Co., near the historical ground at Shiloh and Pittsburg Landing were signally blessed with conversions.



News of the Week

—The London Times publishes a letter from Barcelona which says: "During the last three months the clergy and aristocracy have made a severe attack upon the persons whom they employ and servants who dare to worship in or send their children to Protestant schools or churches. Hundreds of poor men and women have thus suffered for their faith." The Earl of Derby has consented to receive a deputation relative to the persecution of Protestants in Spain.

—The terms proposed by England as a settlement of the Servian difficulty are stated to include an unconditional armistice, a restoration of the condition of affairs which prevailed in Servia and Montenegro previous to the war, with a territorial extension for the latter province, and a liberal provision for local autonomy in Bosnia, Herzegovina, and Bulgaria. Dispatches say that England's basis for pacification will fall through. The Russians are determined to carry on the war at any cost. The truce, which ends at midnight, will be followed by the immediate resumption of hostilities. Preparations were making here this morning for a continuance of war, glaringly at variance with the efforts to make peace."——Belgrade correspondence says a great war demonstration was made Saturday on the occasion of the presentation to the legion of Russian cavalry of a banner sent to Servia from Moscow. Prince Milan and the Bishop of Belgrade took part in the ceremonies. The legion is a fine body of men, evidently old soldiers. If the 10,000 Russians who have now arrived are like these volunteers, the Turks will have to meet a foe different from that hitherto encountered. These men started for the front Sunday morning. A Russian General, whose name cannot be revealed, is to command the army of the Drina, and Col. Becker will command the army of the Ibar. When these changes are effected, not a single Servian will remain in a chief command.

—Severe storms visited all the Atlantic coast early last week. At Philadelphia on Monday, during the storm, some of the glass of the windows of the Main Exhibition Building and Machinery Hall was forced out, causing considerable damage to exhibits, chiefly British and American. The government and several of the State buildings were also damaged, but to no serious extent. A portion of the roof of the Transcontinental Hotel, situated near the Exhibition grounds, was carried away, Considerable damage was done in New York, Boston, and other eastern cities. Much good has yet resulted, as the drought preceding is said to be the most severe known for fifty years in many localities.

—Four more of the robbers of the Northfield, Minn., Bank were captured last Friday. Forced by hunger they called at a farm house a few miles from Madelia, Watonwan Co., and were suspected by a lad of 17 named Sunborn, who mounted a plow-horse and rode to town for help. A posse soon set out with the sheriff, the robbers were overtaken and a running fire was kept up until they were brought to bay, when, after a hot fire they surrendered. One was shot dead, two were severely and one slightly wounded. Two of the gang were killed in the streets of Northfield, and two more are hotly pursued in Dakota. They are the famous James and Younger brothers who have long been a terror to banks and express companies in Missouri and Kansas.

UNREADY.

BY FELIX R. BRUNOT.

I am hammering at the anvil,
I am holding at the plow;
O Death! I hear your summons,
But I cannot heed it now;
Know you not that stocks are rising?
See you not I'm pushing on—
Buying, building, scheming, thriving?
Half my life work not yet done.

Day by day the spikes are driven,
Day by day the rails go down;
When the work and worry's closed,
Mine the riches and renown,
Then—but waiting for the grasping—
Civic honors loom before:
I must win them—when I wear them,
Death, I'll drop the laboring oar.

No! I cannot heed your summons;
See you not I've work to do?
When my three-score years are over,
Then, O Death, I'll think of you:
Then I'll listen to your calling,
Rid my soul of every load:
Gird me ready for my journey,
Trim my lamp and mark the road.

Lightly, then, I'll reach the river,
Stoutly breast the rolling tide—
Oh! give time to face the Judgment,
Waiting on the other side!
When—ah! how your bony fingers,
Strain my heart-strings, chill my brow—
Death! O grasp me not so rigidly—Wait until—Death answers—Now!

* * * * * * *

Grant, O God, may I be ready
When thy messenger shall come,
Though the iron still be shapeless,
Though the plow be in the loam;
Whatsoe'er my earthly losses,
Whatsoe'er life's blessings be;
May my triumphs and my crosses,
Bring me nearer, Lord, to thee.

Thou canst make the awful summons,
Angel's whispers to mine ears;
Chilling blood and breaking heart-strings,
Thrills of joy if thou art near!
Waiting, working, praying, hoping,
While the shadows creep apace;
Clinging to thee—resting on thee,
Death is but thy crowning grace.

NAPOLEON ON THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST.

Canon Liddon, in his Bampton Lectures for 1866, gives, with the authority for it, the following account of Bonaparte's sentiments on this subject, expressed in St. Helena: "When conversing, as was his habit, about the great men of the ancient world, and comparing himself with them, he turned, it is said, to Count de Montholon with the inquiry, 'Can you tell me who Jesus Christ was?' The question was declined, and Napoleon proceeded. 'Well, then, I will tell you. Alexander, Cæsar, Charlamagne and myself have founded great empires, but upon what did these creations of our genius depend? Upon force. Jesus alone founded his empire upon love, and to this very day millions would die for him. . . . I think I understand something of human nature, and I tell you all these were men, and I am a man; none else is like him; Jesus Christ was more than a man. I have inspired multitudes with such an enthusiastic devotion that they would have died for me, but to do this it was necessary that I should be visibly present, with the electric influence of my looks, of my words, of my voice. When I saw men and spoke to them, I lighted up the flame of self-devotion in their hearts. . . . Christ alone has succeeded in so raising the mind of man toward the Unseen, that he becomes insensible to the barriers of time and space. Across a chasm of eighteen hundred years Jesus Christ makes a demand, which beyond all others it is difficult to satisfy. He asks for that which a philosopher may often seek in vain at the hands of his friends, or a father of his children, or a bride of her spouse, or a man of his brother—he asks for the human heart; he asks to have it entirely to himself; he demands it unconditionally, and forthwith his demand is granted. Wonderful! In defiance of time and space, the soul of man, with all its power and faculties, becomes an annexation of the empire of Christ. All who believe on him experience that remarkable, supernatural love toward him. This phenomenon is unaccountable; it is altogether beyond the scope of man's creative powers. Time, the great destroyer, is powerless to extinguish the sacred flame; time can neither exhaust nor limit its range. This it is which strikes me most; I have often thought of it. This it is which proves to me convincingly the Divinity of Jesus Christ.

THE LORD'S DAY AND THE CHILDREN.

A Christian lady finds that unpleasant Sabbaths can be well improved by the children at home, and sends her plan for a help to others to an exchange:

But when the Sabbath was too stormy for such young children to be out, it was all right if mamma remained with them and had a little meeting at home, in which they all took a part, sometimes conducting the exercises themselves. Between the hours of worship the time was made pleasant in this way: They each had what they called a Sunday box, in which was placed all books, papers, pictures, cards, &c., that were suitable for Sabbath enjoyment, that had been given them since their infancy. These were carefully put away out of sight all the week, and as a result were always new on the "Sunny day." These treasures, with much singing and family worship, in which the little one took an active part, each also in turn asking the blessing at the table—which they seemed to think a special favor—made the Sabbath a little heaven. But the secret, O parents! to my mind, is loving the day ourselves more than any other, and so making it delightful to all around us.

SYMPATHY BETWEEN PARENTS AND CHILDREN.

Among many suggestive and interesting things in that clever and readable book—Life and Letters of Lord Macaulay—which so many are reading with an interest that the last novel does not excite, are glimpses of the private life of the great author. His attachment for his sisters, whose society gave him so much pleasure, was very lovely. Their interest in his literary and political success was but a just reciprocation of his kindness. His expressions of fondness for the reliance upon his sisters are numerous and touching; and one loves to peep behind the curtain, and see the man who has done more than any modern writer for English literature in the unreserve of cordial intercourse, free from the intrusive interruptions of the curious and the selfish.

The devotion of Lord Macaulay to his father was most beautiful; and we are glad to learn more of the worth and scrupulous conscientiousness of Zachary Macaulay, who was the co-laborer of Wilberforce, and elicited such a noble eulogy from Mr. Gladstone in the House of Commons. Without deducting "one jot or title" from the merits of Zachary Macaulay, may there not be drawn from his life a practical lesson, which will be beneficial to parents? Between father and son there was a strong regard. During the crisis of the West India Bill,-to the earnest remonstrances of his colleagues Macaulay replied, "I cannot go counter to my father. He has devoted his whole life to the question, and I cannot grieve him by giving way when he wishes me to stand firm;" and yet personally there was but scanty sympathy between father and son. Parental pride and love, and filial respect and reverence and obedience were not successful in bringing the two into intimate companionship. The letters to sisters are full of love, playful confidence, brotherly unreserve, of hopes and fears, of disappointments and successes, but we have no letters between father and son showing like sympathy and communion.

The ease of these two distinguished persons is not exceptional. There are not a few families where a like reserve exists between parents and children. Reference is not made to families whose parents are harsh and exacting, and children are disobedient and unlovely, but to families where real love is felt on both sides. Most persons can call up instances where parents are over indulgent and children are affectionate, but where there is a sad constraint in intercourse, a deplorable lack of familiarity. On the other hand, in pleasant contrast, are families where, while there is no want of deferential respect, the parents are familiar and communicative, and the children easy and unconstrained. Information is given, questions are asked, opinions are interchanged, current topics are discussed with the utmost freedom, and home has all the attractions with which poetry invests that sacred place. The greatest luxury of Sydney Smith is said to have been his wife and daughters laughing for two or three hours every day. Not a few homes can be recalled where this hilarity may not have obtained, but where father, mother, sons and daughters lived in sweetest confidence, where sons had few "secrets" from the father, and to the mother the daughters went first and without embarassment to talk over everything that concerned present plans or future prospects. Parental government existed in fullest justice and impartiality, but was so tempered by prudence and love that squeamish modesty or false bashfulness never came between those who were most interested in each other's welfare and happiness.

Are not children, in such families, better educated, more intelligently guided, more wisely disciplined? "May not religion be there a household joy, an enveloping accompaniment like the atmosphere? Where such mutual sympathy and loving companionship exist, are not children the sooner taught self-reliance and individual responsibility, and the better fitted for life's duties and trials?"—*S. S. THE BLESSING OF GOOD WIVES.

"No companion so valuable and safe can a man have as a discreet and godly wife. It is her province and care to make her home neat and attractive in appearance, genial, sweet and healthy in atmosphere—the place to which her husband shall turn with glad and longing heart. It is her aim to be in person and manner so engaging, in spirits so fresh, in affection so genuine and true, in thought so elevated and pure, that he shall seek her companionship with never-failing zest and joy. And it is by such companionship that a sweet and refined woman moulds and fashions her husband to a grace and worth to him attainable in no other way. Her delicate sensibility seizes upon, and unconsciously elevates his æsthetic nature. He grows up towards her standard of good taste. The purity of her thought abashes his vulgarity. The gentleness of her spirit woos the slumbering nobility of his nature to the forefront of life, and makes him great in the strength of manly tenderness. Her piety, more simple, trustful and steadfast than his, sweetly holds him to truth, to duty, and to God. Her grace of manner gently smooths away his masculine roughness and angularity. A most mighty wielder of the moral pruning knife is a judicious wife. One by one, eccentricities and rudeness from the outer life, excrescences and vicious growths from the inner life are cut away, until the man, in character and conduct, is rounded and complete.—The Monday Club.

WHERE ARE YOUR SOLDIERS.

I have read of a certain regiment ordered to march into a small town (in the Tyrol, I think), and take it. It chanced that the place was settled by a colony, who believed the Gospel of Christ, and proved their faith by works. A courier from a neighboring village informed them that troops were advancing to take the town. They quietly answered, "If they will take it, they must." Soldiers soon came riding in, with colors flying and fifes piping shrill defiance. They looked around for an enemy, and saw the farmer at his plow, the blacksmith at his anvil, and the women at their churns and spinning wheels. Babies crowded around to hear the music, and the boys ran out to see the pretty trainers, with feathers and bright buttons, the harlequins of the nineteenth century.

Of course, none of these were in a proper position to be shot at.

"Where are your soldiers?" asked they.

"We have none," was the brief reply.

"But we have come to take the town."

"Well, friends, it lies before you."

"But is there here nobody to fight?"

"No; we are all Christians."

Here was an emergency altogether unprovided for by military schools. This was a sort of resistance which no bullet could hit, a fortress perfectly bomb-proof. The commander was perplexed.

"If there is nobody to fight with, of course we cannot fight," said he. "It is impossible to take such a town as this."

So he ordered his horses heads to be turned about, and they carried the human animals out of the village as guiltless as when they entered, and perchance somewhat wiser. —Selected.

Pride.

"How foolish, how absurd, how ruinous, how blindly destructive of its own object does pride appear! By attempting to soar it only plunges itself into the mire; and while endeavoring to erect for itself a throne it undermines the ground on which it stands, and digs its own grave. It plunged Satan from heaven to hell; it banished our first parents from paradise, and it will, in a similar manner, ruin all who indulge in it. It keeps us in ignorance of God, shuts us out from his favor, prevents us from resembling him, deprives us, in this world, of all the honor and happiness which communion with him would confer; and in the next, unless previously hated, repented of and renounced, will bar forever against us the door of heaven, and close upon us the gates of hell. O, then, my friends, beware, above all things, beware of pride. Beware lest you indulge it imperceptibly; for it is, perhaps, of all sins, the most secret, subtile and insinuating. That you may detect it, remember, that he only, who seeks after God in his appointed way, is humble; and that all who neglect thus to seek him, are most certainly proud in heart, and, consequently, an abomination unto the Lord.—Payson.

The Song of the Minutes.

We are but minutes, little things,
Each one furnished with sixty wings,
With which we fly on our unseen track,
And not a minute ever comes back.

We are but minutes, each one bears
All its burdens of joys and cares;
Then calmly bear minutes filled with pain—
The worst of minutes cannot remain.

We are but minutes—use us well.
For our use we must tone day tell;
Who uses minutes has hours to use:
Who loses minutes—years must lose.

A Turkish Boy.

A missionary lady in Asiatic Turkey thus tells of the self-denial of a little boy in that land:

"One of our Protestant neighbors has a son, about twelve years old, named Arshag. Yesterday morning, while reading his little Armenian paper, the Avedaper (Bringer of Good Tidings), of the sufferings of the poor, starving children in the famine-stricken region, he turned to his father, and said:

"'Father, how much may I eat to-day?'

"His father, who is not a poor man, replied:

"'Three piasters' worth,' that is, twelve cents' worth,

"'Well,' Arshag said, 'I intend to fast to-day, and give the money to these poor, hungry children.'

"'No, no,' the father said; 'eat as usual, and you shall have the money all the same.'

"'But that will not answer the purpose,' the boy persisted; and he declined to eat with the others.

"'During the day tea was prepared and passed around; but Arshag refused to drink his, saying:

"'I wish to sell my cup.'

"His grown-up brother inquired for how much he would sell it.

"'For a piaster,' he replied.

"So Alexan gave him the money (four cents); and now he has sixteen cents to give to this good cause. It is no question with me which will be the more blessed, the giver or the receiver."

The man who told me this story said:

"I feel condemned. I keep saying to myself, Can I not give up smoking for a week, if this little boy can go hungry for a whole day?"—S. S. Visitor.

Can't Help It.

"My dear," said Mrs. Barney to her little Johnny, "why are you so careless about your lessons? Your teacher tells me that they are almost always imperfect."

"Mamma, I can't help it," was Johnny's reply, in a cross, impatient tone.

"You mustn't speak to me in that way," answered his mother, reprovingly.

"Well, I can't help it! I'm sick of hearing about the old lessons."

"Can't help it! Ah, little Johnny, do you know that Can't-help-it is a monster worse than any you have ever read about in your books of fairies and giants?"

"What do you mean?" asked Johnny, at once interested.

"I mean that if you let Can't-help-it have his own way, everything beautiful in your life will be spoiled. Can't-help-it grows stronger and fiercer every time you yield to him; and by and by he will be stronger than you are."

"But he isn't a monster that I can see."

"No, you can not see your soul, and you can not see the enemies that try to hurt your soul; neither can you see your soul's true friends."

"What are my soul's friends?"

"I-will-help-it is one of them, and a strong, good friend, too."

Johnny's attention was aroused by the idea of a monster prowling around his soul, and as he had a good deal of imagination, the picture he had made of him in his mind was not at all pleasant. So after thinking a long time very seriously, he went to his mother's side, and said: "Mamma, I will try to keep off the ugly old giant; but what shall I do if he rushes upon me?"

"Call I-will-help-it to drive him off. He is a good giant and is far stronger than the bad one; but you must remember that the good giant will wait for you to call him, while the bad one comes of his own accord."

"That isn't fair," said Johnny.

"Isn't it?" replied his mother, smiling. "Well, if it isn't fair we must make it fair. Wait till Can't-help-it is so beaten that he doesn't dare show his face and then see!"

Johnny ran away with a face expressive of great determination. He had a hard lesson to learn in mental arithmetic, and said to himself that he would show old Can't-help-it what a boy could do when he really tried. He was sadly tempted to be idle, but he thought of the giant, and said, "I will! I will!" and commenced studying with all his might. He learned his lesson perfectly; his teacher praised him; his mother was pleased; and he felt that he had gained one victory over old Can't-help-it.—Ex.

Sagacity of Elephants.

Howe's circus was showing at Indianola, Iowa, when the storm of July 4th came on, and because of injury to the railroads, was compelled to remain there until the track was temporarily repaired, Friday evening. Then the circus started for their next place of exhibition. When about eight miles out, one corner of the bridge gave away, and five cars containing animals, ran off the track and turned over into the mud very gently. The first car contained horses, the second an elk and camel, the other three the five elephants. The small animals were easily liberated, but the elephants were all in a heap. To remove them the car was cut away, exposing the tops of the unwieldy animals' backs. Then was exhibited the intelligence which marks these half human brutes. They obey every command of the keeper, crawling on their knees, turning on their sides, squirming like eels, and assuming more wonderful and novel positions than was described on the show bills.

When released from their perilous position, there was not a scratch upon them, and no school-boy ever gave more emphatic expression of relief from confinement than did those five elephants. They trumpeted, swayed back and forth, and did everything but talk. The remaining distance to the city was made overland, and a happier crew never started on than were those animals. The cool, breezy atmosphere, and the bright moonlight were all-inspiring. As the bridges were gone at each stream, the elephants took fresh enjoyment of their liberty. At no time were they obstinate or disobedient, but seemed to realize the situation.

On arriving at Des Moines, railroad cars had to be procured, which was not easily done, as ordinary cars are too low. Some were finally found, which were about one inch higher than the tallest elephant's back. They were brought alongside and the platform properly placed, when "Jack" noticed that it was a strange car, and seized the door frame with his trunk, gave it a vigorous shake and then tried the floor. Satisfied that it was strong, he marched slowly in the car, placed himself lengthwise, gave a rocking motion, and humped up his back. A bolt overhead hit his back, and he marched straight out of the car. "It's no use," said the keeper, "he won't go back there again." The ribs which supported the roof were removed, the elephants closely watching the operation. When this was done, "Jack" went in, swayed the car, humped his back, found everything all right, trumpeted his satisfaction, and went to eating.—Davenport (Iowa) Democrat.

The Great Statue of Liberty. —Some time ago some liberty-loving French gentlemen thought it would be a fine present to America, this Centennial year, to erect a great statue to Liberty on our shores. It would always be a token of the noble part taken by LaFayette in our Revolutionary struggle. This statue will serve as a light-house also, and will be erected near the entrance to New York harbor. An idea of the immensity of this statue may be gained from a description of the hand and wrist of the figure, which have arrived in New York. The thumb, which partly encircles the torch that is to serve as a light-house beacon, is a truly gigantic member. On the thumb nail alone a man of several hundred pounds avoirdupois might find a roomy seat. As for the arm below the elbow and opening into the palm of the hand, three men of ordinary statue might walk abreast within its interior. It is said that inside the upper and broader part of the arm above the elbow, as many as nine men can be comfortably accommodated; and that the shoulders are over 43 feet broad and the head 23 feet high from chin to crown. This fragmentary part is made of bronzed copper, about a sixteenth of an inch in thickness. It is in fine, evenly rolled plates, riveted and screwed together in the firmest and most elaborate manner. The completed statue will be about 120 feet in height, from the crown of the head to the sole of the foot, the elevation of the pedestal being perhaps a third of the altitude of the statue. It is understood that a staircase will be placed within the right arm, by which ascent can be made to a balcony running around the edge of the flambeau. The height of the complete arm is thirty-five feet. Of course the statue is upright. The left arm is bent so as to enfold and hold lightly toward the body a set of tablets upon which the Declaration of Independence is supposed to be inscribed. The head is surrounded by a diadem, from which projects a circlet of prongs that catch the sun's rays and construct a brilliant nimbus of glory out of them. Its estimated cost is $125,000, half of which has already been subscribed. Both pedestgl and statue will be completed in two years from now, and it will be the joint enterprise of France and America.

THE AMERICAN PARTY NOMINATIONS FOR 1876.

FOR PRESIDENT
JAMES B. WALKER,
OF ILLINOIS.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT
DONALD KIRKPATRICK,
OF NEW YORK.

The platform was revised and adopted at Pittsburgh, Pa., in June, 1875. It contains the following live issues:

1st. Christianity against infidelity and heathenism.
2d. A proper observance of the Sabbath.
3d Prohibition of intoxicating liquors as a beverage.
4th. The withdrawal of Masonic charters and prohibition of Masonic oaths.
5th. Civil Rights.
6th. Arbitration better than war.
7th. The Bible in schools.
8th. Monopolies discountenanced.
9th. A return to specie payments
10th. Maintenance of public credit: protection of loyal citizens; justice to Indians.
11th. A direct vote for President and Vice-president.

THE AMERICAN PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage, is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. The charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate

6 That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8 That land and other monopolies should be discountenanced.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency, and a return to specie payment as soon as practicable.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And finally we demand for the Americanpeople the abolition of the Electoral Colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

PROHIBITION PARTY.

The Prohibition Reform party of these United States, organized in the name of the people, to revive, enforce, and perpetuate in the Government the doctrines of the Declaration of Independence, submit, in this Centennial year of the Republic, for the suffrages of all good citizens, the following platform of national reforms and measures:

1. The legal prohibition in the District of Columbia, the Territories, and in every other place subject to the laws of Congress, of the importation, exportation, manufacture, and traffic of all alcoholic beverages, as high crimes against society; an amendment of the National Constitution to render these prohibitory measures universal and permanent, and the adoption of treaty stipulations with foreign powers to prevent the importation and exportation of all alcoholic beverages.

2. The abolition of class legislation and of special privileges in the Government, and the adoption of equal suffrage and eligibility to office, without distinction of race, religious creed, property, or sex.

3. The appropriation of the public lands in limited quantities to actual settlers only; the reduction of the rates of inland and ocean postage, of telegraphic communication, of railroad and water transportation and travel to the lowest practical point, by force of laws wisely and justly framed with reference not only to the interests of capital employed but to the higher claims of the general good.

4. The suppression by law of lotteries and gambling in gold, stocks, produce, and every form of money and property, and the penal inhibition of the use of the public mails for advertising schemes of gambling and lotteries.

5. The abolition of those foul enormities, polygamy and the social evil, and protection of the purity, peace, and happiness of homes by ample and efficient legislation.

6. The national observance of the Christian Sabbath established by laws prohibiting ordinary labor and business in all departments of public service and private employments (works of necessity, charity, and religion excepted) on that day.

7. The establishment by mandatory provisions in the national and State constitutions, and by all necessary legislation, of a system of free public schools for the universal and enforced education of all the youth of the land.

8. The free use of the Bible, not as a ground of religious creeds, but as a text book of purest morality, the best liberty, and the noblest literature in our public schools, that our children may grow up in its light, and that its spirit and principles may pervade our nation.

9. The separation of the Government in all of its departments and institutions, including the public schools and all funds for their maintenance, from the control of every religious sect or other association, and the protection alike of all sects by equal laws, with entire freedom of religious faith and worship.

10. The introduction into all treaties hereafter negotiated with foreign governments, of a provision for the amicable settlement of international difficulties by arbitration.

11. The abolition of all barbarous modes and instruments of punishment. The recognition of the laws of God and the claims of humanity in the discipline of jails and prisons, and of that higher and wiser civilization, worthy of our age and nation, which regards the reform of criminals as a means for the prevention of crime.

12. The abolition of executive and legislative patronage, and the election of President, Vice President, United States Senators, and of all civil officers, so far as practicable, by direct vote of the people.

13. The practice of a friendly and liberal policy to emigrants from all nations, the guarantee to them of ample protection, and of equal rights and privileges.

14. The separation of the money of Government from all banking institutions. The national Government only should exercise the high prerogative of issuing paper money, and that should be subject to prompt redemption on demand, in gold and silver, the only equal standards of value recognized by the civilized world.

15. The reduction of the salaries of public officers in a just ratio with the decline of wages and market prices, the abolition of sinecures, unnecessary offices, and official fees and perquisities; the practice of strict economy in government expenses, and a free and thorough investigation into any and all alleged abuses of public trust.

THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

The National Republican Convention at Cincinnati adopted the following platform:

When, in the economy of Providence, this land was to be purged of human slavery, and when the strength of the Government of the people, by the people, and for the people, was to be demonstrated, the Republican party came into power. Its deeds have passed into history, and we look back to them with pride. Incited by their memories to high aims for the good of our country and mankind, and looking to the future with unfaltering courage, hope, and purpose, we, the representatives of the party, in national convention assembled, make the following declaration of principles:

1. The United States of America is a nation, not a league. By the combined workings of the national and state governments, under their respective constitutions, the rights of every citizen are secured at home, and protected abroad, and the common welfare promoted.

2. The Republican party has preserved these governments to the hundreth anniversary of the nation's birth; and they are now embodiments of the great truths spoken at its cradle—that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, among which are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness; that for the attainment of these ends governments have been instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. Until these truths are cheerfully obeyed, or, if need be, vigorously enforced, the work of the Republican party is unfinished.

3. The permanent pacification of the southern section of the Union, and the complete protection of all its citizens in the free enjoyment of all their rights and duties, to which the Republican party stands sacredly pledged.

The power to provide for the enforcement of the principles embodied in the recent constitutional amendments in the Congress of the United States, and we declare it to be the solemn obligation of the legislative and executive departments of the Government to put into immediate and vigorous exercise all their constitutional powers for removing any just causes of discontent on the part of any class, and for securing to every American citizen complete liberty and exact equality in the exercise of all civil, political, and public rights. To this end we imperatively demand a Congress and a chief executive whose courage and fidelity to these duties shall not falter till these results are placed beyond dispute or recall.

4. In the first act of Congress signed by President Grant, the national Government assumed to remove any doubts as to its purpose to discharge all just obligations to the public creditors, and "solemnly pledged" its faith to make provision at the earliest practicable period for the resumption of the United States notes in coin. Commercial prosperity, public, moral and national credit, demand that the promise be fulfilled by a continuous and steady progress to specie payment.

5. Under the Constitution, the President and heads of department; are to make nominations for offices: the Senate is to advise and consent to appointments, and the House of Representatives is to accuse and prosecute faithless officers. The best interests of the public service demand that these distinctions be respected; that Senators and Representatives who may be judges and accusers should not dictate appointments to office. The invariable rule in appointments should have reference to the honesty, fidelity and capacity of the appointees, giving to the party in power those places where harmony and vigor of administration require its policy to be represented, but permitting all others to be filled by persons selected with sole reference to the efficiency to the public service, and the right of all citizens to share in the honor of rendering public service to the country.

6. We rejoice in the quickened conscience of the people concerning political affairs, and will hold all public officers to a rigid responsibility, and engage that the prosecution and punishment of all who betrayed official trusts shall be swift, thorough and unsparing.

7. The public school system of the several States is the bulwark of the American Republic, and, with a view to its security and permanence, we recommend an amendment to the Constitution of the United States forbidding the appropriation of any public funds or property for the benefit of any schools or institutions under sectarian control.

8. The revenue necessary for current expenditures and the obligations of the public debt must be largely derived from duties upon importations, which, as far as possible, should be adjusted to promote the interests of American labor, and advance the prosperity of the whole country.

9. We re-affirm our opposition to further grants of the public lands to corporations and monopolies, and demand that the national domain be devoted to free homes for the people.

10. It is the imperative duty of the Government so to modify the existing treaties with the European governments that the same protection shall be afforded to the adopted American citizen that is given to the native-born, and that all necessary laws should be passed to protect emigrants, in the absence of power in the States for that purpose.

11. It is the immediate duty of Congress to fully investigate the effect of immigration and importation of Mongolians upon the moral and material interests of the country.

12. The Republican party recognizes with approval the substantial advance recently made toward the establishment of equal rights to women by the many important amendments effected by Republican legislatures in the laws which concern the personal and property relations of wives, mothers, and widows, and by the appointment and election of women to the superintendence of education, charities, and other public trusts. The honest demands of this class of citizens for additional rights and privileges, and immunities should be treated with respectful consideration.

13. The Constitution confers upon Congress sovereign power over the territories of the United States for their government, and in the exercise of this power it is the right and the duty of Congress to prohibit and extirpate in the territories that relic of barbarism, Polygamy; and we demand such legislation as shall serve this end and the supremacy of American institutions in all the territories.

14. The pledges which the nation has given to our soldiers and sailors must be fulfilled. The grateful people will always hold those who perilled their lives for the country's preservation in the kindest remembrance.

15. We sincerely deprecate all sectional feeling and tendencies. We therefore note, with deep solicitude, that the Democratic party counts as its chief hope of success upon the electoral vote of a united South secured through the efforts of those who were recently arrayed against the nation, and we invoke the earnest attention of the country to the grave truth that a success thus achieved would re-open sectional strife and imperil national honor and human rights.

16. We charge the Democratic party as being the same in character and spirit as when it sympathized with treason, with making its control of the House of Representatives the triumph and opportunity of the nation's recent foes, with reasserting and applauding in the national capitol the sentiments of unrepented rebellion, with sending Union soldiers to the rear and promoting Confederate soldiers to the front, with deliberately proposing to repudiate the plighted faith of the Government, with being equally false and imbecile upon the overshadowing financial question, with thwarting the ends of justice by its partisan mismanagement and obstructions of investigation, with proving itself through the period of its ascendancy in the lower house of Congress utterly incompetent to administer the government. We warn the country against trusting a party thus alike unworthy, recreant and incapable.

17. The national administration merits commendation for its honorable work in the management of domestic and foreign affairs, and President Grant deserves the continued and hearty gratitude of the American people for his patriotism and his immense services in war and in peace.

The Independent Greenback Party.

The following is the platform of the Independent Party, as adopted by its National Convention at Indianapolis:

"The Independent Party is called into existence by the necessities of the people, whose industries are prostrated and whose labor is deprived of its just reward as the result of the serious mismanagement of the national finances, which errors both the Republican and Democratic parties neglect to correct. In view of the failure of these parties to furnish relief to the depressed industries of the country, thereby disappointing the just hopes and expectations of a suffering people, we declare our principles and invite all independent and patriotic men to join our ranks in this movement for financial reform and industrial emancipation.

"First: We demand the immediate and unconditional repeal of the specie resumption Act of January 14, 1875, and the rescue of our industries from the disaster and ruin resulting from its enforcement, and we call upon all patriotic men to organize in every Congressional district of the country, with the view of electing Representatives to Congress who will legislate for, and a Chief Magistrate who will carry out the wishes of the people in this regard, and thus stop the present suicidal and destructive policy of contraction.

"Second: We believe that United States Notes issued directly by the Government and convertible on demand into United States obligations, bearing an equitable rate of interest (not exceeding one cent a day on each one hundred dollars), and interchangeable with United States Notes at par will afford the best circulating medium ever devised; such United States Notes should be a full legal tender for all purposes, except for the payment of such obligations as are by existing contracts expressly made payable in coin. And we hold that it is the duty of the Government to provide such a circulating medium, and we insist, in the language of Thomas Jefferson, 'that bank paper must be suppressed and the circulation restored to the nation to whom it belongs.'

"Third: It is the paramount duty of the Government in all its legislation to keep in view the full development of all legitimate business, agricultural, mining, manufacturing and commercial.

"Fourth: We most earnestly protest against any further issue of gold bonds, for sale in foreign markets, by means of which we would be made for a longer period hewers of wood and drawers of water for foreign nations, especially as the American people would gladly and promptly take at par all the bonds the Government may need to sell, provided they are made payable at the option of the holder, although bearing interest at three and sixty-five one-hundredths per cent. per annum or even a lower rate.

"Fifth: We further protest against the sale of Government bonds for the purpose of buying silver to be used as a substitute for our more convenient and less fluctuating fractional currency, which, although well calculated to enrich the owners of silver mines, yet in operation will still further oppress through taxation an already overburdened people."

The Democratic Party.

THE PLATFORM ADOPTED AT ST. LOUIS.

1st. We, the delegates of the Democratic party of the United States, in National Convention assembled, do hereby declare the administration of the Federal Government to be in urgent need of immediate reform, do hereby enjoin upon the nominees of this Convention and of the Democratic party in each State, a zealous effort and co-operation to this end; and do hereby appeal to our fellow-citizens of every former political connection to undertake with us this first and most pressing patriotic duty.

2d. For the Democracy of the whole country we do hereby reaffirm our faith in the permanence of the Federal Union; our devotion to the Constitution of the United States, with its amendments universally accepted, with a final settlement of the controversies that engendered civil war; and do hereby record our steadfast confidence in the perpetuity of republican self-government; in absolute acquiesence in the will of the majority — the vital principle of republics — in the supremacy of the civil over the military authority; in the total separation of church and state for the sake alike of civil and religious freedom; in the equality of all citizens before just laws of their own enactment; in the liberty of individual conduct unvexed by sumptuary laws; in the faithful education of the rising generation that they may preserve, enjoy, and transmit these best conditions of human happiness and hope. We behold the noblest products of a hundred years of changeful history. But, while upholding the bond of our Union and great charter of these our rights, it behooves a free people to practice also that eternal vigilance which is the price of liberty.

3d. Reform is necessary, to rebuild and establish in the hearts of the whole people of the Union, eleven years ago happily rescued from the danger of a secession of States, but now to be saved from a corrupt centralism, which, after inflicting upon ten States the rapacity of carpet-bag tyrannies, has honeycombed the offices of the Federal Government itself with incapacity, waste and fraud; infected the States and municipalities with the contagion of misrule; and locked fast the prosperity of an industrious people in the paralysis of "hard times."

4th. Reform is necessary, to establish a sound currency, restore the public credit, and maintain the national honor. We denounce the failure for all these eleven years of peace to make good the promise of the legal tender notes, which are a changing standard of value in the hands of the people, and the nonpayment of which is a disregard of the plighted faith of the nation.

5th. We denounce the improvidence, which, in eleven years of peace, has taken from the people, in federal taxes, thirteen times the whole amount of the legal-tender notes and squandered four times their sum in useless expense, without accumulating any reserve for their redemption.

6th. We denounce the financial imbecility and immorality of that party which, during eleven years of peace, has made no advance toward resumption, but instead has obstructed resumption, by wasting our resources and exhausting all our surplus income, and while annually professing to intend a speedy return to specie payments, has annually enacted fresh hindrances thereto. As such a hindrance, we denounce the resumption clause of the act of 1875, and demand its repeal.

7th. We demand a judicious system of preparation, by public economies, by official retrenchments, and by wise finance, which shall enable the nation soon to assure the whole world of its perfect ability and its perfect readiness to meet any of its promises at the call of the creditor entitled to payment. We believe such a system, well devised, and, above all, entrusted to competent hands for execution, creating at no time an artificial scarcity of currency, and at no time alarming the public mind into a withdrawal of that vast machinery of credit by which ninety-five per cent. of all our business transactions are performed — a system open and public and inspiring general confidence — would, from the day of its adoption, bring healing on its wings to all our harrassed industries, set in motion the wheels of commerce, manufactures and the mechanic arts, restore employment to labor, and renew in all its natural sources the prosperity of the people.

8th. Reform is necessary in the sum and modes of federal taxation, to the end that capital may be set free from distrust, and labor lightly burdened. We denounce the present tariff, levied upon nearly four thousand articles, as a master-piece of injustice, inequality and false pretence. It yields a dwindling, not yearly rising revenue. It has impoverished many industries to subsidize a few. It prohibits imports that might purchase the products of American labor. It has degraded American commerce from the first to an inferior rank upon the high seas. It has cut down the sales of American manufactures at home and abroad, and has depleted the returns of American agriculture — an industry followed by half our people. It costs the people five times more than it produces to the treasury; obstructs the process of production and wastes the fruits of labor. It promotes fraud, fosters smuggling, enriches dishonest officials, and bankrupts honest merchants. We demand that all custom-house taxation shall be only for revenue.

9th. Reform is necessary in the scale of public expense, federal, state and municipal. Our federal taxation has swollen from sixty millions gold in 1860 to four hundred and fifty millions currency in 1870. Our aggregate taxation from one hundred and fifty millions gold in 1860 to seven hundred and thirty millions currency in 1870; or in one decade, from less than five dollars per head to more than eighteen dollars per head. Since the peace the people have paid to their tax-gatherers more than thrice the sum of the national debt, and more than twice that sum for the Federal Government alone. We demand a rigorous frugality in every department and from every officer of the government.

10th. Reform is necessary, to put a stop to the profligate waste of public lands and their diversion from actual settlers by the party in power which has squandered two hundred millions of acres upon railroads alone, and out of more than twice that aggregate has disposed of less than a sixth directly to tillers of the soil.

11th. Reform is necessary, to correct the omission of a Republican Congress and the errors of our treaties, and our diplomacy, which have stripped our fellow citizens of foreign birth and kindred race, re crossing the Atlantic, of the shield of American citizenship, and exposed our brethren of the Pacific coast to the incursions of a race not sprung from the same great parent stock, and in fact now by law denied citizenship through naturalization as being neither accustomed to the traditions of a progressive civilization, nor exercised in liberty under equal laws. We denounce the policy which thus discards the liberty-loving German and tolerates the revival of the Coolie trade in Mongolian women, imported for immoral purposes, and Mongolian men held to perform servile labor contracts.

12th. Reform is necessary and can never be effected but by making it the controlling issue of the election and lifting it above the two false issues with which the party in power seek to smother it. First: the false issue with which they would enkindle sectarian strife in respect to the public schools, of which the establishment and support belong exclusively to the several States, and which the Democratic party has cherished from their foundation, and is resolved to maintain without partiality or preference for any class, sect or creed, and without contributions from the treasury to any. Second: The false

HAS BEEN SECURED AND SHOULD NEVER BE EXHAUSTED. A friend has pledged this fund a dollar for every other dollar received, so EVERY NEW SUBSCRIPTION TO THE TRACT FUND COUNTS DOUBLE, and thus $10 00 pays for 20,000 pages of tracts.

The distribution of these tracts has already saved hundreds of young men from the lodge, but there is a great lack of funds to supply the constantly increasing demand for Free Tracts.

During the year ending July 1st, 1875 a little less than 150.000 pages of Cynosnre Tracts were gratuitously sent out, mostly in very small lots. The present demand is fully 100.000 pages per month, but funds are lacking to meet it.

Many of our most earnest workers in this cause of God are poor men, who would be glad to circulate thousands of pages of Antimasonic literature if they could have them free.

SHALL WE NOT HAVE AN INEXHAUSTIBLE TRACT FUND

"THE ANTI-MASONS SCRAP BOOK."

Contains 24 Cynosnre Tracts, bound together and is just the thing to select from. Price 20cents. See advertisement page 15.
